NEARLY FOOT OF SNOW FELL HERE CHRISMAS EVE

Following a couple of weeks of temperature around the zero and below mark and but a couple of inches of snow Klemme and this part of Iowa received its first real heavy snowfal when close to 12 inches fell Christmas eve.

A light snow fall of about 2 inches fell again Sunday night.

FINE JOB OF SNOW REMOVAL ON KLEMME STREETS

Within a few hours after the heavy snow fall, Commissioner Frank Ward took time out from Christmas and began clearing the streets of snow with the town road maintainer, and by evening had the streets open for traffic.

Our town officials did a fine job this year.

COUNTY TREASURER REPORTS TAXES COLLECTED 99.8%

Roy L. McMillin, treasurer of Hancock County reports there was no delinquent tax list published in the county this year as there was no real estate tax unpaid, and only a very small per cent of personal tax was unpaid. Hancock County this year collected 99 8 per cent of the tax for this year.

Mr. McMillin reports that Hancock County holds U S Bonds amounting to $123.000 These were purchased from the permanent school funds and from the farm-to-market road funds.

Hancock County has no outstanding bonds of any kind and the balance on hand compares favorably with other years.

McMillin's office has collected automobile license fees for 1945 amounting to $78 550 The county receives $3.225 00 of this amount for registrations.

Because of increased costs in operating, schools of the county are asking for more funds which will raise the taxes in nearly all districts of the county, especially in the corporations.

Because of the many new drainage districts established, drainage assessments were higher and over $30.000 was collected in that fund reports McMillin.

GOOD NEWS FOR FISH

Customer—Is this a fishing tackle store?

Clerk—Approximately.

Customer—I couldn't tell from the window. It had everything but fishing stuff in it. I'd like to see something in a fishing rod.

Clerk—Who wouldn't?

Customer—You mean you have no rods?

Clerk—There was a fellow who came in here a month ago with a nice rod, but he had a police escort and wouldn't let me handle it.

Customer—Did he want to sell it?

Clerk—No, he was just showing off.

Customer—But the war has been over for months; aren't the fishing rod plants reconverting?

Clerk—Search me.

Customer—What are the factories doing?

Clerk—Whatever they are doing they are not making rods.

Customer—What's delaying them?

Clerk—They tell me it's the bamboo.

Customer—The damned who?

Clerk — Bamboo, bamboo! The Japs had all the bamboo. And it has to be seasoned anyhow before we can use it for rods.

Customer—How's chances for a rod by spring?

Clerk—Not too good.

Customer—What'll we fishermen do?

Clerk—It looks as if you'd just have to go on losing fish.

Customer—There used to be auctions of fishing equipment left in the estates of sportsmen.

Clerk—Not any more. If a man dies today and leaves a rod it constitutes a big estate and is confiscated.

Customer—What if he also leaves a reel?

Clerk—It means a contest by all the heirs.

Customer—I suppose if the estate included 300 yards of good line it would go to the Supreme court.

Clerk—Right.

Customer—Well, I'm sorry to bother you.

Clerk—No bother and we always like to see a man come into the store these days. There's always the possibility he may have a used rod to put in on commission. Like to look in our showcases while you're here?

Customer—Why?

Clerk—Darned if I know!

The cottage chees adds savory flavor to these fried odles when it is allowed to melt ov them before serving. Broiled tomoes with parsley are an attractivegarnish.

Are you one of thoe homemakers who finds herself wi a refrigerator full of leftovers and does not know what to do? Yes, I know it is sometimes difficult to disguise these bits of turkey or chicken or roast, but glance at some of these recipes I'm giving you today! They'll prove to yu that even the leftovers can be paltable.

If you have had a arge roast, then serve all the meat from it sliced, until you get down o the bones and can cut off meat ely in chunks or bits. Then go to wok with your eggs, milk, etc., and mke something out of it. Even the bnes can be used as a base for delicious soup, after the meat is gone. on't feed the garbage pail with ric tidbits that can really be good eting.

Chicke Loaf.
(Serve 6 to 8)

2 cups hot mil (or stock and cream)
2 eggs or 3 eg yolks, slightly beaten
1 cup soft bread crumbs
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon paprika
3 cups diced cooked chicken (or turkey)
½ cup chopped celery
1 green pepper, chopped
1½ tablespoons lemon juice

Pour hot mik slowly onto eggs, stirring constantly. Add remaining ingredients, mix well and pour into a buttered mol. Bake in slow (300-degree) oven until knife inserted into the center comes out clean which is about 45 to 60 minutes. Be careful not to overbake Serve with mushroom sauce.

Chicken Turnovers.
(Serves 4)

1½ cups minced cooked chicken
¾ cup thick white sauce
1 tablespoon minced parsley
1 recipe pastry
1 egg white

Combine chicken, white sauce and parsley. Roll pastry to ⅛ inch thickness, cut into squares and brush with egg white. Place two tablespoons of the chicken mixture on each square, fold over and press edges together with a fork. Place on a baking sheet. Prick upper crust to allow for escape of steam. Bake in a very hot oven (450 degrees) until browned. Serve with gravy or seasoned white sauce.

Sliced leftover meat can always be served cold with a nice but simple hot dish like the following, for example:

Cottage Cheese With Noodles.
(Serves 2 to 3)

2 cups cooked noodles
Salt and pepper

LYNN CHAMBERS' MENU

Sliced Chicken or Turkey
*Cottage Cheese with Noodles
Molded Pear Salad
Biscuits with Honey
Prune-Orange Whip
Beverage

*Recipe given.

3 tablespoons shortening
½ cup cottage cheese
¼ cup chopped peanuts

Drain cooked noodles until almost dry. Sprinkle lightly with salt and pepper. Melt shortening in skillet and brown noodles in it. When noodles are golden brown arrange in serving dish with cottage cheese over them. Top with peanuts. Cover; heat for a few minutes until cheese is melted through the noodles. Serve with whole broiled tomatoes and garnish with parsley.

An excellent way to extend a small amount of leftover roast is to serve it with macaroni. Sour cream is used to add creaminess, and mushrooms add their delicate flavor to this grand leftover dish:

Creamy Macaroni with Meat.
(Serves 6)

1 teaspoon salt
3 quarts boiling water
½ pound elbow macaroni
¼ cup fat
½ cup chopped onion
½ cup sliced mushrooms, if desired
1½ cups ground leftover beef, lamb, pork or chicken
2 teaspoons salt
2 teaspoons paprika
2 tablespoons flour
1½ cups milk
1 cup sour cream
¼ cup chopped parsley
½ cup buttered bread crumbs

Add the salt to the boiling water. Gradually add the macaroni and let boil until macaroni is tender, about 10 minutes. Melt fat in skillet. Add onion, mushrooms and meat. Cook until brown, about 15 minutes. Add the two teaspoons salt, paprika, flour and mix well. Gradually add milk, cream and parsley. Fold in macaroni which has been drained and rinsed. Pour into a two-quart greased casserole. Sprinkle with bread crumbs. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven for about 30 minutes.

It's a good idea to serve something different after the holidays just to add variety to the meals. Then there's nothing like baked beans with brown bread.

Baked Beans.
(Serves 12)

4 cups dry navy beans
½ pound salt pork
1 cup pure, dark molasses
1 teaspoon dry mustard
1 tablespoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
3 cups boiling water (from simmered beans)

Do something different during the after-holiday season, and serve home-baked beans with brown bread. A bean pot or a three-quart casserole will be enough for serving 12 people.

Wash, pick over beans and soak for three hours in boiling water to cover. Cover and bring to boil in same water to preserve minerals and vitamins, adding extra water if needed to cover well. Skim; cook slowly until tender, about 50 minutes. Drain beans, reserving water. Turn beans into bean pot or three-quart casserole. Scrape rind of pork until white, score top by cutting down one inch, and bury in beans with rind exposed. Mix remaining ingredients and pour over. Cover and bake in a slow oven (325 degrees) 3½ hours or until tender, uncovering during last hour of baking. If necessary, add more water during baking.

Brown Bread.

1 cup bread flour
2 teaspoons soda
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup corn meal
1 cup whole wheat flour
¾ cup pure, dark molasses
2 cups sour milk
1 cup raisins or nuts, if desired

Sift flour, soda and salt. Mix with corn meal and whole wheat flour. Mix molasses and sour milk; add dry ingredients. Beat well. If desired, add raisins and nuts. Steam two hours in greased molds, filled ⅔ full and covered tightly.

LYNN SAYS:

Use These Handy Hints: If you happen to have a refrigerator with a special compartment for keeping butter at a spreading consistency, keep only one day's supply in that compartment. Keep the main supply in its original paraffined carton in the main storage section of the refrigerator.

Remember that butter is a delicate food and easily absorbs other flavors in the refrigerator. One way to make sure of the delicious flavor is to make sure it is always kept in a paraffined paper carton.

A piece of stale bread put in water in which onions are boiled will take away most of the odor.

Leftover sausage meat will bring a cheer when used in pancake or waffle batter or in mashed potato cakes.

Syrup left over from spiced fruits makes an excellent basting for ham, pork, veal or lamb roasts.

In the Astor the other midnight Romo Vincent got a big laugh telling pals about the drunk who zigzagged into a bar and ordered a triple martini. . . . After swallowing two of them he decided the bartender was his friend. Reaching into his coat pocket he brought forth a live lobster and offered it to the bartender, who tried refusing it several times. . . . Finally, the bartender decided it would be better to take the damb thing than argue about it.

"Okay," he said, gripping the lobster, "I'll take it home for dinner."

"Oh, no, don't do that!" cried the lush. "He's already had dinner—take him to the movies!'

When the reporter returned to Tojo's house he learned the old so-and-so was still alive. . . . "Oh, damn it!" shrieked the broadcaster. "I just told CBS listeners that he killed himself!"

Tojo was lying on his back and the blood was flowing. . . . One G.I. looked at another. Someone suddenly broke the hush and said: "What the hell? He's gonna die anyway and good riddance. Let's turn the So-and-So over on his belly so the blood will run more freely!" . . . And they did so. . . . Pretty soon the doctor arrived and examined Tojo. . . . Turning to the G.I.s and correspondents the doctor inquired: "Who turned him over?" . . . "We did!" they all yelled.

"Well," sighed the doc, "you saved his life."

A PEOPLE OPPRESSED

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 1:8-14; 2:22-25.
GOLDEN TEXT—And He said, Certainly I will be with thee.—Exodus 3:12.

God never forgets His people. We can be assured of that even though at times we must wait for His coming to bring us deliverance.

The history of Israel repeatedly demonstrates the faithfulness of God; hence the lessons of this next quarter concerning them will be a source of real belssing to all who need and seek God's help.

The family of Jacob—or, as the Bible calls them, the children of Israel—prospered in Egypt particularly as long as Joseph and the rulers who remembered him were alive. But they soon learned one of life's bitter lessons, namely, that:

I. Prosperity Is Not Always a Blessing (1:8-11).

The Hebrews were a peaceful, law-abiding people. They were God's chosen people, and as He blessed them they prospered, and thus innocently they brought upon themselves the hatred of the suspicious Egyptians.

Prosperity is never an unmixed blessing. We as a nation know that to be true. Not only does it lead to a certain softening of the sinews, but all too often it results in a weakening of the moral fiber, which makes man easy prey to the attack of the enemy of our souls.

We have just passed through a great war which has demonstrated to the world that in a time of crisis America can be strong, but now that it is over we are ready to fight one another to gain advantage. Many who have profited by war are not content to have less gold in peacetime, and so the old delusion, the love of riches, is about to ruin many lives.

It should be said that the Egyptians had reason, humanly speaking, to fear this great nation which was growing up in their midst. The new rulers did not know Joseph and had forgotten the spirit in which he had brought his family into the land. The leaders of the Egyptians therefore made plans which appealed to their brilliant leaders as politic and wise. But they reckoned without God, and the burdens and the afflictions they placed on the Israelites only served to bring further blessing.

So Israel learned a lesson which our present sorry world can profit by, that:

II. Persecution Is Not Always a Burden (vv. 12-14).

The people of Israel did not appreciate it, but the bitterness of their bondage was a blessing in disguise.

1. It Kept Them Separate as a People. Affliction often serves to keep God's people separated from the world. It is doing so today.

2. It Disciplined Them and Prepared Them for the Hardships of Their Wilderness Journey. We, too, do well to remember that "whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth," and that if we are properly "exercised" thereby, our sorrows may yield rich fruit in our lives.

3. It Threw Them Back upon God. Many are the saints of God who have found that the fiery trial, the burden so hard to understand, or some affliction of body, has caused them to bring their burdens to the Lord. We have traveled far on the road of faith when we have reached the place where we learn that "man's extremity if God's opportunity."

They had only one place to turn. They were hemmed in on every side, but, as ever, they found that no man can close the way up. They called on their God.

III. Prayer Always Brings Deliverance (2:23-25).

Does God really know when His people suffer? Does He really care? Yes, He does. "They cried," and "God heard" and "remembered." That's all we need to know. The groaning of His people had already stirred God's gracious and tender heart. But He waited to hear their cry before He answered. Such is the law of prayer. May we not forget it. Far too often we turn to everyone and everything else, and finally, in desperation, to God Why not turn to him first?

Does God hear and answer prayer? Yes, but remember that real prayer is the cry of faith coming from the heart of an obedient child. God may answer other prayers, but He always answers the prayer of faith.

His answer may not be in accord with our opinion of what it should be, for His wisdom is infinite. He knows better than we what the answer should be. Let us trust the Judge of all the earth to do right (Gen. 18:25).

A world thrown into unspeakable fear by the development of the atomic bomb is now recognizing that the only hope for the future is a spiritual revival. Many who scoffed at the idea of prayer to God are ready now to hear the witness of a church that really knows how to pray and to bring deliverance from the hand of God.

Household Hints

When roast chicken is half done, sprinkle lightly and restraineoly with nutmeg, finish baking and hear the praises of the diners.

If grease spills on a wooden floor, pour cold water over it at once. This hardens the grease so it may be scraped off before it penetrates the wood. Then scrub floor with hot, soapy water.

An old sheet spread over the floor around the sewing table will catch threads and ravelings and make picking up easier.

Brooms and brushes: Wash after use, and store.

It's handier to pour waffle batter from a pitcher than to spoon it from a bowl.

To save the last bit of shortening that clings to a jar, try this trick. Pour water just ready to boil into the container and melt the shortening. By the time the water has cooled, the shortening will have come to the top, congealed, and be ready to remove with little trouble.

Water used in cooking rice may be used to starch small items such as bits of lace and crochet.

If sandpaper is placed over a small flat block, more surface can be covered in a short time.

Ever Try Making Cough Syrup In Your Kitchen?

Quick Relief. No Cooking. Easy!

If you've never tried mixing your own cough medicine, you've missed a lot. It's no trouble—needs no cooking—and gives you about four times as much cough syrup for your money. You'll say it beats anything you ever tried for coughs due to colds And here's how it's done:—

Make a plain syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until it is dissolved. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from your druggist. Put this into a pint bottle and fill up with your syrup. This makes a pint—a family supply. Tastes fine and never spoils. Children love it.

And as for results, you've never seen anything better. It goes right to work on the cough, loosening the phlegm, soothing the irritation, and helping clear the air passages. You will like it for its results, and not merely for the money it saves.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, a most reliable soothing agent for throat and bronchial irritations. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.—Adv.

KLEMME YOUNG LADY BACK FROM CALIFORNIA VISIT

Mrs. Raymond Wille returned home Tuesday from San Francisco, California where she spent 12 days visiting with her husband, Seaman Wille and brother, Leo Blumer, R. T. 3 c. Seaman Wille is a laundryman aboard the hospital ship the U. S S. Relief and just returned from China and Manchuria where they evacuated prisoners of war and brought patients back to the States. Now they are making a trip to Japan to bring back more patients.

Leo Blumer is attending a radio technichian school on Treasure Island. All three enjoyed spending the week end together.

Mrs. Wille had spent the past 4 months with the J. M. Neuberger family at Brownsville Texas.

GOOD NEIGHBOR POLICY PUT INTO EFFECT

When Emil Blumer, Liberty township farmer became ill and was confined to his bed, neighbors came to pick his corn and do other jobs around the farm.

Those who came to help out a good neighbor were Forrest and Leo Cutshall, Fred and Merle Klinge, Ben Riemer, Bernard Pringnitz, George Kern, Jacob, Walter, and Robert Blumer, Wm. Kraus, Elwyn Ridder, Dean Goll, and LeRoy Bredlow.

Besides this crew of men they brought along seven corn pickers, one elevator and several tractors.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Congress Reacts to Labor Unrest; Truman Maps Broad Program to Ease Critical Housing Shortage

Released by Western Newspaper Union

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Searching for wood or food scraps, residents of Nuernberg scour Allied food dump. Despite plans for food shipments to Reich, U. S. reports present ration of 1,500 calories will not be increased.

LABOR:
Congress Reacts

Inflamed by labor unrest retarding reconversion, congress moved for passage of an "anti-violence" act providing a maximum penalty of 20 years imprisonment for forcible interference or threats against interstate commerce. Labeled as an anti-racketeering measure, the bill grew out of protest against the AFL International Teamster union's collection of funds from independent truckers entering large cities where the ITU is strongly organized.

While congress vented its wrath against the strike wave with the "anti-violence" act, it cooled to move more slowly on President Truman's recommendation for anti-strike legislation calling for creation of fact-finding boards empowered to look into both company and union books to determine merits of wage disputes.

Hotly opposed by labor leaders, the President's proposal has been half-heartedly received by industry, with both parties continuing to favor the least possible restraint upon their full bargaining advantages in adjusting their differences.

UAW Backs Down

Meanwhile, negotiations proceeded apace in the automobile industry, where the powerful CIO-United Automobile Workers sought maintenance of high wartime wages.

A break in the UAW's demands for a 30 per cent pay boost came in its dickering with Ford, with the union announcing a willingness to compromise on its position if the company proposed an annual wage and other concessions, like pensions, retirement compensation and vacations.

In an effort to meet Ford in the negotiations, the UAW also drew up an unprecedented security clause against wildcat strikes, agreeing on the imposition of a $3 a day fine against workers found guilty of an unauthorized walkout for a first offense, and $5 a day for a second.

While the UAW-Ford discussions progressed, the union's parley with General Motors lagged a step behind, with President Truman seeking to actively intervene in the dispute with the appointment of a fact-finding board to help speed settlement of the wage issue. Unlike the machinery that Mr. Truman would have set up in his anti-strike legislation, however, the G.M. fact-finding board lacks power to force either party to turn over its books.

Production Off

Crippled by strikes, parts shortages and labor scarcities, automobile production has fallen far below previous expectations, with only about 50,000 cars having been manufactured up to mid-December out of a year-end goal of 500,000.

Of the Big Three in the industry, only Ford has achieved any kind of volume of output, having turned out over 25,000 vehicles or about half of the over-all total. G.M. production has been retarded by the big auto strike while Chrysler activity has suffered from supply and labor shortages after a late reconversion start caused by a cleanup of government orders.

Packard, Nash, Hudson and Studebaker have all fallen far behind schedule, while Willys-Overland's production of jeeps has been stymied during the last two months.

HOME BUILDING:
Seek Speed-Up

Moving to ease the nation's stringent housing shortage, President Truman mapped a broad over-all program calling for the channelling of building materials into lower cost construction, imposition of price control on new and old dwellings, and emergency use of wartime government shelters for home-seekers.

The President took action as Reconversion Director Snyder declared that a million families already are doubling up in existing homes and the number may continue to grow as service discharges mount. With several years of peak construction necessary to relieve the situation, the industry will do well if it puts up 500,000 dwellings next year, Snyder added.

In excercising its emergency power to route building materials into lower cost housing to accommodate average pocketbooks, the government will favor homes under $10,000, with preference given to vets. Essential industrial and commercial construction also will be granted priority under the plan.

With housing expected to remain short for several years despite increasing production, the President's proposal for legislation for ceilings on new and old structures aimed at keeping prices within reasonable bounds to head off an inflationary spiral.

In providing emergency facilities, including army and navy barracks and dormitories, for temporary shelter in crowded areas, the government will move the structures wherever necessary. At the same time, surplus government building materials also will be disposed of, with 70 per cent earmarked for low cost housing.

To speed the program, President Truman named former Mayor Wilson Wyatt of Louisville, Ky., housing expediter to work under Snyder.

PEARL HARBOR:
Testimony Clashes

Divergence of testimony over the war department's receipt of the fateful "winds message" disclosing Japan's decision to wage war against the U. S. on December 3, 1941, marked the congressional inquiry into the Pearl Harbor disaster.

Whereas a top secret report of the army's Pearl Harbor inquiry board stated that the navy had intercepted and decoded the message four days before the surprise attack and then transmitted it to the White House and war and state departments, affidavits later obtained through a special investigation asserted that the army had never received the information. Copies of the message have disappeared from navy files, the army board reported.

Undertaken by the war department after the army board had filed its report, the special investigation was conducted by Lt. Col. Henry C. Clausen, and disputed other facts originally presented besides those pertaining to the "winds" message. In completing one week of testimony before the congressional committee, Gen. George C. Marshall, ex-army chief of staff and President Truman's special envoy to China, backed up the revised finding, denying that he had seen the December 3 message.

FARM PRICES FOLLOW WORLD WAR I TREND

After declining from the World War II peak of 206 in July to 197 in September, the price index of farm products, as compiled by the department of agriculture on the basis of August, 1909-July, 1914, recovered to 205 in November. This indicates a continuation of the World War I price pattern which has been closely duplicated since the outbreak of World War II, according to the Alexander Hamilton institute.

The trend of farm prices after World War I points to a further sharp rise in the early postwar period before prices slump back to a more normal level. After a temporary weakness at the end of World War I, the price index rose from 199 in February, 1919, to 235 in May, 1920. Prospects are deflation may be postponed to 1947.

SALARIES:
Report Highest

In earning $908,070, movie magnate Louis B. Mayer enjoyed the top income in the U. S. for the calendar year 1943 or fiscal year ending in 1944, the treasury reported. Far behind Mayer, Charles E. Wilson, president of General Motors, drew $459,041 to rank No. 2, with Thomas J. Watson, president of the International Business Machines corporation, No. 3 with $425,548.

Fred MacMurray's $419,166 topped movie star salaries, with other peak Hollywood incomes including Deanna Durbin, $326,491; Barbara Stanwyck, $323,333; Bing Crosby, $294,444, and William Powell, $292,500.

General Motors officials were among the highest paid of the nation's executives, other G.M. bigwigs besides Wilson in the top brackets including Ormond E. Hunt, $359,519; Albert Bradley, $350,432; John Thomas Smith, $306,310; Donaldson Brown, $306,160, and Charles F. Kettering, $306,117.

NUERNBERG TRIBUNAL:
Faces Test

First great undertaking of its kind to provide a precedent for the punishment of war-makers, the Allied tribunal trying top Nazis in Nuernberg, Germany, will receive its stiffest test if defendants press their efforts to get prominent personages in the U. S. and Britain to testify as witnesses.

Under regulations drawn up by the U. S., Britain, Russia and France, the tribunal is empowered to subpoena witnesses in other countries, in which case the latter could then appeal to their own national courts against being forced to appear. Upon the verdict of these judicial bodies, then, the authority of the tribunal would be legally defined.

Under the tribunal's charter, the defendants themselves cannot challenge its validity, their early protests having been denied and their proposals for a mixed court of allied, neutral and German judges rejected. As the case proceeded, U. S. prosecutors outlined the conscription of hundreds of thousands of foreign workers for slave labor in Germany.

BIG THREE:
Foreign Chiefs Meet

Simultaneous with Sec. of State James F. Byrnes' departure for the meeting of foreign ministers in Moscow, the U. S. state department released its plans for the economic reorganization of Germany, limiting the Reich's industry to necessities at the outset and pegging its living standard to the European average.

Pressing European and Asiatic diplomatic problems as well as the control of atomic energy were high on the Big Three's agenda as the Moscow parley took shape. Immediate cause of concern lay in the troubled Iranian situation, where Russia has resisted proposals for a withdrawal of its troops from the north in the midst of a Red-backed autonomy movement in Azerbaijan province, aiding the extension of communist influence in the oil-rich middle east.

In advancing its plan for the economic revamping of Germany, the U. S. said food shipments to the Reich will be necessary during the reorganization period of two years. After that, the Reich should be able to supply its minimum needs and also produce enough to export goods to balance import requirements.

TROOP TRAVEL:
Claims Rail Cars

With 35 per cent of all coach seats and 75 per cent of all sleeping space on railroads diverted to troop use, civilians faced difficult transportation conditions over the holiday season.

Charged with the task of moving a million men during December alone, with 660,000 debarking on the west coast, the railroads anticipate an equally heavy load during January.

No less than 40 to 50 trains a day are needed to keep Pacific ports clear, with 90 per cent of all the beds and seats for eastward travel occupied by the military. Of the 22,000 men moving inland from the west each day, 85 per cent travel to destinations east of the Mississippi river.

Profits Down

Railroad profits during the first nine months of this year declined to 452 million from 803 million dollars in the corresponding period last year, figures show. In view of this showing, the prospect is that annual profits in 1945 will be smaller than in 1944.

Operating revenues during the first nine months and especially in September, fell below the record high rate in 1944 while operating expenses, on the other hand, were at the highest rate in history.

BILLY CONN has it all figured out. Not only for himself—but also for Joe Louis. The showing made by returning ball players has cheered him up. The leading challenger for the heavyweight title takes this angle—

Billy Conn

"A number of people have wondered what sort of fighting form Joe Louis and I would be able to show by the date of our meeting next summer. A lot of them seem to think that the bout will be nothing but a pair of worn out old-timers doing the best they can. That doesn't make any sense in my book.

"You remember they thought the same way about a lot of ball players. There was Hank Greenberg, out four years, around 35 years old. But Hank was almost as good as ever, after a short workout. Then there's Red Ruffing, close to 40. And you can take up Bob Feller, Charlie Keller, and most of the others. Most of the returned veterans have stepped right back into the middle of things. And several of them were older than Joe Louis, much older than I am.

"Both Louis and I have at least two advantages over most of the ball players—Greenberg, anyway. We've been doing a lot of boxing. I've had something like 350 exhibitions to handle. That's more work than I'd have gotten if I had stayed at home. Louis has had just as much. We've both had enough ring work to keep pretty well sharpened. I mean not to get rusty.

Will Trim to 182 Pounds

"That's one edge. Now here's another—as a rule the ball players returning from service had only a short while to get back in championship shape. Louis and I will have until June. Three months is about all the training anybody needs for a fight. I expect to work my weight from 191 down to 182 pounds. I wouldn't want to go below that. I certainly won't lose any of my speed at 182. That's eight pounds heavier than I was in our first fight, where I was a little too much on the light side.

"I'd also like to say that I don't figure I'm meeting any old, worn-out fellow in Joe Louis. After all he is three years younger than Hank Greenberg and nine years younger than Red Ruffing, and no one is picking on either that I've heard about."

There are still one or two rather important factors that Conn must consider. He is younger than Louis and he is faster than Louis. But Conn must also know that on the day or night they meet, Louis will be in the best possible physical shape he can reach.

What about Conn? Billy has always had a leaning in the general direction of the primrose trail. And no such trail ever leads to any top, barring a few exceptions. Conn is young and headstrong, a fellow who likes a good time. Who doesn't? But no one is going to beat even an aging Joe Louis liking a good time.

Joe Louis at 31 is far from being an old man. He is a trifle over the hill, but not so far over. He has always been a great fighter, and he will be pretty close to being a great fighter the night he meets Conn, or any one else, with the blue chips down.

Billy is a fellow you like, but he has always been irresponsible and hard to direct. He has supreme confidence in himself. He had too much confidence in himself the night he met Louis. For one example, after the 12th round of that fight he wasn't looking for a mere victory, he was looking for a knockout.

Peril of Over-Confidence

What Conn's many supporters are afraid of is this—that Conn will take it for granted that he can whip Louis in their next meeting; without working too hard to reach this difficult goal. If that happens Conn won't have a chance. After all, he can't punch with Louis, either with the right or left hand.

It might surprise Billy to know how many experts rate Louis the better boxer, granting that Conn has more speed. Taking no credit from Conn; Louis was verging on the side of staleness when they met before. It is my belief that the Bomber will be even harder to beat when they meet again.

Conn has never been any too keen about the grind of training. Few ring men are. But this time Pittsburgh Billy will need all he can get—especially road work—and the type of training needed to bring back or to increase his speed. This doesn't mean that the likable challenger will have to spend all his time until next June on the job.

It does mean, however, that he should get started along the right road and gradually bring himself to the day he actually moves to his training camp for the final spin. Summer isn't so far away.

Veterans' SERVICE BUREAU

EDITOR'S NOTE: This newspaper, through special arrangement with the Washington Bureau of Western Newspaper Union at 1616 Eye Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., is able to bring readers this weekly column on problems of the veteran and serviceman and his family. Questions may be addressed to the above Bureau and they will be answered in a subsequent column. No replies can be made direct by mail, but only in the column which will appear in this newspaper regularly.

Letter-Writing Rules

The Veterans' administration, faced with an unprecedented volume of correspondence and a shortage of trained personnel, has appealed to veterans everywhere to restrict their mail to official business and to follow certain rules to expedite its processing.

The Veterans' administration is now receiving approximately 125,000 letters per day in the central office here in Washington and the skeleton force is working overtime in an effort to keep up with the mail. Here are some rules which will aid in getting early answers to your letters:

1. Include the veteran's name, address, legibly written, in every letter;

2. Give the "C" number in letters relating to pensions, compensation, rehabilitation or training;

3. Include the "N," "V" or "K" numbers and the serial number of the veteran in each letter regarding insurance;

4. Give the "XC" number in the case of a deceased veteran.

Unless the "N" or policy number and serial number in insurance correspondence are given it means that a master index of 24,000,000 names must be checked for proper identification. This list contains 228,000 Smiths of whom 98,000 are named John and 13,000 have no middle initial. There are 150,000 Johnsons and 120,000 Browns.

Questions and Answers

Q. Have been reading your service bureau in the local papers. Our problem is this: We, who have lost our boys in this war and wish to bring them back want to know to whom to write and when. And when they arrive does the government employees, or the American Legion take care of services. Can there be a church funeral of the kinfolks' choice? Please explain the procedure to be taken and oblige.—The Mothers of Rock County, Nebraska.

A.—The quartermaster corps is now making plans to bring the bodies of our war dead now in European cemeteries to this country at some future time, probably next spring. There is no transportation available now. They are making all inclusive plans and when these plans are complete, the next of kin of all our war dead will be notified and you will be advised of the proper procedure.

Q.—What is the proper procedure to locate a soldier we haven't heard from for nearly a year?—Mr. and Mrs. P., Lansing, Mich.

A.—Your best bet is to ask the aid of your local Red Cross, who will contact their field services. In case that is unavailing, write to the office of the Adjutant General, War department, Washington, D. C.

Q. — A soldier who has been killed in action was married and separated from his first wife, then divorced and married again. He has named his wife with whom he was living when he was called to the army as beneficiary in his insurance. Can the first wife get his insurance?—Mrs. E. P., Brownsville, Tenn.

A.—The wife who is now named as his beneficiary in his policy will get the insurance.

Q.—If a soldier receives his discharge by other than the point system, that is on a dependency charge, will he lose his mustering-out pay or privileges to which he is entitled under the G.I. Bill of Rights?—Worried Mother, Table Grove, Ill.

A.—If he was discharged on a dependency or convenience cause, he will lose his mustering-out pay, but not necessarily his benefits under the G. I. bill.

Q. Can a veteran of World War No. 1 get a pension if unable to work? Can a wife of a World War I veteran receive a pension at his death? Will the government furnish money or allowance at time of death of World War I veteran? Wife, Miami, Texas.

A. The Veterans' administration says if a World War I veteran is totally disabled he is entitled to a non-service connected disability pension. If the widow of a World War I veteran is living with him at the time of his death or was separated through misconduct of the veteran, she is entitled to a pension of $45 per month. The Veterans' administration pays $100 to the undertaker for burial of a World War I veteran.

Q.—My husband will complete five years of service in February and has 80 points. He is in Manila with the T. C. 50th Service Bn. I was told a service unit is somewhat like a part of the occupational army. Is this so?—Mrs. M. T., Loleta, Calif.

A.—Actually a service battalion may not be part of an occupational unit, but a transportation corps, such as your husband is in, is to all practical purposes part of the occupation army for he may stay in Manila as long as he is needed there.

Sewing isn't difficult if you have patience, says Rhua Slavens, who has made numerous hats and bags, a winter coat, and a coat and suit. She admits, however, that she started sewing by making a tea towel!

Ruth Erb thinks it is a crime to let good material go to waste, so she takes out-of-date clothing and, using her style sense, creates many fashion sensations. Ruth thinks everyone should go through the rag bag or the pile of discarded clothing from time to time to get material for skirts, shorts, jerkin, blouse and other garments.

Special occasions do not bother Kathryn Johnson, for she makes any outfit she wants. Her father's old silk shirts, discarded 20 years ago, provided her with a blouse. She reshapes old hats into stylish modes and creates other wearing apparel that will stand the test of any fashion editor's eye.

Billie McCoy estimates that she has saved over $300 by making her own clothing during the last few years. Evening gowns, blouses, skirts, suits, dresses and other needs were produced by her sewing skill. To list all her sewing achievements would make a news story in itself.

In seven years of project work in the 4-H club, Mae Cagle progressed from making doll dresses to slips, dresses, house coats and other items of apparel. If she likes a dress shown in a newspaper or magazine, she makes one like it for herself.

Eleanor Zaharis has won many prizes for her exceptional sewing. She starts first with good material, tests it for wrinkles, chooses a pattern carefully and sets to work. She refuses to rush through the sewing, but takes extra care to assure an attractive and satisfying result.

Before she became an expert at sewing, Marie Weisheit made many mistakes, but you would never guess it now. Along with making her own clothes, Marie does most of the mending and darning for her family of six people.

Another who started sewing by making a tea towel is Gerry Keathley. "If you've never sewed, you don't know what you're missing," she declares now. Making dresses, or suits, is now easy for her, and her favorite pastime is darning!

Meta Marie Keller finds she can now make all her own clothes and still have time for fun and other work. It wasn't easy at first, she admits, as she looks back to the time she made her first cotton dress.

Visitors from Foreign Lands Come to Learn at 4-H Congress

Other nations are learning from the 4-H clubs of America, it was revealed at the 24th annual 4-H club congress held in Chicago. As their guests the 4-H members of the United States had 66 boys and girls of other nations who had come to share the event.

Eighteen young Chinese, who were sent to the United States by their government to study 4-H clubs and agricultural methods, are among foreign friends who will take home a report of their experiences.

These young Chinese passed November on American farms. As a climax of their American visit they attended the congress with delegates of their "adopted" states. Typical of them is Shih-Che-Shen, who will describe the congress to Chinese youth on shortwave broadcasts soon. He is learning to drive a tractor and operate other farm machinery on the Owen Perry farm, Malcolm, Neb. Mrs. Perry is teaching him English—and he's looking forward to Christmas—the American kind.

South Americans Here.

The "good neighbors" who attended included 7 Venezuelans, 1 Costa Rican, 1 Peruvian, 35 Canadians from Ontario and 4 from Quebec. To get acquainted they visited with different delegations. For instance, one Canadian boy had breakfast one day with Oklahomans, lunch with the Oregon delegation and dinner with Georgians.

Mario Perez of Venezuela has been living with his pal, Gilbert Hescock of Connecticut. He is active in the 5-V clubs of Venezuela, similar to 4-H clubs.

Rita Lefebvre, 20, of Chandler, Quebec, and Normand Laferriere of Bertheir, Quebec, toured Chicago and marveled at "those buildings with their heads in the skies."

In their French-accented English, the dark-haired, vivacious Miss Lefebvre and her 4-H companion from a town of 300 population said it was the first time they had seen buildings over 15 stories high. Neither had visited the United States before their present trip, which was in the nature of an award for their 4-H club work in Canada.

Miss Lefebvre, who is employed in a bank, directed an exhibit of home economics work and forest education last August for the 70 members of her 4-H club. Laferriere, who is taking a special scientific course preparatory to entering college, organized two 4-H clubs and a community center for forest instruction at Bertheir.

Both they and their chaperons, Mrs. Gerard La Terreur of Chandler and J. A. Breton of Quebec City, marveled at the vastness of the United States 4-H organization. The Canadian clubs, which are more social and educational organizations than farm groups, have a membership of 500, they said.

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

DREW PEARSON

PAT HURLEY ALWAYS A STORMY PETREL

WASHINGTON.—This town, deadly afraid of peacetime boredom, pricked up its ears and licked its chops when Pat Hurley issued his stentorian resignation as ambassador to China. It then settled down to enjoy a good show.

Washington has known Pat ever since 1912 when as a dashing young attorney from Oklahoma he used to appear before congressional committees for the Choctaw nation, and they know he always puts on a good show. Once in testifying before the senate insular affairs committee as secretary of war, Pat shouted: "You cannot call me a liar. You can run your star-chamber sessions without me. I have taken all I can stand." Whereupon he flounced out of the room.

Some years earlier, Pat appeared before the house Indian affairs committee to oppose opening the tribal rolls of the Choctaw nation to certain Indians who claimed they were euchered out of their tribal lands. And he was severely criticized by Webster Ballinger, who pointed out that just two years before, Hurley had represented the Wards, an Indian family which sought to have the Choctaw tribal rolls opened. Thus Hurley was in the position of arguing on both sides of the same question in the brief period of two years.

Pat was not quite as ferocious in those days, however, and for some unexplained reason did not threaten to kick Ballinger out of the committee room.

PATRICK J. O'HURLEY

Pat Hurley has come a long way from those days when Oklahoma was an Indian territory. Born O'Hurley, he dropped the "O" and the Catholic religion of his father to become a Baptist, and after working his way through an Indian college, he had the courage to come to Washington, take a law degree at George Washington, and marry the daughter of Adm. Henry B. Wilson, then and now one of the most beautiful ladies in the capital.

It is a long way from such lowly beginnings to his more recent interviews with Joe Stalin, his airplane flights through the Near East, and his powerful position as the right bower of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. But Pat has staged a colorful personal row at almost every milestone along the way.

In Chungking, he first rowed with Gen. Al Wedemeyer over the question of sending a mission to the so-called Communist section of China to evaluate the importance of its military strength. For a while he and Wedemeyer weren't speaking to each other though they occupied adjoining bedrooms in the same house.

Later at a Chungking cocktail party, Wedemeyer's chief of staff, Maj. Gen. Robert B. McClure, chided Hurley for sending General Marshall a telegram of protest against Wedemeyer.

"You pup," boiled the ex-cowpuncher from Oklahoma, "I've shot men for less than that."

Guests had to separate the two men. The Chinese looked on, amused but not impressed. In China it brings severe loss of face to fight in public.

"Pat is Pat," mused FDR when informed of the fuss, "and there's nothing you can do about him."

CHRISTMAS CAROLS

If you happen near the secondary office of Rep. Leslie Arends of Illinois, house Republican whip, deep in the sub-basement of the capitol, you can hear strange sounds echoing through the catacomb-like corridors.

Arends and his five colleagues are getting their voices in trim for a special trans-Atlanatic broadcast of Christmas carols — in which six members of the British parliament also will join—to be aired by the Mutual network on December 20.

Familiar carols, such as "Oh, Little Town of Bethlehem" and "Hark! The Herald Angels Sing", will be rendered by the legislators. The Americans and Britons will do a joint rendition of "Silent Night."

The other members of the Arends sextet are GOP Representatives Harve Tibbott of Pennsylvania, Paul Shafer of Michigan, Harry Towe of New Jersey, Frank Fellows of Maine and William Hill of Colorado.

The singing congressmen occasionally vary their practice sessions with "Sweet Adeline," according to Macon Reed, Mutual news reporter, a former army corporal who is helping to arrange the Christmas broadcast. However, Reed insists there is no "liquid encouragement" at such times.

CAPITAL CHAFF

California's new young Republican Sen. William F. Knowland was the only member of the senate to challenge Sen. Jim Eastland of Mississippi recently when Eastland made a lengthy speech attacking U. S. policy in Germany as too severe. . . . General Marshall was slated to become a director of the American Red Cross before Truman decided to send him to China. . . . Former GOP Congressman Mel Maas of Minnesota, a colonel in the marine aviation reserve, is back in Washington.

MRS. DYE MAKES OVERALLS LAST

PITCHER, OKLAHOMA.—Mrs. L. E. Dye has had a lot of experience in washing overalls for five boys and her husband. She has found out how to make them last longer. Here is what she says in a letter to Faultless Starch,

"I cannot wash without Faultless Starch. You bet I think it will make overalls last longer and look ten times better. I know. We raised five boys, so I know what Faultless Starch means to overalls. Have used it as far back as I can remember and my mother used it, too. I can't say enough for Faultless Starch."

Now there is an important message for anyone who has overalls in her wash. Mrs. Dye says that Faultless Starch makes overalls wear longer (that's mighty important, today) and look "ten times better" (and that's important, too).

HOW TO STARCH OVERALLS

Overalls, work pants, wash shirts —and children's play clothes usually get very, very dirty. Sometimes it takes a lot of rubbing on a scrubboard to take the dirt out. And everyone knows that rubbing wears out clothes as much as washing them does. But when you give them a LIGHT starching with Faultless Starch you save a lot of that rubbing. You see—Faultless Starch penetrates the fabric—so dirt can't grind in so easily. And Faultless Starch dissolves instantly in water and carries most of the dirt right out with it. So when you starch other things, be sure to give overalls, work pants, children's clothes, etc., a very light starching at the same time. You'll notice the difference when you wash them!

SO SMOOTH TO WEAR

The men will really like it, too. The fabric feels smooth and slick —not scratchy and rough. They won't chafe as much around the neck and the arms. It's a wonderful relief to wear smooth, slick work clothes! Try it; this washday. And be sure to use Faultless Starch!—Adv.

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

The majority of Army surplus tires are to be allocated among states, cities, counties and federal agencies, and then to veterans.

The great battery of synthetic rubber plants erected during the war cost approximately $700,000,000.

More than 30,000 synthetic rubber compounds were prepared during the war, about 500 will have peacetime uses.

The heaviest single load ever moved on pneumatic tires was 300 tons and for a secret military project; equipment was carried on a huge trailer having 64 wheels shod with B. F. Goodrich truck tires.

Hagen-Barz Wedding Held Here Sunday Evening

EVANGELICAL & REFORMED CHURCH SCENE OF RITES

Miss Avis Barz Became Bride Of Eldon Hagen, Hanlontown

MR. AND MRS. HAGEN

The Klemme Evangelical and Reformed Church was the scene of a candlelight wedding ceremony performed Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock by the Rev. Calvin Grosshuesch when Miss Avis Barz, only daughter of Mrs. Clara Barz of Klemme became the bride of Eldon O. Hagen, son of Mr. and Mrs Martin Hagen of Hanlontown. The altar was decorated with candelabra and baskets of white pompoms. The church was lighted by white tapers placed in receptacles along the aisles.

The ushers, Milvern Barz, cousin of the bride, and Stanley Willand lighted the tapers while Mrs. H. G. Voetberg, cousin of the bride, played "Oh Promise Me." Allan Barz, brother of the bride, sang "Because" and "The Lord's Prayer," accompanied by Mrs. Voetberg, who also played the wedding march.

Irwin Hagen was his brother's bestman and the bridesmaids were Miss Adella Wille and Miss Myrtle Willand. Carol Barz, neice of the bride, and Marlys Gjere, cousin of the bridegroom, were flower girls, and Miss Luella Thieman was maid of honor.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Raymond Barz. She wore a white slipper satin gown with a full train and a coronet style fingertip veil and her only jewelry was a strand of pearls, a gift from the bridegroom. She carried a shower bouquet of red and white roses and white hyacinths. The maid of honor wore a blue net over taffeta gown and the bridesmaids had matching gowns of blue and pink brocated net over taffeta and carried colonial shower bouquets of pink roses, sweetpeas and gladioli. The flower girls had long frocks of blue and yellow net over taffeta and carried glass baskets of white pompoms.

The bride's mother wore a navy blue silk dress and the bridegroom's mother, a luggage brown wool dress. Both had corsages of pink roses and sweetpeas.

A reception was held in the church dining room following the ceremony where 175 invited relatives and friends enjoyed a two-course lunch.

The church dining room was beautifully decorated with pastel streamers. Small tables were centered with baby chrysanthemums, and each place was set with name napkins and nut cups.

The bride's table was centered with a four tiered white wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and groom. Pink carnations and baby mums and pastel nut cups also decorated the table.

The lunch was served by the bride's mother's cousins: Mrs. Fred Schmidt, Mrs. Herman Schmidt, Mrs. Bertha Schlei, Mrs. Fred Becker, Mrs. Verner Priebe, Mrs. Albert Schmidt, Mrs. Irvin Haupt, Mrs. Paul Goll, and Mrs. Ewald Josten.

The waitresses were Gertrude Grosshuesch, Doris Johnson, Marcelle Bosch, Sylvia Roisen, Mildred Busse, Marjorie Hartbeck, Mary Jane Holms, Mrs. Lucille Jurgemeyer, Adell Rosendahl, Edward Grosshuesch,

FARMERS SHOULD WATCH HOG MARKET SAYS JOSTEN

Glutted Markets Tend To Reduce Prices Below Ceiling

"Support prices for hogs cannot be effective if gluted markets force packers to use their only weapon—reduced prices—to slow down runs," said Alfred V. Josten, Chairman of the Hancock county AAA Committee, this week.

Josten stated that there is not too much pork, in fact the demand is great enough to take all farmers can produce, but if hogs go to market in runs too great for the packers to handle, prices will break as they did the week ending December 1, when a large number of hogs had to be held over. Prices dropped from 60 cents to $1.10 below the ceiling prices.

"Farmers should study the price trends and runs daily. They should hold back their hogs if big runs are forcing prices down. It is equally important, Josten said, to move hogs if prices indicate the market can handle them so that hogs will not be backed up on the farms and cause a break in prices later on."

Farmers stand to lose or to gain money by keeping this marketing situation under control, explained Josten, and that not too much pork but poor marketing practices would cause a decline in prices. Moderate marketing seems to be the key to solve the problem.

THE first settlers in Ohio, remembering the nation which had materially assisted the cause of the American Revolution, named their settlement Marietta, in honor of Queen Marie Antoinette of France. That was in 1786, during the stirring years of expansion and growth following the birth of the new republic. It was a group of New Englanders, led by Manasseh Cutler and Gen. Rufus Putnam, that founded the frontier town at the confluence of the Ohio and Muskingum rivers.

The story of Ohio might be told in the study of names. The word Ohio, from the Indian, means "Beautiful River," but the names of Ohio's sons are known around the world. Seven United States Presidents were born in that state: Grant, Garfield, Hayes, Benjamin Harrison, McKinley, Taft and Harding. Howard Chandler Christy, the artist, was born in Morgan county. Buckeye state authors, teachers, lawyers and doctors are known around the world.

Thomas A. Edison and Orville and Wilbur Wright are examples of Ohio names in invention. Others now household words include Van Sweringen, Goodrich, Firestone, Seiberling, Willys, Proctor, Gamble, Kroger, Olds, Patterson and Kettering. The list is too long to publish here.

Paint Creek Gorge

Rich In Resources.

There are many empires in the state of Ohio, for it is rich in its natural resources as well as in men. The farmer's Ohio is 22 million acres of agriculture. The business man's Ohio is the fourth wealthiest state in the Union. The manufacturer's Ohio is the factories, the mines, the products shipped around the world. The homemaker's Ohio is blessed with an abundance of human and material resources for wholesome, happy living for typical Americans, urban or rural. The vacationist's Ohio provides parks, game preserves, smooth highways, 110 lakes, many rivers, good fishing, deer and small game, rugged hill country, archaeological relics such as Indian mounds, and caves, geological formations, etc.

Ohio is largely a manufacturing state, deserving this industrial prominence mainly because of its natural resources. The advantages afforded for transportation by water as well as by rail cannot be overestimated. Lake Erie and the New York state barge canal make a direct outlet to the Atlantic, while the Ohio and the Muskingum rivers offer communication with Pennsylvania and the Mississippi basin.

The manufacture of iron and steel and their products constitutes the most important industry in Ohio and entitles the state to a place only below Pennsylvania. It includes the work of the blast furnaces, rolling mills and steel plants. Pig iron production in Ohio represents approximately one-fourth of the nation's total.

World Rubber Capital.

Akron is the rubber manufacturing center of the world. Cleveland and Cincinnati are the centers of the state's clothing industry. East Liverpool has one of the world's most extensive pottery works and together with other nearby towns produces about half of the nation's pottery.

Ohio ranks first in the production of tires and tubes, machine tools, stoves, ranges, furnaces, electrical appliances, printing and publishing of periodicals, soap, matches, pottery and porcelain ware, pumps and pumping equipment, coffins and steam shovels.

The state ranks second in the production of motor vehicles, bodies and parts; blast furnace products, iron and steel; generating, distribution and industrial apparatus; and machine shop products.

Ohio ranks high in meat packing, bread and baked goods, eggs and poultry, dairy products, hogs, sheep, cattle, wheat, corn, oats, soy beans, hay, apples, grapes, peaches, potatoes, sugar beets and vegetables. Ohio grows more vegetables under glass than any other state in the Union.

A Leader in Manufactures.

Ohio is also in the top ten states in the production of paper, chemicals, paints and varnishes, men's clothing, footwear, rolling mill products, petroleum refining, stamped and pressed metal products, hardwoods, limestone, dolomite, clay, sandstone and gravel.

As a part of the vast region west of the Alleghenies, what is now Ohio was once claimed by France. It also formed part of the grant made from ocean to ocean by English kings to various colonies along the Atlantic seaboard.

After the settlement of Marietta, a considerable migration from Virginia was directed to the southern part of Ohio. A great impetus was given to settlement when Gen. Anthony Wayne defeated the Indians of the Northwest in the Battle of Fallen Timbers near the Maumee river.

By an act of congress of April 30, 1802, the territory was authorized to draft a constitution; and on February 19, 1803, Ohio was declared a state.

Edward Tiffin was elected the first governor. Chillicothe became the first capital and Lancaster, Newark and Zanesville each shared the honor of being the seat of state government before it was permanently located in Columbus in 1816.

Mysterious Mounds.

Even back in prehistoric days, men must have found Ohio a good land in which to live. The Mound Builders, whose origin is as mysterious as their destiny, devoted an estimated 100,000 man-years of labor to the building of 10,000 mounds and earthworks. These village sites, fortifications and burial places remain in Ohio as the record of these ancient people.

Intermingled in the fabric of Ohio's history and romantic heritage are the French explorers, Jesuit priests, British officers, French traders and Colonial frontiersmen. George Rogers Clark, "Mad" Anthony Wayne, Ebenezer Zane and "Johnny Appleseed" march across its pages of history, for Ohio was once the wild frontier, the unconquered Northwest.

Ohio's governor was born in Cleveland in 1895, the son of Slovenian parents. On Cleveland's sandlots he became a star third baseman, and was playing professional ball for Duluth when World War I broke out. He served as a second lieutenant, and when the war was over, studied law. He served as a judge in Cleveland and was elected mayor of his home town in 1941 and 1943. In 1944 he was elected governor of Ohio.

OHIO'S MEMORIAL MARKERS

Landmarks of Ohio's early days have been carefully preserved or restored. The pageant of history with all its romantic characters is recalled in the state's 46 memorial markers.

The bronze statue of Gen. George A. Custer, who died in the Battle of Little Big Horn in 1876, is at New Rumley, north of Cadiz, and marks the birthplace of the famous Civil war general.

Other points of scenic and historic interest are the George Rogers Clark park, containing the site of the battle of Piqua and birthplace of the Indian chief, Tecumseh; the house in which Ulysses S. Grant was born in Point Pleasant, and Thomas A. Edison's birthplace in Milan. Hockey county contains more places of scenic interest than any other in the state. Rock House, Ash Cave, Cedar Falls, Conkle's Hollow, Old Man's Cave and the Natural Bridge at Rockbridge are in this one county.

FOOTNOTES on FARM HOUSING

by LLOYD SHERWOOD
NORTHERN LUMBER CO

For those of my friends interested in better poultry housing, I have a new manufacturer's booklet which may be had for the asking. It is called, "The Modern Poultry House," and was written by people who visited farms all over Iowa, Minnesota, and other states. Some of their reports on model poultry houses have appeared in national farm magazines. I think it is the best summary I have seen of recommendations by agricultural college experts and results secured by progressive farmers.

This booklet contains a discussion of ventilation and insulation, both for wood construction and tile or masonry. It talks about eliminating cold, damp floors; proper vapor barriers; the size and shape of the house. It seems that a house built as nearly square as possible avoids waste of materials and heat. The long narrow house can be partitioned in the center, to make two nearly square rooms. This separation provides a means of segregating the birds, should sickness break out in the flock. Instead of only one partition, put in two, to make a narrow hall in the center of the building. Here feed, eggs, and supplies are stored. A few handy shelves provide space for medicine, egg cartons, etc. I was particularly interested in the discussion of a storage closet and feed bin. This seems to me a very sensible idea. It does away with a lot of hauling, particularly desirable in winter when snow drifts are five feet deep Insulated walls and floor, of course, prevent stored eggs from freezing, and lesson the chance of moulding or caking of feed. It's surprising what good insulation and tight construction will do in the way of keeping up inside temperatures. Instead of 25 degrees the tight, well-insulated building may be 50 degrees or more This means healthy, productive birds; and think how much more comfortable it is to do the chores.

I notice that 1 sq. ft of window for 25 sq. ft. of floor space is considered adequate. The trend seems to be away from as much glass as we thought we needed. And, instead of concentrating the windows on the south side, distribute them all around the building. This eliminates glare (and some authorities attribute nervousness and cannibalism in chickens to glare) and "hot spots" during the day in summer. It means that the maximum amount of sunshine will come in from the West in winter, when the sun is low. The door should be located with an eye to prevailing winter winds, so that blasts of cold air will not enter with you, and chill the birds. A small vestibule is a good addition, where you do not have the center hall

This booklet contains a discussion of roosts, dropping pits, boards, nests and feeders. The trend seems to be toward low roosts, not more than 18 inches high. Here's a tip, if you use dropping boards, divide them into sections, hinged at the back, and put hooks in the ceiling so the roosts can be hooked up out of the way when cleaning is going on. The water supply and artificial lighting are discussed, also.

Next time: The Modern Kitchen.

Attend the meeting in your community so you will know what this program offers.

FURNITURE FIRST AID LESSONS

Pieces of furniture that are well constructed, have good design, or are family heirlooms are good reasons for refinishing furniture, say Mrs. Henry Weiland in Orthel and the Misses Bernice Weaver and Freida Radloff in Ell township. These women are already working on some choice pieces of furniture.

At the meetings held in those 2 townships in the past week they were on the lookout for any ideas that would assist them in their project.

Other township meetings are scheduled throughout January. See the Farm Bureau Calendar in this issue for meeting dates. Bring your ideas that you have found to be helpful.

4-H ORGANIZATION GROWS RAPIDLY IN HANCOCK

Hancock County is starting the new year with 19 organized 4-H clubs. This is one more than in 1945, according to Paul Henderson, Hancock County extension director.

Of the 19 clubs in this county, 10 are home economics clubs and 9 are farm project groups.

Leading the clubs are 16 men and 17 women. In addition, both boy's and girl's club committees are serving to guide the county cub program.

Members of the boy's committee are Curtis Greiman, Chairman and Howard Reitveld, Emery Schaefer and Lester Wilhite, committee members.

Heading the girl's club committee is Mrs. C. J. Wille, Klemme. Other members of her committee are Mrs. Lyal Fox, Mrs. D. E. Keat, Mrs. Oscar Greiman and Miss Ruby Schram.

Further enrollments should be made as soon as possible as the club year started October 1, according to Henderson. To become a member, a boy or girl should contact thec ounty extension office, club leaders or committee members or another 4-H member.

A membership application card will be given to thep rospective member. When filled out and signed by a parent, the card is given to the local club leader. The boy or girl will then be notified of the meeting date of the local club and will be eligible to attend. All members are required to carry a project. For this reason an early start is a real advantage.

Army Medical Corps Grows From Humble Birth

Now a world-girdling organization credited with unparalleled achievements, the army medical department began its existence in 1775 with the founding by the continental congress of a "hospital," which was the medical organization for the colonial nation's army of 20,000 men. It consisted of a director general and chief physician, Dr. Benjamin Church of Boston; four surgeons; one apothecary, and one male nurse to every 10 sick soldiers. From this beginning the medical department has expanded to a personnel strength of over 600,000 and has achieved phenomenal results from the standpoint of scientific advances attained and also in the health of the American army.

Nearly 97 out of every 100 soldiers who reach a hospital are saved in this war. Seventy out of every 100 wounded overseas have been returned to duty and nearly 27 per cent have been evacuated to this country. During the past three years, the medical department has maintained a record of less than 1 death from disease per 1,000 men a year.

Of the diseases which have decimated armies throughout history, few are heard of in the American army today. We have no typhus, plague, or cholera, one death from tetanus and few deaths from typhoid or yellow fever. Malaria has been reduced from hundreds of cases per 1,000 men per year to less than 50. Dysenteries have occurred among less than 90 out of every 1,000 men per year and have been readily controlled.

Here's Check on Good Health of Child

Here is a rapid check list of the general characteristics of a well-nourished child, typical of those devised by leading child nutritionists:

Body should be well developed with straight arms and legs. Posture should be erect with stomach in; head and chest up; shoulder blades flat. Fat should be in moderate amounts in curves rather than angles. Muscles should be firm and well developed.

Eyes should be clear and bright with no dark hollows or blue circles underneath, and the hair glossy. Teeth should be well formed and sound and gums firm and light pink with no bleeding. Skin should be smooth and firm, of good color, and blood red in good supply.

Appetite and digestion should be good, and elimination regular. Sleep should be sound and refreshing, and disposition good natured and full of pep.

Roach Control

As roaches live to eat, keeping all foods covered is the first step in discouraging them to remain in the house. Another means of reducing the roach population is to examine all boxes, paper bags and packages coming from the grocery and laundry. To control those that do, use sodium flouride. Use enough of this material in powder form to about half fill an ordinary tin fly spray. Spray the dust in cracks and crevices, in drawers, on tables, in shelves, around baseboards and other runways of the roaches as thinly as possible. Don not put it out in piles or as a thick coating. When it's sprayed thickly the roaches will avoid it. It should be thin enough so that the roaches will run through it. Sodium flouride is most effective when it is put out in the evening because the roaches move around mostly at night. If the powder is swept up, spraying should be repeated every three or four days. The powder is poisonous and should be kept away from children and pets.

State Thrift

State governments made some kind of a new record for thrift in the year 1944. All but three of them put away some cash out of their revenues after they'd paid their bills. On the average, they spent a little less than 90 per cent of what they took in. Against revenues of $6,600,000,000, the 48 states spent only $5,900,000,000. California tucked away almost exactly 20 per cent of its revenues, a whopping $131,000,000. New York, with the biggest state budget in the country, salted down $90,000,000 of its $810,000,000 take. These two states together accounted for about a third of the net surplus accumulated of $669,600,000, though their revenues combined to make somewhat less than one-quarter of the total. Massachusetts, Mississippi and South Carolina were the bad boys on the record. They dipped into their credit for a total of about $17,000,000.

Linoleum Care

Manufacturers say that more linoleum is scrubbed and soaked away than is worn away with ordinary use. A linoleum floor that is well waxed may be kept clean with daily dusting with a dry mop and only occasional washing. Dirt tracked into the kitchen sometimes makes more frequent washing necessary, but wiping up anything spilled immediately will save much mopping. If any soap is necessary, a mild type rather than laundry soap is recommended because the alkali from strong soap tends to dry out the oil in linoleum and makes it brittle. Gritty cleaners are to be avoided also as they scratch the surface and open the pores so grease and dirt work into the material.

Man in Search of Hotel Room

Applicant.—Can I get a suite?

Clerk.—You're in the wrong line; the psycopathic cases are in that other one.

Applicant. — I'm not crazy; I'm just over-planning.

Clerk.—Please stop annoying me.

Applicant. — Very well, I want to be reasonable . . . I'll forget the suite and take a double room with bath.

Clerk.—You just wish to be real fair?

Applicant. — That's it. I might even consider a single.

Clerk.—For what week next July?

Applicant.—Don't make it that difficult. I've got to have a place to sleep tonight.

Clerk.—Anybody who sleeps here tonight has been booked since Pearl Harbor.

Applicant. — There must have been somebody cancel since that time.

Clerk. — There is no such thing as a cancellation any more. If a man decides not to come he raffles off his reservation.

Applicant (confidentially). — Listen, I have a reservation. I wrote in four months ago.

Clerk.—What was the name?

Applicant.—Eisenhower.

Clerk.—There are 26 Eisenhowers here now.

Applicant.—Come to think of it, my name is Chester Bowles.

Clerk. — We have 11 Chester Bowles, 18 General Marshalls and 7 MacArthurs ahead of you.

Applicant.—You look like a feller I went to school with back in Ansonia.

Clerk.—That's an old one.

Applicant. — How's your mother?

Clerk.—That's been tried, too.

Applicant. — What of democracy? . . . the pursuit of life, liberty and indoor sleeping?

Clerk. — Don't rub it in. I tell you flatly there are no rooms.

Applicant. — Then why do they put clerks at these windows?

Clerk. — We're being DISCIPLINED!

THOUGHTS IN A HOUSING CRISIS

The woodchuck now seems smart to me—
On me he has the laughter:
He digs himself a winter home—
And pulls the thing in after!

I'm even jealous of the skunk—
His odor I'm forgivin':
I'd gladly smell that way if I
Could dig a place to live in.

The housing crisis has reached a point where it is suggested that "Tenting Tonight" or "Home, Sweet Home" was an American folk song.

Six Argentina autoists have completed a trip from Buenos Aires to New York by automobile over the Pan American highway. They report the most disturbing feature of the trip to have been those constant cracks, "Hey, where do you think you're going?"

The German general staff ranked Ike Eisenhower as the greatest military man on our side, with Patton the most feared commander in the field. They reached the conclusion upon recovering consciousness.

Henry Ford is considering an annual wage for employees instead of a weekly one. Under such a plan a worker will know that there will be no season of the year when he will be driving in neutral.

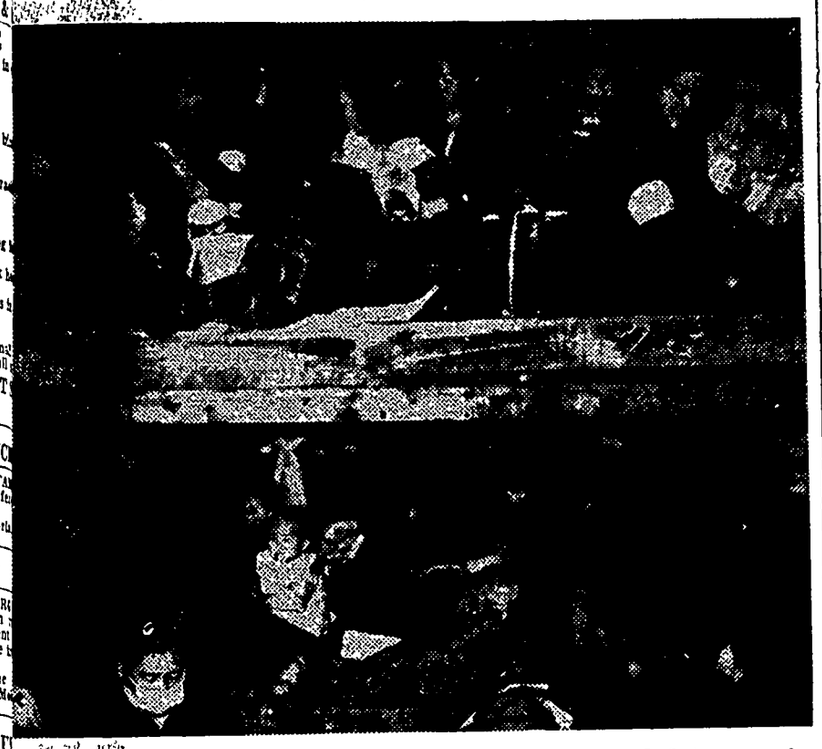
WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Truman Pushes Unification of Armed Forces; U.S. Moves for Active Participation in UNO

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)



Composed of war widows and children and men needed to care for their families in Japan, first batch of Nipponese repatriates are shown aboard small steamer leaving Shanghai. In all, some 300,000 Japanese, including troops, will be evacuated from the greater Shanghai area.

RVICE MERGER:
Way

With President Truman throwing full weight behind a merger of fighting services, early congressional action on unification of the ny, navy and air forces was foren.

Meanwhile, rougher sailing loomed the chief executive's proposal for mpulsory military training for ths 18 to 20 years of age to build an experienced reserve adequate meet future emergencies.

n casting his lot for the merger the armed forces after strenuous val objections to unification, Mr. uman called for a single depart- nt of national defense under a ilian head, with assistants for various branches, and a mili- y chief of staff, with command- from the three services. The litary leaders would join with the esident in an advisory council.

Maximum efficiency would result m unification, the President de- red, because close co-ordination uld acquaint each branch of the med forces with the capabilities d limitations of the others, and onomy would be achieved by minating a duplication of effort supply.

ARM BUREAU:
iscuss Parity

Despite imperfections in the pres- t parity formula, American farmers were urged to retain the system by Secretary of Agriculture Anderson addressing the annual convention of the Farm Bureau in Chicago, Ill. Referring specifically to the government program for price support at 90 per cent of parity, Anderson ld varying conditions for differ- t crops might fail to promote max- um production. Even with milk 109 per cent of parity at the 910-14 base, output is below re- uirements, he said, while eggs at per cent might lead to plentiful roduction.

Secretary Anderson

Declaring that the parity formula hould be based upon the 10 years receding the present program rath- than on the 1910-14 level, Edward O'Neal, farm bureau president, alled for all agricultural groups to mite on an over-all plan rather than sist on a separate system for each ommodity.

Pointing up the need for addition- l rural health and education facili- ies, Senator Hill (Dem., Ala.) said hat with millions of farm dollars nding up as profits in industrial dis- ricts after consumer purchases, only ederal taxation and expenditures or social service could assure the eturn of some of the money back o agricultural areas for public pur- poses.

UNO:
U. S. In

With house passage of enabling egislation, congress joined in mak- ng the U. S. a full-fledged mem- er of the United Nations organiza- ion, conceived out of the welter of ar to preserve future peace by co-operative action and prevent the destruction of modern conflict.

Acting quickly on the enabling legislation, President Truman nominated the U. S. delegates to UNO, with ex-Secretary of State Edward Stittinius chosen as the representative on the all-powerful security council and senior member of the general assembly group including Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Sen. Tom Connally (Dem., Texas) and Sen. Arthur Vandenberg (Rep. Mich.).

Under the legislation approved, the President can enter into negotiations with the other four members of the security council of UNO for provision of military forces to suppress aggression, with freedom to permit their use after congressional sanction of the arrangements. The President also will be able to join in the imposition of economic boycotts to bring a troublemaker into line.

LABOR:
Talk Turkey

With early maneuverings for position jolted by President Truman's request for fact-finding anti-strike machinery to speed settlement of labor disputes, the CIO United Automobile Workers and major producers entered into discussions of principal issues, with Ford continuing to steal the show.

With the UAW's Ford division having provided the first real break in the deadlock with agreement to penalize wildcat strikers hindering output, the company took one step closer toward agreement by proposing a 15-cent an hour wage increase. Despite Ford's alteration of the union's security plan and the UAW's rejection of the company's wage offer, the two propositions provided a meeting ground for a settlement somewhere between.

Meanwhile, the Sinclair-United Oil Workers (CIO) pact providing for an 18 per cent wage raise and union assurance against wildcat striking loomed as the model contract for all of industry. In arriving at a settlement, H. F. Sinclair declared that the two parties agreed that voluntary solution of disputes was preferable to government intervention, such as proposed by Mr. Truman.

SHIP SINKING:
Convict Skipper

Acquitted on a charge of inefficiency in the sinking of the cruiser Indianapolis in the Pacific last July with a loss of 880 lives, Capt. Charles B. McVay was found guilty of negligence in the operation of the ship, with sentence subject to review of the secretary of the navy.

Clearance on the charge of inefficiency for not issuing timely orders to leave the vessel after it was struck by a torpedo followed McVay's testimony that he had at first believed the ship could be saved but then called for its abandonment when convinced of the real extent of damage. Shortly after the Indianapolis capsized, taking a heavy toll of life.

In being convicted on the negligence charge, McVay was accused of failing to order a zig-zag course during the trip from Guam to Leyte and thus divert the aiming of a U-boat. In defense, McVay contended that poor visibility and lack of moon that night governed his decision not to take on a diversionary course.

TELEVISION:
Charge Restriction

Accusing Scophony, Ltd., of Great Britain and Television Productions Inc. and General Precision Equipment Corporation of America of retarding development of television in the U. S. through a cartel agreement dividing markets between Europe and the western hemisphere, the government filed anti-trust charges in New York City.

In stating that the companies had agreed to stay out of competing areas, the government declared that the American firms had obtained exclusive rights to an advanced television set controlled by Scophony, but had done nothing to either develop and exploit the apparatus here or promote its sale and use.

Employing an independent light along the principle of the motion picture projector, the British product is capable of transmitting images 20 by 24 inches on home sets, 3 by 4 feet on school and club sets and 12 by 15 feet on theater screens, the government said. In contrast, American sets are limited to reproductions of 4 by 6 inches and 6 by 8 inches.

JAPAN:
Tells Secret

In guarded memoirs left after his suicide to prevent arrest as a war criminal, former Jap Premier Prince Konoye left some glimpses of the behind-the-scenes maneuvering that marked his country's diplomacy before the surprise attack on Pearl Harbor.

One of the top disclosures was Konoye's report on the evolution of a peace plan covering the Far East after unofficial negotiations in which former Postmaster General Walker and Bishop Walsh of the Catholic Maryknoll missionaries figured with government knowledge. Sabotaged by Ultra-Nationalist Japanese officials, the plan called for Jap withdrawal from China, restriction of immigration thereto, and co-operation in the restoration of the open-door trade policy. In return the U. S. was to recognize Manchuria.

In another revelation, Konoye reported Russia's tentative agreement to join the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo Axis in 1940 under inclusion of Iran and India in her sphere of influence. No concrete alliance developed, however, because of the failure of the Nazis and Reds to work out details, and the whole plan collapsed with Germany's drive to the East in 1941.

Frontier Figure Dies

Death of Moman Pruiett, 73, in Oklahome City, Okla., from pneumonia recalled his one-time eminence as a frontier attorney, with a record of acquittals for 303 accused slayers. Having studied the law in an attorney's office, where he was employed as a shoe shine boy and janitor, Pruiett, a colorful figure with long, black hair falling below his shoulders, was among the first to introduce emotion in court practice in the Southwest.

On one occasion when the prosecution sneered at his plea of self-defense for a client accused of killing a man who threatened him with a pencil, "Old Moman" suddenly seized a juror by the collar—thrust a pencil at his breast and secured an admission that the pencil resembled a knife under the circumstances.

After being convicted as a boy of a robbery—which he said he did not commit, Pruiett resolved to study law. Addressing the judge, he roared: "I'll turn murderers and thieves loose in your midst."

FARM CROPS:
Year's Review

With a New Year ringing in, American farmers could look back on the old as marking the best in food grain production on record with an all-time wheat crop of 1,123,143,000 bushels featuring the harvest.

At the same time, the department of agriculture reported that feed grains were the third largest on record, though corn fell off slightly to 3,018,410,000 bushels from the 1944 figure. As a result, huge quantities of feed will be available for fattening livestock and assuring the country of banner meat supplies through 1946.

Along with wheat, new records were established for oats, tobacco, rice, popcorn, hops, peaches, pears, grapefruit, almonds and fresh truck crops, while near records were set for hay, soybeans, flaxseed, potatoes, sugar cane, oranges, grapes and pecans.

Despite the general banner production, the cotton harvest fell to its lowest figure since 1896, while apples, barley, rye, dry beans, buckwheat, sorghum silage and forage, sweet potatoes, sugar beets, apricots and sour cherries were also below average output.

With a decrease of 4,000,000 acres from 1944, production of all crops in 1945 was only 1.5 per cent off. Output was 2 per cent below the peak of 1942.

LUFTWAFFE RECORDS:

A 250-ton documentary record of the German air force which will tell the American people more about the Luftwaffe than the Germans themselves know, has been housed at Wright Field, Ohio.

In disclosing possession of the records, the army presumed possession of a detailed report on German research would save the government a great deal of time and money by eliminating duplication of experimentation in those fields in which the Germans had surpassed us.

Stresses Need for Additional Knowledge of Nutrition

A drastic change in the diet may be harmful even when it adds beneficial food, Dr. C. A. Elvehjem, professor of biochemistry at the University of Wisconsin, asserted in calling for increased research into nutrition to permit wider knowledge of balanced consumption.

For example, Dr. Elvehjem says, most workers in this field regard a high level of protein in the diet as desirable, but it has recently been discovered that a deficiency in vitamin B6, or pyridoxine, develops faster on high protein diets. A high level of fat may tend to reduce tooth decay, he continues, but it may also tend to reduce the necessary synthesis of vitamins in the intestinal tract.

A PEOPLE DELIVERED

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 6:6-8; 13:17-22.
GOLDEN TEXT—I will trust, and not be afraid; for the Lord Jehovah even the Lord, is my strength.—Isaiah 12:2.

"Is thy God able to deliver thee?" was the question asked of Daniel in the lions' den (Dan. 6:20). It is in the minds and on the lips of many in every hour of crisis.

God is able to deliver. Moses found that out when in answer to his complaint that the Lord had done nothing for his suffering people (Exod. 5:22), the Lord revealed Himself as the One who was not only able but ready to take them out of their bondage.

I. God's Promise (6:6-8).

Moses was to remember that he was dealing with the Eternal One, unchangeable, and always true to His word and able to make His will come to pass (v. 2, 3).

So often men in dealing with God think of Him in terms of their own weakness and failure. What we need is to have a Godlike conception of God, not a manlike idea of Him. God is the infinite and the Eternal One with whom we have no right to quarrel, and whose dealings with us are too high for us to judge (Ps. 139:1-6).

God's covenant with His people was established (v. 4). He had heard their cry (v. 5), and His deliverance was sure (v. 6). The only thing Moses had to do was to wait and see God work.

That word "wait" is a little one. It seems to call for no effort, to be easy of fulfillment; yet it seems to be the hardest thing for a human being to do. Christians who can speak and work for God when things are active and moving become querulous and despondent when they have to wait or when they are laid aside for a time.

His promise is sure. That is not just a religious sentiment. It is a fact, and it is proved by history.

II. God's Plan (13:17-19).

There was a direct, easy road along the coast of the Mediterranean up to Canaan, but God with His pillar of cloud and fire did not lead in that way.

How strange that He should take them by a longer, more difficult way! Not at all. He knew the danger of the easy way. It was there that the warlike Philistines would be lying in ambush. Such immediate conflict would discourage Israel and tempt them to return to the fleshpots of Egypt. So He took them the other way.

Note that God's guidance for them was one of intelligent planning, not just impulse or chance. He knew what to do, and He did it, for their good.

God has a plan, not only for the nations, but also for individuals, for your life and mine. Let us find His will for us, for it is good, acceptable and perfect (Rom. 12:1, 2).

Note the honoring of the faith of Joseph in God's promise (v. 19). The memory of his assurance was a blessing to his descendants, and they honored it and him. What will our descendants have to say about our faith in God?

III. God's Presence (13:20-22).

Our God does not just send a plan or program to His people. He is always with them and is ready to go before them.

God's plan is made known to His people as they follow Him step by step. This means that there must be guidance, moment by moment, if His plan is to be worked out. He gives such guidance and it is only when His children fail to follow it that the pattern of life becomes confused.

The field of divine guidance is one in which Christians have widely divergent experiences. Some know the sweet, unconfused daily experience of God's hand upon them, caring for even the minor details (or are they minor?) of life. Others have known the directive power of God in some life crisis, but not in the ordinary affairs of life. Many, and perhaps most, think of divine guidance as a spiritual theory of which the preacher talks, but know nothing of it in their own lives.

What makes this great difference? Faith—or the lack of it. Those who trust God accept and receive His blessed leadership moment by moment. It is as simple as that. Others reach out and take it when the pressure of life makes them cast themselves on God. Others simply muddle along "doing their best," which is not their best, for God is not in it.

The pillar of cloud, which became luminous at night, was ideal for the guidance of Israel. It provided shade from the hot sun by day, and it was a sure guide in the darkness of the night.

We who believe in Christ have an even better and more precious evidence of God's presence—the Holy Spirit who indwells us. He reveals God's will to us, urging us on, or restraining us as the need may be. Are we obedient to His blessed promptings? Do we walk in the light of His perfect guidance?

Military Memorial Services Held For Lt. Harold Wicks

SERVICES HELD SUNDAY AT EVANGELICAL AND REFORMED CHURCH

Large Crowd Pays Tribute To Lt. Wicks Lost In Pacific

Full military honors were paid Lieutenant Harold A. Wicks at the Memorial services held Sunday afternoon at the Klemme Evangelical and Reformed Church, which was packed with relatives, friends and comrades of the lost flyer. The main floor and balcony of the church was filled and a public address system had been installed in the basement of the church, which was also filled by people who came to pay tribute to Lt. Wicks.

The Klemme American Legion and Auxiliary attended in a body. Veterans of World War II were out in force and in dress uniform.

As a prelude to the services Mrs. Leonard Kaduce played the hymn "Finlandia," on the piano. At the conclusion of her number those who were to take part in the services took their place behind the altar, in front of which was placed a large floral Silver Wings emblem with baskets of flowers on either side.

The Colors were advanced by the Color Bearer Kenneth Bell with Martin Barz and Paul Blank as the Color Guards The Firing Squad then advanced and took their places in front of the Colors. Robert Hartzel was in command of the Firing Squad composed of Elmer Langlitz, Melvin Schlei, Duane Josten, Franklin Kluckhohn, Geo. Netland, Joe Blank, Ronald Grosbeck, and Harold Stromer.

Lester Stille represented the American Legion and spoke briefly on the purposes of the gathering, which was followed by a military prayer given by Dr. D. P. Anderson, Chaplain of the Legion.

Special music was provided by a quartette composed of Allan Barz, Harold Swalve, Milvern Barz and Ronlad Barz. They sang "This World Is Not My Home" and "Abide With Me." Allan Barz also sang a tenor solo "The Lord's Prayer." Mrs. H. G. Voetberg accompanied the quartette and Allan on the piano.

Rev. Calvin Grosshuesch gave the memorial address and used as his text taken from Mathew 1-8: "And when they had lifted up their eyes, they saw no man, save Jesus."

As Rev. Grosshuesch was reading the scripture an airplane could be softly heard overhead. The plane was piloted by O. S. Haugland of the Mason City Airport, who flew over to pay his respects to a fallen flyer and a friend.

Near the close of the services, Robert Hartzel, in behalf of the United States Government, presented Mrs. Harold Wicks with a beautiful flag, folded in a triangle, according to military custom.

The services were concluded by the sounding of "Taps" by Francis Sherwood and the echo by Clarence Larsen, Jr., as the Colors were retreated, followed by the Color Guard and the Firing Squad.

Church ushers for the occasion were all veterans of World War II and were Dr. A. H. Dulmes, Lyle Wilcox, Harold Kothenbeutel, Otho Keraus, Franklin Buseman, Elmer Jensen, Graydon Back and Lester Neuberger.

First Lt. Harold A. Wicks, United States Army Air Forces, son of Hans and Neva Wicks, was born September 4, 1921, at Kanawha, Iowa. His father died several months before Harold was born, leaving Mrs. Wicks and her two children, Margie and Harold. In 1927 Neva Wicks was united in marriage to Albert Kehl.

The family moved to a farm near Klemme in 1927 and Harold attended the local schools graduating from the high school in 1939. He received his religious instructions at the Evangelcal & Reformed Church of which he became a member by confirmation in 1936. He was well liked among the young people for he had a pleasant disposition and was loyal and true to his friends.

He was united in marriage to Lorraine Buntenbach, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Buntenbach of Kemme, at Bakersfield, California on June 5th, 1943.

Harold entered the service of his country on November 15, 1942 and earned his Silver Wings and was commissioned a Second Lieutenant at Williams Field, Chandler, Arizona, October 1, 1943. While serving in the Pacific as a photo reconnaisance pilot of a P-38 he was promoted to the rank of a First Lieutenant.

While participating on a mission as a member of the crew on a B-25 Mitchell bomber, the plane was believed lost in a storm on the morning of December 23, 1944 between Biak Island and Leyte Island.

Extensive searches were conducted by the air forces but no trace could be found of the missing aircraft and on December 24, 1945 the War Department notified the family that Harold, with other members of the crew, were considered officially lost.

Surviving him and mourning his loss are his wife, Lorraine, his parents Mr. and Mrs. Albert Kehl, his sister Mrs. Victor Greiman, and many other relatives and friends.

COUNTY FUNDS EXHAUSTED; MORE CASES MUST BE TAKEN CARE OF

Report Shows Eleven Cases Have Been Taken Care Of At A Cost Of Over $1,800.00

Before January 31st, the people of Hancock County will be asked to make their annual contribution to the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, and this year, more than ever, we hope that you will be as generous as possible.

One-half of all money collected is kept in Hancock county and one-half goes to the National headquarters. This makes an excellent arrangement because if we run out of money (which we did) we can obtain funds from the National headquarters and pay it back when we are able.

We are proud to be able to say that during the past year in EVERY case our Chapter has paid ALL of the expenses of infantile paralysis cases which have come to our attention. We still have a few more cases to take care of both current and old cases. These will be taken care of in full as soon as we have funds on hand after the January drive.

We hope to make this January drive the most successful in history. The Foundation is doing a wonderful job and the victims of infantile paralysis in our own county have secured wonderful treatment, and in most cases have completely recovered. Be extra generous this year as our expenses have been great, we have a deficit and must pay back what we have borrowed.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Big Three Draw Closer Together; British Break Ruhr Monopoly; New Work Stoppages Looming

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

BIG THREE:
Meeting of Minds

With the declaration that "progress, and great progress, has been made," the foreign ministers of U. S., Britain and Russia concluded their quarterly conference in Moscow, and observers looked to a smoother relation between the major powers for re-establishment of order out of the dislocations in Europe and Asia.

Though the agreement between Messrs. Byrnes, Bevin and Molotov to work for control of atomic energy and eliminate it as a war weapon commanded the most popular attention, political understandings reached were equally important in their assurance of settling populations, permitting organization of comprehensive governments and spurring the resumption of trade.

One of the principal items of accord involved agreement on procedure for drafting the European peace treaties with Axis satellites, the Big Three deciding to let France in on discussions over Italy and consulting all of the United Nations on pacts covering Italy, Bulgaria, Romania, Hungary and Finland.

In agreement on Europe, the Big Three also moved to closer understanding on Asia, where they decided upon the establishment of a four-nation control commission for Japan to implement directives formulated by the far eastern advisory council with unanimous approval of the member countries.

RUHR:
British Take Mines

An integral part of Germany's economy, 130 Ruhr coal mines owned by 46 companies were taken over by the British occupation authorities in a move to break up the country's war potential and also contribute to the decentralization of the Reich's industry.

In announcing the expropriation of the properties without compensation to the owners, the British declared that the coal mines were controlled by the same monopolistic interests which dominated the iron, steel and chemical industries and exercised a decisive influence on the character of prewar German economy.

In taking over the mines, the British announced that the financial interests of France, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg in the properties would be safeguarded.

Fix Reparations

Though U. S. reparations from western Germany were set at 28 per cent of the total to be shared by 21 countries, this country's actual amount may fall short of the agreed figure since it waived rights to enemy ships and industrial equipment because of small losses in these categories.

In addition to such capital goods as plants, machinery, etc., German foreign assets, current stocks and items from production have been declared available for payments, and the U. S. is expected to draw primarily from these sources.

Besides the U. S., Britain will also receive 28 per cent of reparations, with France allotted 16 per cent. Other recipients include Yugoslavia, the Netherlands, Canada, Czechoslovakia, Belgium, Greece, India, Norway, Australia, South Africa, New Zealand, Denmark, Luxembourg, Egypt and Albania.

Under the Potsdam agreement, Russia was to obtain its principal reparations from eastern Germany, and German assets in Bulgaria, Finland, Hungary, Romania and eastern Austria.

FRANCE:
Trade Move

In a move designed to bring the purchasing power of the franc in line with foreign currencies, France devalued its monetary unit to 119 to the American dollar and 480 to the British pound.

As a result of the new arrangement, French foreign trade is expected to pick up, since the rise in prices due to decreased production will be offset by giving up more francs to the dollar or pound. In certain of its colonies where there has been no inflationary spiral, the French maintained the old value of the local franc.

Because of the dislocation of industry and commerce, France's foreign trade since liberation has been mostly of the token variety to keep overseas channels open. Some perfume, cognac and champagne has been shipped to countries abroad.

With the devaluation of the franc, the French general assembly moved on to ratification of the Bretton Woods monetary agreement, under which foreign exchange would be made available to subscribers at par rather than appreciated rates.

RAISE STATE PAY:

At least 300,000 employees of 41 states received salary adjustments during the war period, a survey disclosed.

The methods of pay adjustment varied in the states, increases being directed by legislative action in 17 states, and adjustments made through administrative action in 13 others. Six states reported pay adjustments both by legislative and administrative action.

OVERSEAS MUSIC:
Petrillo Ban

Stocky little James Caesar Petrillo, czar of the American Federation of Musicians, who got his start playing trumpet for Jane Addams' Hull House band on Chicago's west side, again reasserted his power by issuing an order prohibiting the broadcast on U. S. radio stations of all music originating in foreign countries except Canada.

Having just won a major battle with recording companies by compelling them to pay a percentage of their returns to the AFM to compensate for the reduction in regular employment of musicians through use of transcriptions, Petrillo declared he drew up his latest ultimatum to preserve the jobs of Americans. Said he:

". . . The government—everybody—protects themselves against cheap labor. Why the — should musicians be suckers? The watchmakers' union muscled the state department into telling the Swiss to stop sending (watches) into the country. We're trying to keep out foreign musicians in person or on the air."

LABOR:
New Strikes Loom

With 175,000 workers already idle by the General Motors strike in the automobile industry and the United Steel workers also threatening to walk out, the troubled labor situation took another serious turn with the CIO electrical union pondering a work stoppage in General Electric, Westinghouse and General Motors plants.

As in the case of the auto and steel disputes, the strife in the electrical industry centered around the union's move for maintenance of high wartime take-home pay, its demands equalling the steel workers' bid for a $2 a day wage increase and comparing with the auto workers' goal of a 30 per cent boost.

Active in the automobile dispute in an effort to bring the contesting parties together, government officials also took an aggressive hand in the electrical strife, with Edgar L. Warren, U. S. conciliation service director, conferring with both company and union bigwigs in an attempt to iron out differences.

NATIONAL INCOME:
Triples

From the depression low of $368 in 1933, per capita income in the U. S. jumped to $1,117 in 1944, reflecting the increased wartime economic activity.

Even before the onset of the war boom, per capita income showed a decided increase from the 1933 low, reaching $575 in 1940, still considerably under the 1944 top. Whereas such income ranged from $202 in Mississippi to $896 in Delaware in 1940, it ran from $528 in Mississippi to $1,519 in New York in 1944.

In 1940, 16 states topping the national average of $575 included California, Connecticut, Delaware, Illinois, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Nevada, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Washington and Wyoming. In 1944, all of these states except Wyoming exceeded the national figure, Indiana taking its place.

Food Experiments

More than 50 per cent of the leading schools and state universities covered in a recent survey are either conducting frozen food experiments or planning such experiments, it was revealed.

Most of the experiments are directed toward retaining the fresh flavor of fruits, vegetables, meats and dairy products without losing the vitamin content and nutritive value of the food.

CHINA:
Propose Truce

Even while 50,000 communist troops reportedly sought to cut the Yangtze river between Nanking and Shanghai, Red political leaders attempted to bring about a truce with Chiang Kai-shek's nationalist forces by suggesting the cessation of hostilities with troops of the two factions permitted to remain at present positions.

Advanced shortly after Gen. George C. Marshall's arrival in China to help untangle the complicated political situation there and promote unification of the country, the communist proposal was a modification of an earlier demand that nationalist troops withdraw to positions previously occupied before V-J Day.

Meanwhile, as communist and nationalist leaders of the political consultative council sat down to lay preparations for later discussions of unity, Red strategists sought to exert pressure on the U. S. to withdraw more support from Chiang's faction and enhance their own bargaining position in conferences. Held throughout China, leftist student rallies called upon Uncle Sam to let the Chinese settle their own differences without interference.

CANDY:
Short Supply

Because of both ingredient and labor shortages, candy production will fall short of expected demands during the first nine months of 1946, the trade predicted, with the deficit amounting to 700 million pounds.

While nuts, peanuts, many fruits, coconuts, cocoa oil and other oil, and sugar apparently will remain in short supply through most of the year, the anticipated return of workers to confectionery plants from higher paying war industries has not materialized, though leveling off of other employment and increased wages should lead to solution of the manpower problem.

In addition to prospective higher labor costs, the trade said, material costs are also expected to remain at upward levels because of the shortage of supplies and the declared program of the government to eliminate subsidies on items entering into manufacture of candy. Straightening of difficulties will be the signal for extensive plant modernization and expansion, experts said, with installation of equipment heading the program.

Journey's End

"O God, thou art my God; early will I seek Thee"—Chaplain Edwin Royal Carter Jr. of Richmond, Va., intoned as soldiers lifted the flag that covered the casket of Gen. George S. Patton and held it a few inches above the silver top.

Rain pattered upon the canvas canopy covering the burial site at the end of a long row of little white crosses in the American military cemetery in Luxemburg, Luxemburg, where 6,000 of the former G.I.s Patton had led in the historic Battle of the Bulge the year before rested in peace. Beside Patton lay the body of Pvt. John Przywara of Detroit, Mich.

"But the king shall rejoice in God; everyone that sweareth by Him shall glory; but the mouth of them that speak lies shall be stopped," the chaplain concluded in reading the fallen warrior's favorite 63rd Psalm. With the recitation of the Lord's prayer, the military men bared their heads, then three rifle volleys echoed through the hills. As taps sounded softly, all stood at attention, and distinguished generals from Russia, Britain and France held themselves stiffly in salute until Mrs. Patton turned to leave.

Most distinctive of the floral pieces honoring "Old Blood and Guts" was an evergreen wreath from the men he had led to victory. It bore the simple and touching inscription: "To our leader."

PIG CROP:
Above Average

Though falling below the department of agriculture's goal, the 1945 pig crop of 86,714,000 slightly surpassed 1944 production and topped the 10 year 1934-43 average by over 7,000,000.

While the 1945 spring pig crop fell below 1944, fall production rose to offset the early year drop, USDA reported. While large increases in the fall crop over 1944 were noted in the western corn belt, small decreases were recorded in the Atlantic states.

With 5,503,000 sows farrowed during the fall season, the number of pigs saved per litter totaled 6.38, compared with 6.34 in 1944 and 6.23 for the 10-year period.

In view of farmers' intentions to breed 8,542,000 sows next spring, the USDA's goal of 52,000,000 pigs should be achieved if the number saved in each litter equals the 10-year average. With heavy 1945 fall production and the retention of a large percentage of 1945 spring hogs on farms for extra feeding, pork supplies should be good through the ensuing months.

G.I. INSURANCE:

Despite the fact that the veteran's National Service Life Insurance is probably the greatest bargain in life insurance today, many discharged servicemen are dropping it and making a big mistake, says Dr. W. M. Curtiss of Cornell university.

Premium rates are lower than for mutual and stock companies, and include a waiver of premiums in case of disability, Dr. Curtiss said. This feature costs about 75 cents extra per $1,000 of ordinary life insurance from a private company.

Man About Town:

Lady Astor is trying to arrange a "visit to the U. S." mainly to avoid being summoned as a witness by the war criminals at Nuernburg, who still fondly recall the Cliveden Set. . . . The State Dep't is anxious to learn just how Doris (World's Richest Gal) Duke could enter Italy without a visa, which the State Dep't didn't give her. . . . The reason Herbert Hoover's marriage to a wealthy widder is being retarded, they say, is "family static." . . . Biggest story that ever happened in the Washington Press Club didn't make any of the papers. A U. S. Marine, fed up with a columnist's poison about FDR, etc., picked him up bodily and tossed him from the bar into the lobby.

After the San Francisco Conference, a Russian attache visited Hollywood as the guest of Gregory Ratoff, the director. . . . Ratoff pointed out numerous movie queens. . . . On one set Ratoff sighed: "They are all so beautiful, but, unfortunately, they don't stay happily married very long!" . . . "In Russia," explained the visitor, "one reason marriages last longer is that a wife looks the same after washing her face!"

At the 400 (which features named bands) a Broadway song plugger had too much to drink and started being a bore.

"Oh," oh'd Lenore Lemmon, "climb back into your flask!"

Errol Flynn's forthcoming book, "The Showdown," is said to be better than his first book. . . . As Flynn strolled with his friend, artist John Decker, John remarked: "I wonder if Hollywood will believe you wrote it?"

"Yes," said Errol, "if they think it's not good."

In Ciro's the other midnight Jack Haley was seated near an actor who had just lost a chance for a choice role in a film. He was popping off about "all the inefficient directors, blind producers, two-timing agents, etc." . . . Jack turned to his wife Flo and niftied: "Pardon me, honey, but I think I smell somebody burning."

Lee Sullivan, the singer, relays the yarn about the two shipwrecked drama critics. They drifted for weeks on a raft. . . . The more frightened of the two started seeking forgiveness for his sins.

"I've been a louse all my life," he said. "I've been cruel to actors. Too often I went out of my way to hurt them. If I'm spared, I promise. . . ."

"Just a moment," shouted the other one, "don't go too far. I think I see smoke from a ship!"

An executive of the Scientific Research Development Board had an appointment with Prof. Oppenheimer, the scientist who had so much to do with completing the atomic bomb. . . . Oppenheimer was to have registered at the Statler Hotel in Washington. . . . But the caller was told that he was not registered, and he wasn't. . . . This is why. . . . While the phone operator kept getting important calls for Oppenheimer—he was seated in a far corner of the foyer—patiently waiting for a room! . . . In any other country he would have been given a hotel or a palace. What dopes!

Sportsman R. S. Evans brought this back from California. . . . A street corner prejudist screamed: "There ain't enough room in this country fer furriners and us Amurricans." . . . To which a lumbering giant among the listeners interrupted: "Yessiree, especially pale-face foreigners!"

The squelcher was Jim Thorpe, American Indian Olympics star.

Nothing New Under the Sun Dept: Bob Berryman of the WOR news room has traced the origin of "wolf" as applied to current usage. . . . In the Decameron of Boccaccio, a king with a roving eye was accused of being a "wolf." The Decameron stories were published in the 16th century. . . . This king wanted a man's two daughters as his wives—and the father intoned: "I firmly believeth you to be a king and not a ravening wolf!"

John W. Raper, a Cleveland paragrapher for decades, has put some of his peppigrams between covers. The title is: "What This World Needs." . . . We liked these especially. . . . The theater box office counts the cash, not the applause. . . . Justice is what we get when the decision is in our favor.

Quotation Marksmanship: John W. Raper: Success has made failures of many men. . . . Anon: One man with courage names a majority. . . . Doris Keane: Romance and marriage are two different things. . . . Voltaire: Satire lies about literary men while they live and eulogy lies about them when they die. . . . Alan Sands: He's one of those in-the-nobodies . . . Wilson Mizner: There is something about a closet that makes a skeleton terribly restless. . . . Helen Sims: Unplanned as a hiccup.

DREW PEARSON

TRUMAN DUCKS QUESTION OF SECOND TERM

WASHINGTON. — Pres. Harry Truman isn't sticking his neck out on the 1948 political race—yet.

Democratic Rep. Edward Herbert of Louisiana and Mayor Robert Maestri of New Orleans discovered this when they called at the White House the other day.

Maestri reminded Truman that the Louisiana delegation was among the first to support him for vice president at the 1944 Democratic convention in Chicago. Then he added:

"We hope to cast our votes for you for President at the next convention."

Truman chuckled good-naturedly but that was all.

"All I can say to that," he replied, "is that I'm just doing a job here from day to day and letting the future take care of itself."

CLOTHING FOR VETERANS

Chief dilemma faced by the returning war veteran when it comes to new clothes is that either he will get clothes or his wife and sweetheart will get them. There aren't going to be enough for both.

In this choice between man and wife there is no question as to where the U. S. government stands, at least in theory—on the side of the man. He has been away fighting, his old clothes are moth-eaten and he deserves something to wear. Getting them for him, however, may be another matter.

Bottleneck of the entire problem boils down to linings. Wool clothing for men must have linings. This means rayon and cotton. At present the wool and worsted situation is improving and there probably will be almost enough for 1946.

But rayons and cottons are different. In the first place most of their production was allocated to war uses and it takes some time to get mills reconverted. Second, and here is where the sex problem comes in, most of the rayon and cotton now available for civilian use has been going to women.

In other words, women are getting the rayon blouses, the slips, the undies and other things they like to wear. Meanwhile the much more prosaic but absolutely necessary lining for men's suits is left out in the cold. In addition, the hosiery manufacturers are even asking for, and getting, a lot of rayon poundage for stockings, despite the fact that nylon is coming back.

WHY WOMEN GET BREAK

Chief reasons for this channelling of clothes to women, despite the needs of veterans, are:

1. Higher prices and more profits in women's apparel. Men's clothing manufacturers blame this on OPA.

2. The War Production board last fall issued priorities on cotton and rayon in order to spur production of medium-priced clothing, but for some strange reason entirely omitted the bottleneck of men's suits—linings.

Since then the WPB has been abolished, but its successor, the civilian production administration, if anything, perhaps, has done a little worse. Well-meaning Herbert Rose, head of the CPA textile division, who has sublime faith in the efficacy of priorities under any and all circumstances, has proceeded to grant priorities to "hardship" cases for coat linings. By the end of November, 160 "hardship" cases had received lining priorities from Washington alone with scores of other priorities issued by CPA branch offices, making the whole situation more snarled than ever.

Meanwhile, Frank Chester Bowles, who has done more to protect the American consumer than any one else in Washington, readily admits that he has made a mistake in clothing. His problem, however, is whether to get an army of women's clothing dealers on his neck by decreasing the ceilings on women's clothes, or whether to boost the price of clothes for men by allowing higher price ceilings on their clothes.

One or the other probably will be necessary even in addition to the plan for voluntary rationing of men's clothing and the issuing of clothing certificates to men at separation centers.

Now we in this country have a great form of government and a great basic concept of getting along with our neighbors. And it's time we went out as Christ did and tried to sell our American religion.

CAPITAL CHAFF

"I've been reading the platforms of the two major political parties for the past 40 years," remarked Con. Carter Manasco of Alabama, who did so much to sabotage the full employment bill. "Well, if everything called for in those platforms had been carried out, the country would have been ruined now." . . . "Most significant thing about the Republican's Chicago convention to me," remarked "Cap" Harding, secretary of the Democratic congressional committee, "is the excellent planning."

White Oilcloth Bunny Is Easy to Keep Clean

THIS white oilcloth bunny is from BOOK 6 of the series of homemaking booklets offered with these articles. Here is how:

Make a pattern by following the diagram at the upper left. Rule a paper in one-inch squares and then draw the line to cross the squares as shown. You will need one-quarter yard of oilcloth, heavy pink thread for the hand-stitched seams and two pink beads or buttons for the eyes. Cut two body pieces, four ear pieces and a strip two inches wide and thirty-six inches long for the center part of the body. Interline the ears to make them stand up. Join edges, as shown, leaving an opening in the body for stuffing tightly with cotton, then sew up.

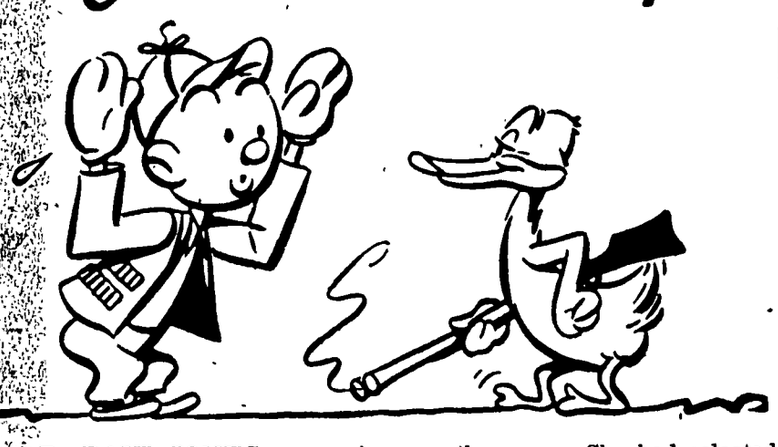
Duck Shoots Man, and Other Curious Mishaps of 1945



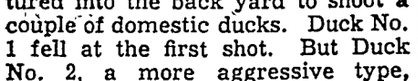
By PAUL JONES
(Director of Public Information, National Safety Council.)

BIG things happened in 1945. The war ended. The atom bomb busted. Taxes began to come down. And Mr. Bonner was shot by a duck.

Mr. Bonner is, of course, Mr. Stanley J. Bonner of Houston, Texas, as every duck now knows. On a fine October day he grabbed his trusty automatic pistol and ventured into the back yard to shoot a couple of domestic ducks. Duck No. 1 fell at the first shot. But Duck No. 2, a more aggressive type, leaped at Mr. Bonner, jarred his arm and caused the gun to go off. The bullet hit Mr. Bonner in the knee. The duck? Still alive and sassy.

Wacky? Sure. But no wackier than a lot of other freak accidents that happened in 1945. For a round-up by the National Safety Council reveals that come war, come peace, people go right on having the darnedest things happen to them. To wit:

Mrs. Edward Comfort, of Brooklyn, was driving through Virginia, her 15-month-old baby riding happily beside her in a basket strapped to the seat of the car. So far as Mrs. Comfort knew, there were no hard feelings between her and the baby.



But the child suddenly stopped contentedly drinking milk out of a nursing bottle, swung the bottle lustily, and conked Mrs. Comfort neatly on the head. Dazed, she let go the wheel and the car overturned in a ditch. Neither mother nor baby was hurt.

Hard-Headed Fellow.

Not so allergic to a thump on the head is Charles Anderson, a hardy resident of Los Angeles. Mr. Anderson, in fact, has reason to regard himself as practically indestructible. He was repairing a wall one day when a concrete block fell from a fourth-story scaffold and hit him smack on the head. He reeled into the street, just in time to be struck down by Policeman Jess Haenel's motorcycle. He recovered satisfactorily from both accidents.

And Mrs. Dorothy Jensenius was walking in Chicago's loop one day when, lo and behold, a bucket came hurtling down and hit her kerplunk.

It had been dropped by a dismayed window washer seven stories up. A shoulder injury to Mrs. Jensenius and a dent in the bucket comprised the damage.

In Toledo, Mrs. Margaret Cook's car blew a tire at a railroad crossing and careened down the tracks toward an approaching freight train. The auto struck a signal switch and threw a red block against the train, automatically stopping it.

'Stick of Wood' Goes Boom!

When a pin in her washing machine broke off, Mrs. Axel Soder of Makinen, Minn., looked around the house for a substitute pin and finally found something she thought was just the thing. She sawed off the end of it and started to hammer it into the machine. She might have done it, too, if the substitute pin hadn't exploded and blown her clear across the room. She had selected a stick of dynamite.

Hits Right Post.

Taxi-driver Ethel Sheffield's cab skidded into a lamp post in Regina, Saskatchewan, one 16-below-zero night last January. She was knocked unconscious and might have frozen to death if a fire alarm box on the lamp post hadn't been set off by the crash, bringing firemen to the rescue.

Every returning G.I. is mighty glad to see the family again, but few are so vociferous in their greetings as was Soldier Frank Chlan of Baltimore. He gave his mom a hug so big it snapped several of her ribs.

It's odd enough, perhaps, when a fire starts itself and then puts itself out. When it happens twice the same way, you begin to wonder. But once in Utica, N. Y., and again in Dark Harbor, Maine, the sun's rays, passing through a bottle of water in a truck, set fire to the floor of each truck, only to have the heat of the fire break the bottle and the water put out the flames.

Fire in Fire Station.

Probably the most embarrassed firemen in the country were the members of the volunteer department of Columbus Manor, Ill., the night an exploding gasoline tank in a pumper wagon set fire to the fire station. Unable to get their own equipment out of the station to fight the flames, the Columbus Manor laddies had to look on glumly while firemen from nearby towns did the job.

A lot of people stick their necks out in various ways, but not so spectacularly as did Virginia Triplett, an elevator operator in St. Paul. Miss Triplett was leaning her head outside the elevator on the first floor when the automatic doors closed. Passersby tugged at the doors by hand until they could be opened by mechanics.

Doorframes Too Low

Out in Hollywood, where anything can happen, "Sunset" Carson, six-foot-five cowboy movie actor, went to the studio hospital for an aspirin to help his headache. Coming out, he struck his head against the door frame, keeled over unconscious and had to have four stitches taken in his scalp.

Whether it was a suicide pact or just an accident, no one will ever know. But when Miss Bette Boren of Marinette, Wis., returned home one day last March, she found the family's two dogs on the floor, overcome by gas. They had, in some manner, turned on the stove. They were revived and haven't tried it again.

Every year someone lets a train pass over him without serious results. In 1945 it was Jesse Spitzer of Denver. Mr. Spitzer did it the hard way by first having himself an auto accident. This threw him through the roof of his car and landed him on his back in the middle of the track just as the train came along. Mr. Spitzer lay quietly and securely until the engine and long string of freight cars had roared over him, then found he had broken a leg—in the auto accident.

No year would be complete, of course, without someone falling safely out of a third-story window onto a cement sidewalk. The 1945 fall-out girl was Beverly Kay Schwartz, 20 months old, of Maywood, Ill., who escaped with a slight head injury.

Just to be different, a Chicago baby took his mother along with him when he went for a two-story plunge to the street. The year-old child slipped from a porch railing. His mother, Mrs. Audrey Hudson, grabbed for him, got him, lost her balance, and mother and son fell together. Neither was seriously hurt.

Most farsighted plunger of the year was James Hearn of Seattle, who fell three floors down an air shaft to land cozily in an easy chair.

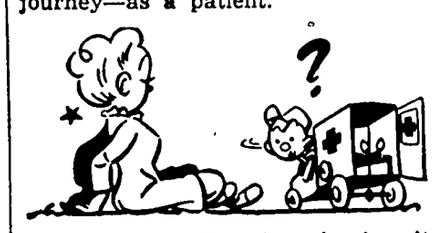
Ambulance Throws Her Out.

As Mrs. Clara Wagner accompanied a sick friend to a Chicago hospital, the ambulance in which they were riding turned a corner so sharply that the rear door flew open and Mrs. Wagner was catapulted into the street. She was returned to the ambulance, and continued the journey—as a patient.



Just to prove that America hasn't a corner on freak accidents, a wind storm in North Adelaide, Australia, scared a deliveryman's horse into running away, but also blew the deliveryman ahead of the horse in time to stop it!

Bobcats don't frighten Mrs. Donaldson of Breen, Colo. When she came suddenly upon a big one in her turkey yard, she fearlessly seized a club and attacked it. The bobcat's hide now hangs in the kitchen. Mrs. Donaldson did not suffer a single scratch.

An ordinary field mouse ran up the steering wheel of an automobile driven by Hollis Lee Randolph of Topanga, Calif. Mr. Randolph, who couldn't have been more startled had it been an elephant, lost control of his car, ran it into a ditch and turned it over. Neither he nor the mouse was hurt.

A Liberty ship crashed into a bridge in Boston harbor, knocking a 90-foot section of the bridge into the water. Although the structure carries elevated lines, automobile traffic and foot ways, there were no trains, no autos and no pedestrians on it at the time of the accident. Yet it was midday, when traffic is usually heavy. No one was hurt on the ship, either.

One of life's little mysteries to doctors and economists came when 17-month-old Larry Lingle of Harrisburg, Pa., swallowed a nickel and coughed up a penny.

Henry Hale slipped on the ice in Chicago. A policeman asked him if he was hurt. "I broke my leg," replied Henry, calmly. "Take me home."

The police did so, then asked solicitously, "What doctor do you want?"

"Doctor!" Hale snorted. "What I want is a carpenter."

Yes; it was a wooden leg.

And just as a reminder of how tough things really were during the war, Michael Babich walked up to a fellow worker in Newark, N. J., during the height of the tobacco shortage, facetiously asked for a cigarette, got one, and fainted!

Sportlight by Grantland Rice

APPARENTLY only a minor portion of football followers, addicts, old grads and others understand just what a football schedule means.

For example, playing Army in these days means you haven't a chance to be even close. Playing Navy means you are likely to be beaten. Not always. But nearly always. That is as of today. Army and Navy had the two best teams in 1945 and they will have the two best teams in 1946.

Grantland Rice

But so far as any national ranking goes we've drawn a flock of complaints, especially from the Midwest, about the quality of many southern schedules.

"I recall some years back," one Midwesterner writes, "when Bob Neyland at Tennessee took no chances of defeat. Neyland was a great coach and he had great teams. But he rarely played over three hard games a year, with many soft spots planted in between.

"In my opinion this has been true of Alabama this season. Everyone knows Frank Thomas is an exceptionally good coach and that Alabama is one of the best teams in the country. But there was no way to prove this by playing only three hard games—L.S.U., Tennessee and Georgia. I would like to have seen Alabama tested by Army, Navy, Indiana, Pennsylvania, Oklahoma A. and M. or Michigan. That's why I don't think Alabama should have been rated over Navy and Indiana, or Oklahoma A. and M. After all a national ranking gets you nowhere while a Bowl game gets you from $30,000 to $100,000."

Alabama will tell you the Crimson Tide could get no stronger outside schedule. This is true. But many of their opponents, east and west, will also tell you they are not interested in southern teams that have so many football scholarships, and Bowl-developed teams.

The Bowl Complex

I have the feeling that the Bowl complex has set southern football back in a schedule way. For example two of my favorite southern teams are Clemson and Auburn, whose elevens go back 40 or 45 years. Once they begin winning, they are too often dropped from southern schedules. The reason—"too tough." Tennessee dropped Auburn after a close 7-0 margin in 1938 that almost kept Tennessee out of an Orange Bowl meeting with Oklahoma. Georgia Tech, I understand, has dropped Clemson after Clemson's late mop-up. The South has given Clemson and Auburn all the worst of it, and yet, traditionally they belong high up.

The various Bowls, apparently, are here to stay. But they have built up two armed, hostile camps. The Midwest, including the Big Ten plus Notre Dame, have no Bowl aspirations. Neither has the Ivy League, plus Army and Navy.

This leaves Bowl selections to the West coast, the Southwest, the South and one or two stray eastern or northern teams, such as Boston College and Holy Cross.

From the South the teams willing to play a tough schedule and take a chance are Duke and Georgia Tech. Duke has been willing to face Army and Navy. Duke was unbeaten outside of these two games. Georgia Tech has been willing to meet Navy and Notre Dame, always tough customers. And Duke and Georgia Tech also meet. The last time a strong Alabama team played Georgia and Georgia Tech, Alabama lost both games.

Tulane Also Takes Risks

Duke and Georgia Tech play by all odds the hardest schedules in the South. Tulane is also willing to take a bigger gamble. The Southwest also sticks with its own, from Oklahoma to Texas, although Tulsa is willing to move away from its own home area. Tulsa played Indiana this last season.

But outside of Duke and Georgia Tech, no other southern team, including Alabama, played a schedule even close to Indiana's test with a menu that included Michigan, Northwestern, Illinois, Nebraska, Iowa, Tulsa, Minnesota, Pittsburgh and Purdue.

The South has turned out too many great football teams, too many leading football coaches and too many football stars, to permit the various Bowl collections to dominate its schedules and its play.

The Bowls, taken in their stride, are all right as postseason fill-ins but completely unimportant contributions to any national ranking.

But the Bowl games should not be used in making schedules to insure Bowl invitations, especially in the South, which has contributed too much to football to give much of its attention to any Bowls in its schedule arrangements. After all, Duke and Georgia Tech are not the only good football teams in the South. The North and the Midwest will never get to see Gilmer and Mancha, two of the country's best.

Oscillating Red Lights on Streamliners Flash Warning of Danger

A new railroad safety development involving instantaneous and automatic operation of powerful red lights at both head and rear ends of trains making emergency stops is being installed by the Chicago and North Western Railway system. Should a train with this equipment come to an emergency stop, either because the engineer set the brakes or because the air hose between any of the cars had parted, oscillating red lights at both head and rear ends of the train would go into operation automatically. The powerful beams would serve as "stop" warnings to all other trains approaching from either direction. On clear nights the red lights are visible for several miles and have considerable penetrative power in rain or fog. They can also be seen over a long range in daylight.

The automatic principle and the lights themselves were developed by the railroad and the Mars Signal Light company of Chicago working in close co-operation. It is the fourth successful step in railroad safety research accomplished by the two organizations in the past 10 years. The first came in 1936 when the Mars oscillating headlight, now a regular feature on many of the nation's fast trains, was placed on the original steam-powered "400."

Our Readers Speak

Hon. George Wilson,
Senator From Iowa,
Washington, D. C.
Re: The Strike Situation.

Dear Sir:

This everlasting fight between Labor and Industry will probably get worse before it gets better and when conditions get so bad that they are intolerable then Congress and the President will be obliged to do something whether they want to or not.

When this time comes, it will be well for all concerned to consider a few basic facts:

1. None of us can feed our families and make a decent living by working only 40 hours a week. All of the men who have prospered in this little rural town of 600 people have worked 60 hours a week or more. The farmers of this community could not make a living on a 40 hour a week basis. Look at our nation's grat men, Thos. Edison, Henry Ford, the late Pres. Roosevelt, etc. Did they work only 40 hours a week?

Thus I conclude, that if the 40-hour Union man wants to live as well as we fellows do here in Iowa, he had better arrange to get into the 60-hour per week class. We produce a half more than he does and naturally get paid better, live better, and even save a little. Just think—The Union man works the equivalent of four days a week, and then has three days a week to loaf and spend his money. Is it any wonder that he is "broke?"

2. In a free country why do we allow the "Closed Shop?" Management should be allowed to hire and fire any worker, (there is no other way to maintain discipline) and any man who wants to work should have the right to a job whether he is a Union member or not. The closed shop is so definitely un-American that I need to make no further comments.

3. The "Check Off' is unfair. It is alright for the employer to collect taxes for his Government. But why should he collect Union dues? It would be just as reasonable to collect church and lodge dues, collect merchant's bills, etc.

4. In our fact finding proceedings we should not ask to see the books of management. If you do this they will throw the whole problem of management in your lap, which will be the same as public ownership. I would hate to see this come to pass, because "our government" is so inefficient and extravagant as a "business man."

If you would be fair to Industrial Management and give them the same basic rights which you give to the small individual business man, it would encourage small industries to spring up, and thus competition would bring lower prices to the public. The Government should only act as referee.

5. When you raise the price of Labor without cause, and only because the Union requests it, you devalue the dollar.

Pres. Roosevelt devalued the dollar some years ago and the following incident illustrates how it worked out here:

A thrifty German family farmed in this community for over 20 years, and after their 6 children were grown and married, they held a public auction and disposed of their farming equipment and live stock, and the aged couple moved to Klemme in retirement. They had enough money to purchase a small home, and the remaining funds, $10,000.00 they put in our local bank at 4% interest. The old man explained to me that by having a garden and some chickens they could live well in the $400 interest they would receive each year. But, Roosevelt devalued the dollar to 59 cents and since then his interest income was reduced to $200 per year. This was not enough to keep the old couple so they started using the principle. If the dollar had not been devalued, he could have left at his death the $10,000 to his children, who had helped him earn this money, but now the entire estate will melt away and the children will get nothing. Thus when Roosevelt devalued the dollar he confiscated one half of this man's estate. Sure, this man is a small capitalist, but he atuomatically donated half of his wealth to the government when the dollar was devalued.

If labor produces more, pay them what they earn. But, with a large public debt to pay, and working only 40 hours per week, labor should expect hard time. We all feel the pinch of paying this debt, and labor is trying to evade its share by asking for higher wages, which automatically devalues the dollar and robs our old people of their lifetime savings.

The farmer is expected to take a 20% cut on his 1946 income. Does it make sense for labor to demand a 30% increase? One of our farmers said this today·

"I hope General Motors will sit tight for several months more. Maybe labor will get hungry then and go to work. We can make our old autos do for awhile longer."

The Labor Unions have quite a strong cash balance, and since they are convinced that management is taking too great a share, why don't they start their own auto factory with John L. Lewis as their noble president? They could pay their help 30% more, sell their cars at pre-war prices or less, and undersell all competition. This free country would welcome such a move.

President Truman, in his recent radio speech, asked us to voice our views, which I have done.

Yours truly,

Arthur Wellemeyer,
Klemme, Iowa.

Coal Important in Economy of Nation

Mined now in 32 states, coal has become the nation's principal source of heat and power.

Coal was first discovered by American colonists near Richmond, but was not mined commercialy until 1750, says the National Geographic society. The first mine was at Midlothian, 12 miles west of the city. The Richmond basin was mined commercially for more than a hundred years, and still contains coal, but little is now mined.

Steel, necessary for almost every type of defense equipment, is a measure of coal's importance. When Virginia coal production began, eleven colonies had ironworks, using charcoal to produce about 10,000 tons of iron a year, and small amounts of steel. Demands of World War II increased steel production by more than 50,000,000 tons a year. It requires about a ton and half of coal to make the coke to smelt a ton of pig iron to make steel. Since Pearl Harbor coke production has exceeded all previous records.

ITEMS PICKED UP FROM AROUND IOWA

LASTED FIFTY YEARS

A young spruce dug 50 years ago and used as a Christmas tree by the Henry Gode family in Marengo is now one of the largest evergreens in that city. The tree, after serving as a Christmas tree, was planted near the house by Mrs. Gode.

TUB DIED

For over 18 years, Tub was the inseparable companion of John Wanerous of Brighton. Last week Tub, a cat, died. Tub had enjoyed watching John feed the squirrels living in the large maple tree near the house and did not molest them.

GOOD WILL MISSING

During the shortage of Christmas tree lights, Maurice Hime of Audubon feels that he has discovered the meanest thief of the past year. Someone stole two strings of Christmas tree lights from 3 trees Mr. Hime had decorated on the front lawn of his home. The culprit left one string for Maurice.

STRAW-SLIDE

Ten head of stock were buried when a straw stack slid over them on the Doyle McDanel farm near Moravia. The straw was caused to slide from the weight of ice and snow and fell over the stock that had taken shelter near the stack during a recent storm. Neighbors came to the rescue, but before all animals were removed, one cow, 7 pigs and 2 gilts had been killed.

WATERMELONS AT XMAS

It is not often that Iowa residents can have such a delicacy as watermelon for Christmas. Martin Martinusen of Reinbeck placed three watermelons in a box in his basement last fall. He cut one of the melons at Christmas and found it in a delicicus condition.

ANGEL CAKE

Mrs. J. H. Hamann of Danbury has bake and sent 91 angel food cakes to men in the armed forces. She had never met most of the boys to whom the cakes were sent but has received many letters of appreciation from them. Mrs. Hamann has two boys in the service.

SEAPLANE DOWNED

It isn't often that a seaplane makes a landing in Iowa, but one was forced down near Humeston recently as a result of mechanical trouble. The plane landed near the S. C. Anderson farm home.

ELECTROCUTED

"Zambie" killed himself last week. "Zambie" is a small monkey owned by Dorothy Spencer, a Red Cross worker stationed in the Philippines for sometime. Dorothy recently visited in Indianola but at the time of "Zambie's" death, she was visiting her home in Miami, Florida. The little monkey ate the cover off of an electric cord and the voltage was too much for him. Dorothy is an alumnae of Simpson college.

FIRE! FIRE!

The Knoxville fire department will probably soon be wondering whether they should go everytime an alarm is sent in. Last week 2 false alarms sent them on calls. One alarm was for the C. L. Pine building where a flu was burning out. Another alarm was for the house where Lewis Brese family lives. The latter "fire" was only warm air coming out an open door causing steam to roll up over the porch. No damage was caused at either "blaze."

NOT BADLY NEEDED

With tire rationing now over, Buchanan county tire dealers are receiving some unused tire certificates that had been issued previously. One certficate turned in was dated July, while several others were several weeks old.

DIFFERENT DAYS

Mrs. Marshall Cherryholmes of Chariton will have to bake two birthday cakes each year only one day apart for her twin sons. The two boys were born to Mr. and Mrs. Cherryholmes last week. One was born on Sunday, and the other on Monday.

FOOTNOTES on FARM HOUSING

by LLOYD SHERWOOD
NORTHERN LUMBER CO

There's a lot of talk going around among the women-folk about better-planned kitchens; and no wonder, because the housewife walks literally hundreds of extra miles a year when her kitchen is not a compact, labor saving work center. And she also does a lot of unnecessary stretching and bending. Rightly, the kitchen should be the best-arranged and most attractive room in the house. Too often, it is a mere make-shift.

Now, what are some of the model kitchen's needs? As a food production center, it must be sanitary. Crevices and corners which collect dirt and are hard to clean should be eliminated. Materials for work surfaces and storage space must be durable and washable. Closed cabinets for staple foods and supplies are cleaner and save steps. There should be plenty of fresh air. An exhaust fan will carry off odors and vapors all the year 'round. Light is important. There should be at least one large window, preferably over the sink. and so located that the farm wife can see the men in the fields, and keep an eye on the stock. Color is very important, because it adds so much to the cheeriness of the room.

The model kitchen is divided into three main work centers: The Sink Center; the Range Center, and the Mixing Center. These three units, properly outfitted with utensils, should be related to each other so that work flows conveniently from one center to the other.

The Sink Center should be located centrally both to the Mixing Center and the Range Center. A counter about 24 by 36 inches is usually adequate for stacking soiled dishes at the right of the sink, and one about 24 by 32 inches at the left of the sink should be large enough for the clean dishes placed there for drying. A recent survey by the University of Illinois showed that most women prefer a height of 32½ in for the bottom of the sink. If the bottom of the sink is 32½ inches from the floor, the side counters should be at least 38½ inches in height.

The Mixing Center should be convenient to the sink, refrigerator, and range. The work counter should be at least 36 inches long. and there should be wall and base cabinets. The wall cabinet should be at least 16 inches above the working surface so an electric mixer can be used. The working height of the Mixing Center should be about 32 inches.

The Range Center should be near the Mixing Center, adjacent to the Sink Center and convenient to the dining area. Work counters should be level with the top of the range, and have heat-resistant covering. Such a counter on either or both sides of the range is convenient for placing and serving hot foods. Base cabinets should include drawers or sliding shelves for cooking utensils. A full height cabinet (from floor to top of wall cabinets) is useful for storing articles related to cooking.

The wall cabinet capacity of the kitchen is based on square foot of shelf space, with an allowance of 6 square feet per adult in the family. Base cabinet capacity is figured on linear front feet of cabinet, not including the range and refrigerator.

Here are some examples:

Two bedrooms, 3 persons, require 30 sq. ft. of shelf space in wall cabinets; 4½ to 6 linear feet of shelf space in base cabinets.

Three bedrooms, 4 persons require 36 sq. ft. of shelf space in wall cabinets, and 6 to 7½ linear ft. of shelf space in base cabinets.

Four bedrooms, 5 persons, require 42 sq. ft. of shelf space in the wall cabinets, and 7½ to 9 linear ft. shelf space in base cabinets.

TURK STILL LIVES

Turk, as he was called, was given away recently at a "Feather Party" by the Emmetsburg firemen. Harry L. Brown won the 29 pound bird and had planned to enjoy it at his Christmas dinner. During the time which elapsed from the winning of the turkey and Christmas, Turk became the neighborhood pet, gaining 3 lbs. on the half-bushel of corn he ate. When it came time to put the axe to Turk's neck, Brown just could not do it, and at last reports Turk was still strutting around in the Brown's back yard!

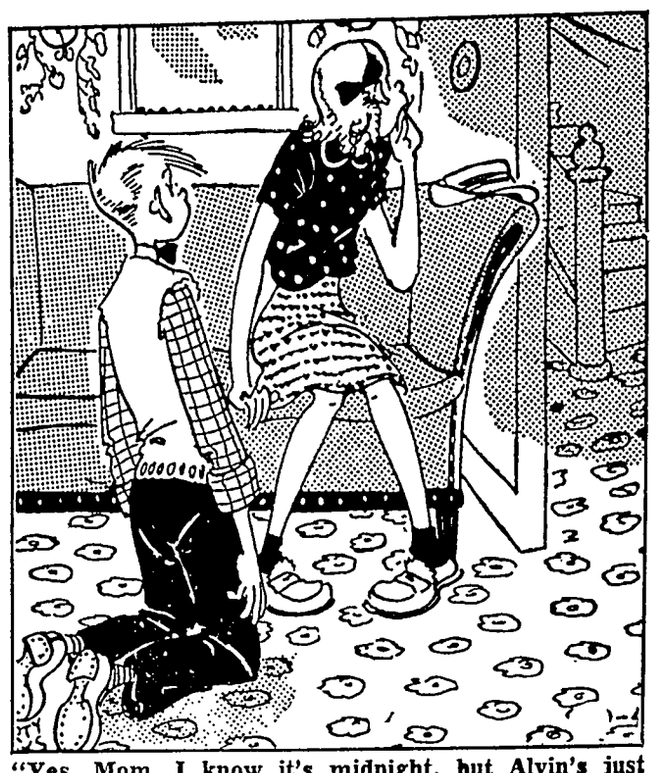
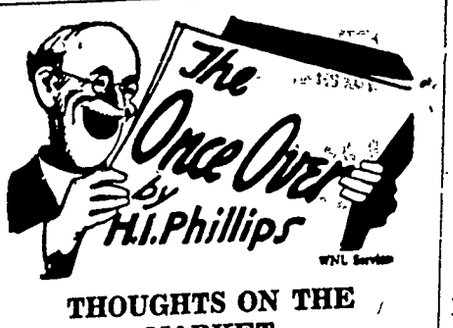
"Do they deduct from his pay for all of this idle time?"



"Yes, Mom, I know it's midnight, but Alvin's just reached a point where he's asking me for another chance!"



THOUGHTS ON THE MARKET

Scenes resembling those leading up to the 1930 stock market crash are now visible in all brokerage offices. And they are being re-enacted in technicolor.

—*—

A burned child dreads the fire, but an adult will always go for second degree burns if the tips "are hot" enough.

—*—

There is even a more reckless mood in today's buying due to the fact this is a screwier age in which the gambling fever has never run higher. Horses, dice, gin rummy and football pools have made America risk-slappy.

—*—

Most people have more cash than they know what to do with, so they are accepting advice from strangers.

—*—

The horse players are in the market, too. We heard a fellow rush up when his stock went off a point yesterday and claim a foul.

—*—

He is the same one who boasted that he had bought Chrysler and Eastman, and thought they had a good chance in the daily double at the weights.

—*—

All some brokerage offices need is a smell of hay, a list of jockeys, an objection heard and a morning line.

—*—

In fact, it is our belief the stock market should no longer be opened with a gong. It is time to use a bugle.

—*—

Remember away back when "Never Again!" was the Voice of America so far as speculating in stocks was concerned?

Reflections on Housing

The housing crisis has reached a point where it is suggested that "Tenting Tonight" replace "Home, Sweet Home" as an American folk song.

A four-room fabricated house at $2,399 is on sale at a New York department store. "What floor for residences, landscape gardening and cinder paths, please?"

—*—

The old-fashioned American may have been remiss and dumb in many ways, but he never confused a new home with a chicken house.

BACK HOME STUFF

Frank Bergen, ex-Princeton quarterback, is now a court magistrate back home and making quite a record for homespun philosophy. The other day, replying to a woman's complaint that the smoke from a kerosene lamp made her apartment unhealthful, Frank came out as a defender of the lamp.

—*—

"What do you mean by that?" he demanded. "I grew up in the kerosene-lamp era, and never knew it to hurt anybody. Did you trim the wick? Do you realize that it takes a lot of work to keep a kerosene lamp in good condition, but that if you do it, it's fine?"

—*—

Which brings back memories of kerosseners in our boyhood. There were some pretty beautiful ones. The parlor lamp was especially high, wide and fancy. And trimming the wicks was a nightly chore. Mom was forever polishing the globes. Looking back, they seem the loveliest lamps in the world. We were sent often to the corner store for kerosene, and it just comes back to us how Lutz, the grocer, used to stick a potato over the spout as a cork.

* * *

Elmer Twitchell says there hasn't been any real happiness in the world since the old-fashioned wooden beer keg went out.

—*—

A radio program which makes phone calls at random and offers cash prizes if the subscriber answers a question had this one the other day, "Under what king was Daniel tossed into the lion's den?" Elmer Twitchell lost the pot by replying, "This is a deep humiliation, but I can't even recall the name of the lion."

* * *

"Molotov uses the American term 'Okay' and knows it means yes in English."—News Item.

—*—

But does he know what means "yes" in Russian?

Asked if he didn't want to take a look at the recent total eclipse of the moon Fred Allen quipped, "No, I'll catch it next time."

New York showmen are amazed at the development, into a hit show of 1945, of "The Red Mill," a musical first produced in New York thirty-nine years ago. It was put on for a limited run of eight weeks, but has developed into a sell-out. Many are the explanations offered, but we think the score, which is almost a grade A catalog of Victor Herbert's best known song hits, is mainly responsible. Such melodies as "In Old New York," "Everyday Is Ladies' Day With Me" and "Because You're You" not only delight grandma, but mother, too, knew them, and even the kids and grandkids have felt their chirin' on the phonograph and radio.

Serve a Breakfast That Spells a Cheery Morning
(See Recipes Below)

Bright Beginning

Do you serve the kind of breakfast that demands to be eaten, or are you content to let the family slip away with just a sip of fruit juice and a swallow of hot coffee?

Surveys show that people spend an average of 12 minutes eating breakfast. Five minutes more time to eat a good breakfast can give added energy for the day's work, and about a third of the day's share in calories and nutrients.

Few women spend the time in planning breakfast that they give to other meals. The only way to serve a good breakfast is, of course, to plan it in advance. It should be appetizing and interesting, with foods prepared carefully and served appetizingly. There should be contrast in the texture, flavor and color of foods to avoid monotony.

Breakfast, too, can have the glamour that other meals possess. Bright cheerful dishes and linens dispel early morning gloom. Flowers and other pretty centerpieces make an attractive setting. The breakfast table should be set away from kitchen odors and confusion, and the setting should be as cheery as possible. Above all, be cheerful, yourself!

Use Variety in Fruits.

Fruits in season offer a good way of introducing variety to the breakfast. There will be berries, juicy and bright-colored, fruit juices, and often, of course, the fruit itself, halves of grapefruit, sliced oranges, delicious pears, peaches, etc.

Incidentally, right now there are some winter pears which are plentiful. Anjou pears which run from green to creamy-yellow in skin color are juicy and full-flavored when each the peak of their season about this time and are available until April. The Bosc, which is a russet-skinned, small and extra-sweet pear, starts trickling to the market now and will be available until May. Bosc pears which are russet-skinned, with a long tapering neck, and Comice pears which are similar to the Anjou are still available, but are passing.

Serve Cereals.

Cereals help add carbohydrate or energy to the diet, and they are available in a variety of ways. You might like a nice hot bowl of cooked cereal or wheat cereal to start the day, and then again it may be one of the prepared cereals that strikes the fancy. Try a variety in cereals, too.

It may be wise to combine the cereal with some fruit to have picture-pretty cereals for breakfast. This is easily done with canned fruits, berries or even the fresh, sliced variety.

Lynn Says:

You'll want these handy hints for housekeeping: To keep iron frying pans in good condition, give them a soda bath occasionally. Mix two tablespoons of soda with two quarts of hot soapy water. Place the frying pans in this and boil gently for a few minutes. Rinse well and wash in more soapy water.

Cotton flannel cloths are excellent for polishing silverware. Keep old flannel cloths on hand and wash them often in hot soapy water.

Slow drying at a moderate temperature is best for woolens. Never expose them to excessive heat, direct sun rays or freezing temperatures.

Place a teaspoon of salt in water in which eggs are boiled. This aids in keeping the shell from cracking.

Popular Breakfast Breads.

Toast is our national breakfast bread favorite, but it should never be allowed to reach the doldrum stage. Different types of may be used, and of course, there are numerous spreads to entice weary breakfast appetites. Picture the pleasure of the family when they see golden slices of toast with a dish of cranberry orange marmalade that can be spread thick while the toast is hot. Or, cranberry preserves, made from fresh berries, are particularly appealing to morning appetites because of their tart, bright flavor.

If you plan breakfasts carefully, then you will find time to spare for baking some of those delicious quick breads that make such a delightful feast of this first meal of the day. Here are several bright beginnings:

Honey Butter Roll-Ups.
(Makes 16)

2 cups sifted flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons shortening
⅔ to ¾ cup milk
1 tablespoon melted butter
2 tablespoons honey
½ teaspoon cinnamon

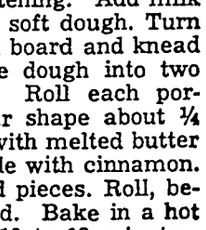
Sift flour, baking powder and salt. Cut or rub in shortening. Add milk and stir to form a soft dough. Turn on a lightly floured board and knead ½ minute. Divide dough into two equal proportions. Roll each portion into a circular shape about ¼ inch thick. Brush with melted butter and honey. Sprinkle with cinnamon. Cut into pie-shaped pieces. Roll, beginning at wide end. Bake in a hot (450-degree) oven 10 to 12 minutes.

Date-Orange Muffins.
(Makes 1 dozen)

½ cup sifted flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 tablespoon sugar
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup dates, cut fine
Grated rind of 1 large orange
1½ cups whole wheat flour
¼ cup molasses
1 egg, beaten
1 cup milk
¼ cup shortening, melted

Sift together white flour, baking powder, sugar and salt. Add dates and orange rind; mix well. Add flour. Combine molasses, egg, milk and melted shortening and add to dry ingredients mixing only until the dry ingredients are moistened. Do not beat until smooth. Spoon batter into well-greased muffin tins, filling them ⅔ full. Bake in a hot (400-degree) oven for about 20 minutes.

Don't forget that eggs add nourishment and interest to breakfast and may be prepared in any number of ways. You'll like sausage-flecked omelet, bacon-flecked waffle, creamy scrambled eggs with ham, and poached eggs riding on top of golden brown toast.



And if it's variety you're seeking, then try these special pears filled with sausage for a breakfast treat:

Sausage Pears.
(Serves 6)

6 pears
Juice of 1 lemon
Brown sugar
½ pound bulk sausage
¼ cup water

Peel and core pears. Leave whole. Sprinkle with lemon juice and place a heaping teaspoonful of brown sugar in each pear. Crumble sausages and fry until brown. Drain off fat. Pack cooked, drained sausage into pears, filling generously. Arrange pears upright in baking dish, add water and bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven for 30 minutes or until pears are tender.

Unemployment Increases

The veterans' administration has paid out approximately $102,750,000 as of December 15, for unemployment compensation to approximately 331,000 veterans of World War II.

For the week ending December 1, the total of jobless veterans was 247,360 out of about 4,000,000 discharged from the armed services.

But according to records of the veterans' administration, each week sees an increase in the number of jobless in all states except three. These three are Michigan, where as of November 24 and the week ending December 1, unemployment had decreased from 18,414 to 13,770; Ohio, where the decrease was from 3,954 to 1,337 and in Oklahoma where jobless decreased from 2,430 to 1,434.

In New York unemployed veterans increased from 32,000 to 52,000; Texas from 12,000 to 22,000; New Jersey from 11,000 to 16,000; California from 10,000 to 14,000; Illinois from 9,000 to 13,000 and Massachusetts from 13,000 to 17,000. All other states showed a proportionate increase.

Questions and Answers

Q. My boy entered the army in June, 1943, and went overseas early in December of the same year. I am his aged and crippled mother, all the dependent he has. Is he entitled to a discharge? — M. W., South Edmuston, N. Y.

A. Not necessarily. If you wish to apply for his discharge on a dependency or hardship basis, consult with your local Red Cross about inaugurating such a discharge.

Q. Would a discharged soldier with 40 months' service, 27 months overseas, be eligible for the $20 per week income, where he has rented a farm and moved to same, is married and has no regular income?—A. L., Winfield, Kans.

A. No. The veterans' administration says you must register with the USES and apply for a job in order to be eligible for unemployment compensation. However, the law says that where a veteran enters business for himself and his earnings in the previous month were less than $100, he may apply for an allowance equal to the difference between $100 and his net earnings for that month. Suggest you apply to your nearest regional veterans' administration office to determine if farming is regarded as a business.

Q. My brother has served four years in the army, two in the states and two overseas. He is in the air corps and has 70 points. Why is he not already discharged? — Sister, Converse, La.

A. There is no reason why he is not already out of the army, if he wants to be out, unless he is in the Pacific theater where there is a shortage of transportation. Return of some high point men is being held up because of lack of transportation from this area.

Q. My husband was inducted into the army in July, 1942, at which time we had one child. For three months, August, September and October, 1942, I did not receive an allotment. Am I entitled to get that pay now? I wrote to them many times but never got an answer. My husband is now discharged.—Wife, Greenbush, Minn.

A. Write to the Office of Dependency Benefits, War department, Newark, N. J.

Q. If boys who had signed up for one year in the regular army are sent overseas, will they be returned to the states when their year is up or will they have to remain until they get enough points?—F. L., Lancaster, Wis.

A. If you mean boys who have reenlisted in the regular army for one year after at least six months' service, they will be discharged at the end of the year's service.

Q. Is there any chance of my husband getting a discharge from the army on the ground of owning a small farm? He is over 35 but has only three points to his credit.—A reader, Columbus, Ohio.

A. There is not much chance unless he can prove that the produce from his farm constitutes a public necessity in his community.

Q. Please tell me why there are men walking around with discharges and 41 points and no children, when my husband is in Europe with 68 points and four children?—Mrs. L. H., Charlottesville, Va.

A. Your husband is certainly eligible for a discharge and the war department says he should be home by January 1, 1946, unless he has requested continued overseas service. All men with three children are eligible for discharge under present discharge rulings of army.

THE LAWS OF A PEOPLE

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:1-17.
GOLDEN TEXT—I will delight myself in thy commandments, which I have loved.—Psalm 119-47.

Law is necessary to order. Basic laws have been laid down by God for the orderly administration of His universe.

Physical laws are of great importance, but of even deeper significance are the moral and spiritual laws which control the human life. There is in the world a moral law—a distinction between right and wrong—which man may ignore only to his own sorrow, and which he cannot abrogate or destroy. All laws of men which are true and right are founded on this underlying moral law, and they are in reality simply a development and interpretation of "God's Code of Morals"—the Ten Commandments.

These fundamental laws were given to Israel at Mount Sinai, but they speak to us with remarkable freshness and directness. They merit more extensive study than we can give them in this limited space, but we can note their broad outlines and certain practical applications. There are two divisions—one concerns man in his relation to God, and the other in his relation to men. We have:

I. A Right View of God (vv. 1-11).

The first and most important question to be asked regarding any law is, "By whom was it established?" Legislation by an unauthorized person or organization has no power over others. Who gave the Ten Commandments? Verse 1 tells us "God spake all these words."

Men may sneer at theology as being outmoded, but the fact is that Christian doctrine is the only safe foundation for Christian character.

1. Whom to Worship (vv. 2-5). There can be but one true God, and He alone is to be worshiped. He is a personal being, ready to enter into communion with each one of us. No image or likeness can take His place. Bowing down before idols, no matter what they may be called, is expressly forbidden by God.

2. How to Worship (vv. 6, 7). We are to love Him and to keep His commandments. There is to be no sham about this, for no matter how sweet and pious may be the praise and prayer of man, he has taken the Lord's name in vain unless he keeps the Lord's commandments by holy living.

3. When to Worship (vv. 8-11). God has ordained that man should not incessantly bear the burden of toil. He is to have a day of rest and a time for worship, undisturbed by the duties and responsibilities of daily labor.

America needs a mighty stirring up about the desecration of the Lord's day. The stalwarts of the last generation fought a valiant battle against a rising tide of secularism and worldly pleasure. Now no one seems to care. Do you? "Six days shalt thou labor." Give God one day out of seven.

II. A Right View of Man (vv. 12-17).

To be right with God means that we will also be right with our fellowman. Conversely, the man who is manifestly wrong in his relation to his fellowman is either not right with God at all, or he is not living out his Christian life in practice. This should show in:

1. Family Life (v. 12). The fifth commandment has to do with the relation between child and parent. There is a plain and direct command that father and mother should be honored. Only in respect and obedience to parents can the child possibly find true and proper development.

Parents who have permitted children to go astray during the war years will need to stress anew the God-required obedience to their authority.

2. Physical Life (vv. 13, 14). God is interested in our bodies. Already we have noted His provision for a day of rest each week. Now we are reminded of the sanctity of human life. "Thou shalt not kill," and remember there are many other ways to kill a man other than shooting him.

Let us be sure that we are not a party to the destruction of anyone's life either by reason of carelessness or greed.

Note the emphasis on adultery. Moral uncleanness, which is so awfully common in our day, is one of the most effective methods of destroying the body even while degrading and defiling the soul with sin.

3. Social Life (vv. 15-17). "Thou shalt not steal"—and remember any dishonest appropriation of what does not belong to you is stealing, call it what you will. And "false witness"—how it has honeycombed our very civilization! Not a little of it is found within the church, more shame upon us! Lastly, we come to "covetousness" — which has been called one of the "respectable sins of nice people." It is subtle and often hidden. Let us root it out of our own lives by God's grace.

To get quick relief from coughs due to colds, you should make sure by mixing your own cough syrup at home. It's no trouble at all, and you know it's pure and good. It needs no cooking, and it's so easy to make that a child could do it.

From your druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle, and add enough plain syrup to fill up the pint. 25 TIMES MORE ACREAGE between sharpenings when plowshares are STOODITED
STOODITE, the wear-resistant alloy that's welded onto all farm implements to prolong their life, keeps plowshares sharp 25 to 30 times longer than ordinary steel shares!

▶ Shares are Stoodited on the under edge and on the point only. Topside of shares wears away naturally—the thin Stoodite remains beneath to form an ever-sharp shearing edge

▶ Stoodite scours to a mirror finish—Plowshares readily turn the slice and maintain even furrows.

▶ Plowshares can be Stoodited twice—often three times! Each Stoodite application increases share life from 3 to 5 times.

▶ Stoodite is applied in your local town—Any welder or blacksmith having oxy-acetylene welding equipment can apply Stoodite. Distributed in the U S by over 600 dealers.

WRITE FOR HARDFACING HANDBOOK!

Written especially for farmers, job shops, and blacksmiths, this complete 28 page "Stoody Handbook for Hard-Facing Farming Equipment" pictorially illustrates and describes Stooditing methods on all types of implements. Sent free on request—write for this valuable manual today!

Klemme Couple Celebrated Golden Wedding Tuesday

MR. AND MRS. JOHN NEUBERGER MARRIED 50 YEARS JAN. 22

Dinner Held In Their Honor At The Klemme Methodist Church Dining Room At Noon

Mr. and Mrs. John Neuberger of Klemme celebrated their Golden Wedding Anniversary Tuesday, January 22, 1946, at a dinner at the Methodist Church dining room at noon with their children and other relatives and friends and held open house at their home from 2:00 until 5:00 p. m.

John Neuberger and Miss Marie Jahnke were married at the Methodist Parsonage in Klemme, Iowa, on January 22, 1896 by the Rev. Haefner, who was then pastor.

They immediately began housekeeping on their farm east of town where they resided continuously for 46 years, when they retired and moved to town, having purchased a modern home here four years ago.

They are the parents of nine children, a daughter Margaret Marie having died at the age of 1½ years. All of the other children reside near Klemme, with the exception of their son John, who now lives at Brownsville, Texas. The other children are Walter of Ventura; William of Klemme; Merlin of Klemme; Clarence of Klemme; Fay (Mrs. Asa Gibbs, of Garner; Mae (Mrs. Walter Blumer, Klemme; and Ruth of Klemme. They also have fourteen grandchildren. All of their children were home for the Golden Wedding celebration of their parents.

A long table was set in the dining room of the church which was decorated in the color scheme of yellow and white, with a large decorated wedding cake, on top of which was a gold bell, served as the centerpiece. Bouquets of yellow snapdragons, jonquils and red roses in vases added to the attractiveness of the tables. Mr. and Mrs. Neuberger were seated near the center of the long table along with their children and their wives and husbands. Other relatives and friends were seated at a second table and the grandchildren had a table for themselves.

Rev. Herschel E. Harvey gave a prayer of thankfulness before the guests were seated.

Among the flowers was a bouquet of roses which John Neuberger had picked from his own garden at Brownsville, Texas, which he brought for his parents. Another bouquet was the gift of Seaman Leo Blumer, who is stationed on the west coast. Leo is a grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Neuberger.

After the dinner Mr. and Mrs. Neuberger were each presented with a beautiful gold Bulova watch in a plush case, a gift from all of their children. They also received many other beautiful gifts and messages of congratulations from friends and relatives.

Many relatives and friends came to their home during the hours of open house to congratulate Mr. and Mrs. Neuberger. Guests were served coffee, cake and brick ice cream. Friends and relatives at the Neuberger home were from this community and several other towns in this part of the state.

A poem, which pleased both Mr. and Mrs. Neuberger, is the following written by Mary Ann, the 11 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Blumer, a grand daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Neuberger:

Golden Anniversary

Now it is your anniversary,
In fact for fifty years.
Together you have made a home,
Thru trials and joys and tears.

You've raised a family,
A full two-thirds of a dozen,
Now they have had kids too,
A mob of fourteen cousins.

And we hope that this,
Your Golden Wedding day
Be just as happy and bright,
As your joyful wedding day!

In closing, Grandma and Grandpa,
Please do hear us say,
From all of us, to you,
A Happy Golden Wedding Day!

Farm Bureau Members Near 1200 Mark

ELL TOWNSHIP FIRST TO MAKE MEMBERSHIP QUOTA

Over 1100 Members In Farm Bureau Since Annual Drive

The Hancock County Farm Bureau drive is really in high gear after the kick off of January 7.

Ell was the first township to report with a quota of 105. They had 107 memberships in the bag by 8:30 o'clock the first day of the drive. They have a total to date of 110 and more to go. They just won't quit.

Garfield was a close second with a quota of 95. They reported 102 in the office Wednesday night. They still are planning where they can get the next one.

Erin township was third with a quota of 52 and having 56 paid in the office to date. Several other townships are just ready to go over the top. The total paid to date, January 18, is 1104. There are two townships yet to report which just proves that it can be done and the only way is just to get out while the iron is hot and do it.

Let's get back of the drive while the machinery is in motion and have that VICTORY party before spring work. It's all up to you.

Chas. F. Jackson,
Co. Organization Director.

Garner Cardinals Defeat Klemme Shamrocks

The Garner Cardinals basketball teams won a double header on the Klemme court Friday evening when the Garner reserves won a close one from the Little Shamrocks 17 to 16.

In the feature contest the Cardinals dumped in a basket on their first play and ended the 1st quarter with a comfortable 11 to 4 lead over the Shamrocks. Garner widened the margin to close the half with a 21 to 9 lead.

The half-time lead was stretched to 31 while the Shamrocks ran their count up to 17 at the end of the third quarter.

The Shamrocks threatened in the final stanza when they rolled up 13 points and held Garner to 6, but the rally was too late and the Cardinals won 37 to 30.

For Klemme Brinkman and Jacobs each scored 11 points, Grosshuesch 6 and Baack 2.

Kirschbaum paced the Cardinals with 17 counters; Steinberg had 13, Greiman 6 and T. Romp 2.

AUTO THIEVES CAUGHT IN MINNESOTA

FORMER KLEMME MAN INVOLVED IN THEFTS HERE

Three Men In Austin Jail Following Arrests By Officials

Sheriff's officers in Hancock and Cerro Gordo counties, who have been working the past month on tracking down the thieves who stole four automobiles in Hancock and Cerro Gordo counties and who broke into the Etchen garage in Klemme the night of December 18 and stole tools and merchandise valued at $500, have solved the crime, aided by men from the state bureau of investigation of Iowa and Minnesota.

Three men are in jail at Austin, Minnesota, following their arrest by Sheriff Arnold Eckhardt and Max Studer, Iowa state agent, on information furnished by the sheriff's office.

The three men arrested at their homes in LeRoy, Minn., are Donald Ralph Holmen, John Alvin Holmen, cousins, and Homer Louis Blickenderfer.

A confession by John Holmen confirmed in detail the movements of the trio as previously traced by the local sheriff's office. With 2 others they came in 2 trucks for loads of corn south of Portland in Cerro Gordo countl. One truck was loaded and left for LeRoy with the 2 men not implicated in the robberies.

The remaining three men (named above) were to have loaded the other truck with corn but instead drove to Clear Lake where they ate supper at the home of Blickenderfer's grandmother. Afterward they drove to Thornton and, according to the confession, stole a car there belonging to Francis Sandry. Subsequent movements were related by the confession as follows:

They then drove on to Meservey and stole a car belonging to Henry Kuhler. This car was abandoned south of Alexander after being partly stripped. They then drove to Kanawha where they stole a 1941 pickup truck which was taken west of town and stripped of tires and batteries.

They continued on to Britt where they stole a car belonging to Fred Thiel from his garage, pushing it with their truck until they got outside of town and could wire around the switch, since they lacked a key.

They then drove east beyond Klemme to a point opposite the Linden Ranch where they stripped the Thiel car of tires, radiator and motor. The Sandry car also was abandoned nearby after being stripped of all 5 wheels and minor accessories.

They then drove to Klemme where they broke into the Etchen garage and stole a motor head, a quantity of tools, spark plugs, etc., after which they continued home in their truck.

John Holmen received the motor as his share of the loot, he said, and was seen changing it for the one in his truck on Dec. 22. His old motor he dumped through the ice on a stream north of LeRoy.

Two of the men had previously been implicated in similar robberies, according to the sheriff's office.

Blickenderfer lived in Klemme several years ago when his father was in the trucking business here.

Blueprint for Labor-Management Love and Kisses

This is the Elmer Twitchell plan for Better Understandings Between Labor and Management:

1—Fundamentally all the trouble is due to the fact neither side completely understands the other. There can be no peace until some system is adopted, so that each side can experience all the headaches of the other.

2—Workers do not get enough golf. Employers do not get enough life without golf. Let the workingman have the golf clubs six months a year and provide him with a set of clubs. After a few weeks of worrying over backswings, the right grip, etc., all other problems will seem relatively unimportant. And the boss, six months away from golf and not giving a darn about the pivot or knee action would find himself a different person. Positively.

3—Let the workers split with the bosses the routine of going through the mail, answering the unnecessary letters, correcting Miss Abernathy's spelling, trying to find the memoranda which was put where it couldn't be mislaid, wading through those long lunches at the Business Men's club, taking all those indigestion tablets from 2:30 to 4:30 and then getting home to find the wife's bridge party is still on.

4—Alternate months let the workers prepare banquet speeches, sit through dull operas, get into stiff shirts and tuxedos for dinner, use three types of fork and worry about stomach ulcers. And make the boss go to those smokers, stop for a beer at Hennessy's, listen to the soap operas, have a quickie of corned beef and cabbage and endure all those double features.

5—For part of every month make the workers serve on new relief campaigns, worry over dinner speeches, explain to stockholders, wade through the questionnaires, fill out the required federal forms and always keep their pants pressed; while the bosses shake their own drinks, help mind the baby, listen to the radio in their stockinged feet and tend the furnace.

6 — Let the workingman have three homes, two cars, an outdoor swimming pool, a yacht and those week-end house parties. That should help make him realize what the boss has to stand up under. And make the employer live in the little bungalow, raise tropical fish, get along with the undersized medicine cabinet, use the family tub, fix his own plumbing, eat in his shirt sleeves and help eight kids with the homework. Brother, there will be closer understandings after that.

(Copies of the above plan may be had by sending in a barrel of potatoes, a priority on a new Ford and eight lumps of sugar.)

Thoughts on a Housing Crisis

The Indian was not so dumb—
He didn't toil or fiddle;
He never had to hunt a home
Or solve a housing riddle.

The Red Man is my envy now—
He lived in tents galore, sir,
And they were as he left them when
The guy came home from war, sir!

Elmer Twitchell is pretty angry at the wife. When he refused her an extra two dollars the other day, saying he couldn't afford it, she threatened to name a fact-finding board.

Fiorello LaGuardia is going to the Brazilian inauguration of a new President as an official ambassador from America. Up to now the new head of Brazil has never had anybody read the American funnies to him.

Joe E. Brown is credited with killing two Japs in a Luzon combat. It was no feat of marksmanship. The Japs had approached to within 10 yards of Brown's mouth thinking they were entering an unprotected ravine.

We can't figure out why, in looking for a place to name as the permanent seat of UNO the town of Amityville, N. Y., was overlooked. And Peace Dale, R. I.

And, since the peaceful influence is a main consideration in UNO how about Pigeon Cove, Mass.?

CAN YOU REMEMBER:

Away back when the attitude "The public be damned" was expressed within limitations.

The southland is having a tough winter. Which reminds us of the winter down in Florida when a Miami paper carried the headline, after a bad storm, "Yankee Blizzard Hits South."

And, thinking back on our Miami Beach winters, we wonder if that sign is still there: "Casa Shapiro."

Packaged Mixes, Sugar, Syrup Aid Sweet Tooth

Even new brides will find it simple to make creamy-smooth chocolate pie with the directions given in the column. Whipped cream or meringue may be used as a topping for this chocolate delight.

Culinary Strategy

If you're one of those cooks who likes to have toothsome dishes to set on the table, but hates to fuss with too many of the frills, then there's no time like the present to try out some of the ready-mixed foods.

New brides, and by those I mean not only the recently wed, but those who have been married for awhile, but are just now cooking for a brand new husband, will find plenty of help on grocery shelves.

A twist of the wrist at home, an eye to attractive decoration, along with an ability to follow instructions will yield rich rewards.

It used to be that a pie was difficult to tackle, but not with all the sugar-saving mixes we now have on hand. You can use one of the packaged preparations for the filling, or sweetened condensed milk which is now back on the market.

The pie shell, too, may be made of a ready-prepared mix, or it can be tossed together from one of the good pie crust recipes which you have on hand. In a cream pie, the crust is baked ahead of time and allowed to cool before filling.

Magic Chocolate Pie.

2 squares unsweetened chocolate
1⅓ cups (1 can) sweetened condensed milk
½ cup water
Baked pie shell (8-inch)

Melt chocolate in top of double boiler. Add sweetened condensed milk, stirring over boiling water about five minutes or until mixture is thickened. Add the water and mix until thoroughly blended. Pour into baked pie shell and garnish with whipped cream, if desired. Chill before serving.

Butterscotch Tarts.

Make tart shells either in muffin tins or small pie plates. Prepare butterscotch filling according to directions on packaged mix, adding a beaten egg yolk and melted butter if extra richness is desired. Fill cooled pastry shells and top with meringue made by beating an egg white and blending in two tablespoons of granulated sugar. Swirl on top of tarts and brown under broiler for two to three minutes.

For those of you who are anxious about making desserts, there's good news in the appearance of an extra-sweet corn syrup on the market. It contains a higher amount of dextrose than the ordinary corn syrup, and while it is not only more nutritious, it is also 50 per cent sweeter than the standard corn syrup.

Here are two recipes which you will enjoy using with extra-sweet corn syrup:

Refrigerator Cookies.
(Makes 4 dozen 2-inch cookies)

½ cup shortening
½ cup sugar
½ cup extra-sweet corn syrup
1 egg, slightly beaten
½ teaspoon vanilla
1¾ cups flour
½ teaspoon baking powder

Cream shortening and add sugar slowly, creaming well after each addition. Add the corn syrup, a small amount at a time and continue creaming. Add a third of the egg at a time and beat well after each addition. Blend in vanilla. Sift flour, measure and sift with baking powder. Add to creamed mixture, blending well. Shape into a roll, two inches in diameter. Wrap in waxed paper and chill in refrigerator. Slice very thin and bake in a moderately hot (375 degrees F.) oven for 10 minutes.

Apple Pie.

7 apples
1 cup extra-sweet corn syrup
1 cup cream
1 tablespoon corn starch
1 tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 pie shell

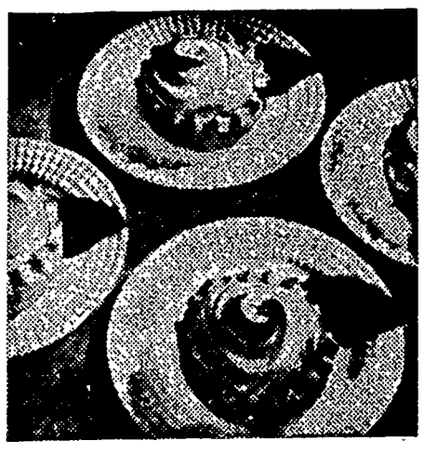
Peel and core the apples and then cook them with the corn syrup in a covered pan until tender. Remove the cover and cook down the syrup. Make a pie shell using a nine-inch tin. Place the apples in the pie shell, pour in the cream, one tablespoon of cornstarch, one tablespoon of sugar and dust with cinnamon. Bake the pie in the open shell.

If you have trouble keeping the cookie jar filled on busy school days, then you'll like this recipe which makes four dozen delectable crunchies:

Orange Crunchies.
(Makes 4 dozen)

1 cup flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup soft shortening
⅔ cup sugar
1 teaspoon grated orange rind
1 egg
¼ cup milk
3 cups corn flakes
¾ cup broken nuts

Sift flour before measuring, then sift again with baking powder and salt. Cream shortening, add sugar and orange rind and cream until light. Beat in egg vigorously. Add flour mixture alternately with milk. Fold in gradually corn flakes and nuts. Drop from teaspoon onto a greased baking sheet, two inches apart. Bake in a moderately slow (350 degrees F.) oven for 15 minutes or until lightly browned. Remove cookies from pan at once.



Butterscotch tarts are easy to make when the pastry shells are prepared or mixed in advance. A ready-made filling will taste homemade with the addition of eggs and butter, added for richness.

Now that bananas make their appearance occasionally at the store, you'll be interested in new ways to prepare them. Here they go into a mouth-watering pudding with a vanilla wafer crust, custard and meringue, all of which spell nourishment as well as good eating.

Banana Pudding.
(Serves 6)

¾ cup sugar
⅓ cup flour
¼ teaspoon salt
2 eggs, separated
2 cups scalded milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 sliced bananas
2 tablespoons sugar
Vanilla wafers

Line a seven-inch baking dish with vanilla wafers. Mix sugar with sifted flour and salt. Gradually add beaten egg yolks to scalded milk and pour slowly into dry ingredients. Cook 15 minutes in a double boiler, stirring constantly until thickened. Add flavoring. Place bananas in wafer-lined dish and cover with custard. Beat egg whites until stiff, add two tablespoons sugar and spread over custard. Bake 15 minutes in a slow oven.

Lynn Says:

Prepare foods in advance and save time: Meat loaves, stews and soups may be made in advance and stored in the refrigerator for later use. Just heat and serve when ready.

Mix a week's supply of refrigerator rolls and bake as needed. Freshly baked rolls are always a treat.

Dry ingredients for biscuits, muffins and pastry can be mixed in advance and the liquids added just before using. Chilling makes most of these mixes even better.

Home-made frozen creams, ices and sherbets may be made in advance and stored in the freezing compartment.

Gelatin puddings and salads are quickly served if they are tossed together in advance. Custards, too, keep well when chilled.

A PEOPLE AT WORSHIP

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 28:1; 35:4-9, 20-29.

GOLDEN TEXT—Thou salt worship the Lord thy God, and Him only shalt thou serve.—Matthew 4:10.

A nation which knows God must have a place and a plan for worshiping Him. The history of Israel has moved forward in the account in Exodus where the people delivered from bondage are established as a theocratic nation; that is, one governed by God.

The covenant at Sinai (ch. 19) was followed by the giving of the law (chs. 20-23), and then in chapters 24-40 we find the worship of God established. Two elements are necessary—a way in which God may be approached and a place to meet Him. The former is provided in the ordaining of the Aaronic priesthood, and the latter by the building of the Tabernacle.

I. God Provides a Way to Worship (28:1).

The appointment of Aaron as high priest, and his sons to serve with him, provided for the proper conduct of the worship of God which was to take place in the Tabernacle.

The sinner coming into the presence of God must approach by way of the brazen altar where sacrifice could be made for sin. This called for a priest set apart for this holy duty, which would open the way for the repentant one to enter into the Holy place, and ultimately to know that his sin was covered in the Holy of Holies.

Consider the grace of God in thus providing for the deep spiritual need of His people. All of this pointed forward to the day when Christ the true High Priest was to make the perfect and final atonement for sin by the sacrifice of Himself on Calvary's tree.

The symbolic dress of the priest and his consecration for his duties are all very instructive, but we do not have space to comment at length. Suffice it to say that the one who is to serve in the conduct of the worship of God is to be a called, cleansed and consecrated man, set apart for a holy calling and eager to be used of God to lead men into fellowship with Him.

From these first provisions for the worship of God we thus may learn many of the high principles which are to guide the church regarding the call and separation of men to the ministry. The gift and grace of God shown in the man's character are far more important than intellectual or social standing.

II. God Provides a Place of Worship (35:4-9, 20-29).

The plan for the Tabernacle was given by God to Moses in much detail. A close study of it will bring rich reward.

Although the plans were made by God (Exod. 25-27), note that He gave to the people the privilege of providing the materials. They recognized it as a high privilege and not a burden, and they came enthusiastically with their gifts.

That thought bears application to the believer, for we know that God still loves a cheerful giver (II Cor. 9:7). Those who groan and grumble about the money and material needed for the worship of God have not caught the real spirit of Christian giving.

The children of Israel brought more than enough of their most treasured possessions and of the labor of their hands; in fact, they had to be told to stop (Exod. 36:1-7). Imagine having to tell people to stop giving! That would be a novelty!

The Tabernacle was duly built, and thus there was provided for Israel a place of meeting (Tabernacle literally means "tent of meeting"), beautiful and appropriate for their days of sojourning in the wilderness.

The significance of the Tabernacle is both interesting and important.

(1) It is a symbol of God's presence with His people. All who were defiled were excluded because God was there.

(2) It is a type of God's method of bringing sinners to Himself. There must be a sacrifice for sin before communion can be established.

The furniture of the Tabernacle is therefore significant. The altar of sacrifice and the laver of cleansing come first in the outer court. Then on his journey from the sacrifice to the communion of the Holy of Holies, the one who seeks God is fed by the showbread, lighted by the candlestick and sustained by prayer, of which the altar of incense speaks.

Christ is the Bread of life, the Light of the world, our High Priest and interceding Advocate.

Within the Holy of Holies the mercy seat typifies the covering of a believer's sins by the blood of Christ.

(3) It is a symbol of the incarnation of Christ of whom it is said that He "tabernacled" with men.

(4) It is a symbol of heavenly things. Christ now appears in heaven for us as our minister and high priest (Heb. 8:1-5).

(5) It is a symbol of God's dwelling with men in the ages of eternity (Rev. 21).

KLEMME LOCALS

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Lau entertained on Friday evening Mrs. C. F. Hollatz, Tillie Boehnke, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Schlichting and Mr. and Mrs Wm. Hoeft, all of Garner. The evening was spent informally. Mrs. Lau served a nice lunch before the visitors went home.

Pvt. Dean Merkel of Jefferson Barracks, near St. Louis, Missouri, arrived home Sunday morning and visited until Monday night with his parents, Mr and Mrs. Alfred Merkel. Miss Corrine Merkel of Cedar Falls came home Friday evening to see her brother, Dean, who was home on a week-end pass. Dean has been in the army about seven weeks.

Verner Priebe's car caught on fire south of Garner last Wednesday afternoon, and before help arrived the flames had practically destroyed the whole car, except the tires. Mr. Priebe's daughter was with him at the time and both had to 'bail out" quick as the whole interior seemed to catch afire all at once. Cause of the sudden blaze was not determined.

Pvt. Calvin (Bill) Grosshuesch Talks To Parents From Switzerland

Rev. and Mrs. Calvin Grosshuesch were thrilled Thursday when they established telephone connections with Switzerland and had a three minute conversation with their son, Pvt. Calvin (Bill) Grosshuesch who was enjoying a furlough and sight-seeing trip in that country.

Connections were fairly good and the reception was good at both ends of the line, but Rev. Grosshuesch said the three minutes went by all too quickly. "Bill" was well and was enjoying the beauty of Switzerland but anxious to get home.

Hancock County Rural Electric Cooperative
Garner, Iowa
OWNED BY THOSE WE SERVE

Know The Truth

1. This Cooperative was organized to build electric lines to serve its ral members.

2. It is not organized or operated for profit, and operates on a purely n-profit basis. With reference to its earnings, the Supreme Court of wa has said:

"Any net earnings are returned on the basis, not of membership of investment, but of business done. It is literally no more than a return of an over-charge originally assessed to provide a magin safety in the operation of the business. Cooperative corporations and associations so organized and operated have been recognized repeatedly as being not operated for profit. __ __ A fundamental principle applicable to all cooperatives is the avoidance in the organization of entrepreneur profit. Patronage refunds, therefore, are not to be considered as a division of profits. They are rather a return of the overcharge."

3. It finances the construction of its lines by loans from the United ates Government through the Rural Electrification Administration and econstruction Finance Corporation at interest rates fixed by Congress, st the same as banks, insurance companies, railroads and other pri- ite corporations borrow money from the Reconstruction Finance Corpora- ion. This is a straight loan to be repaid with interest, and is not a grantt ich as were made by Federal Agencies to counties to build court houses, nd to cities and towns to build municipal enterprises, such as water works, vimming pools, airports, municipal electric plants, and to school districts o build school buildings.
hese loans are available to any existing electric company or to any mu- icipality which will build electric lines to serve farms and rural areas.

4. The Cooperatives are not Government subsidized. The rate of in- rest they pay has been so far above the rate on Government borrowings at the Federal Treasury has profited by millions of dollars on the money aned to the REA Cooperatives. The loans have not cost the taxpayers he penny, but have made them a profit instead.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Truman Takes Legislative Fight To People; CIO Extends Drive To Retain High Take-Home Pay

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Living in damp, dark basement like average German family in Frankfort, this couple emerges with chickens and rabbit in arms for breath of fresh air.

WHITE HOUSE:
Puts on Heat

With President Truman having taken to the fireside to carry his legislative program to the people, interest centered on public response to his appeal to prod congress into action on a string of proposals deemed important to the orderly functioning of the postwar economy.

In calling upon the people to arouse their representatives, Mr. Truman was careful not to antagonize congress itself, patting the solons on the back for having fully supported the administration's foreign policy designed to further international collaboration, and charging only a few members in committee for having blocked consideration of domestic legislation.

While the President touched upon no less than nine phases of his national program, he placed particular emphasis upon the creation of machinery to outlaw strikes for a 80-day period during which a fact finding board with subpoena power would study labor controversies and recommend solutions; mobilization of resources for providing five million homes as quickly as possible to relieve an acute housing shortage, and extension of price control and emergency authority to head off inflation and permit equitable distribution of scarce materials to industry until supplies balance demand.

Declaring that "what the American people want is action," Mr. Truman suggested that if congress did not favor his proposals, it should go ahead with its own to solve immediate pressing problems.

LABOR:
Strife Spreads

With no major reconversion wage pattern yet set, labor unrest continued to mount, with the latest strike threat shaping in demands of the CIO-United Packinghouse Workers for a 25-cent hourly pay increase for 200,000 members.

The possibilities of a walkout drew an immediate response from Secretary of Agriculture Anderson, who declared that a work stoppage must be averted, with reserves low, civilian and overseas needs high, and normal marketing of farmers threatened. Though 60,000 members of the AFL-Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen's union announced that they would not join the CIO, a strike of the latter would seriously crimp the production of 100 million pounds of meat daily.

In asking for a 25 cent hourly wage raise, the CIO stated that it would agree to a 17½ cent hourly pay boost, with the remainder to be negotiated when the general business picture became clearer. Standing alone, the Hormel company was the first to accept the compromise, and the union announced that the firm's plants in Minnesota, South Dakota and Texas would not be struck but would produce meat for hospitals and other institutions.

Meanwhile, the government sought to avert a walkout of 700,000 steel and allied workers over the CIO-United Steel Workers' demands for a $2 a day wage increase by presidential appointment of a fact finding board to study the issue and instructions to OPA to consider industry requests for price increases on carbon products to assure profitable operations.

In asking OPA to weigh the industry's bid for higher ceilings and then submit them to the fact finding board pondering the wage issue, Mr. Truman reversed the previous administration policy calling first for the boosting of pay and then for an application for price increases if necessary to cover the added expenses.

Administration back-tracking on original policy followed indications that the CIO was determined to press its bid for the $2 a day raise and the U. S. Steel corporation, as pacesetter for the industry, was equally determined to hold out against settlement until granted relief on price schedules. With steel products essential to the manufacture of many major items, any disruption of output of the metal would play havoc with the reconversion program.

Government efforts to curb the mounting strike wave also extended to the telephone and electrical industries over demands of both independent and CIO unions for increased reconversion pay to maintain high wartime take-home earnings.

ARAB LEAGUE:
Push Boycott

Seeking to apply pressure against Jewish ambitions in Palestine, the Arab league, standing 33 million strong throughout the Middle East, prepared to undertake an extensive boycott of "Zionist" manufactured goods.

Though Syria, Lebanon and Saudi Arabia reportedly had already acted, and Egypt, Iraq and Trans-Jordan were completing arrangements, Palestine itself held back, with the close business relationships between the Arabs and Jews in that troubled state leading to a more cautious approach to the movement.

Jewish exports to Syria, Lebanon, Saudi Arabia, Egypt, Iraq and Trans-Jordan have increased five-fold since 1938, rising to $12,500,000 in 1944 and representing 30 per cent of Jewish sales abroad. At the same time, the six Arab states' deliveries to Palestine tripled since 1938, reaching $34,000,000 in 1944.

NAVY:
New Outfits

Traditional garb of seafaring men since the 14th century, the laced sailor trousers with bell-bottoms may be discarded by the U. S. navy if new uniforms including regular type pants are permanently adopted. Also scheduled for elimination is the big black neckerchief, copied by the early American navy after the British design created as mourning dress for Lord Nelson.

Currently under test for the gobs' wardrobe are three new uniforms: two consisting of blue and white pants with blue battlejacket for dress or winter wear and one comprising gray trousers and shirt for duty. Sport shirts of jumper design will replace the present tight wear.

Typically American, the new working uniform also will include a long-peaked gray baseball type cap, notably worn by Vice Admiral Mitscher through the Japanese campaign and extremely popular among personnel fighting under the scorching Pacific sun.

STEEL:

Not only is the iron and steel industry's present annual capacity bigger than ever—but it is more widely distributed over the nation than ever before in 27 states.

Part of the industry's 1945 steel ingot capacity of 95,505,280 tons is located in four states, Oregon, Virginia, Tennessee and Utah, which in 1938 had no such facilities.

Altogether, 25 states have open [illegible] capacity now against 22 [illegible] in 1938

Predicts Eclipses

Although the shadow of war no longer darkens the earth a near-maximum number of six eclipses will darken the heavens in 1946, according to Prof. Oliver J. Lee, of Northwestern university's observatory.

Despite the abundance of eclipses, only one will be visible in the United States. It will be an eclipse of the sun, with 44 per cent of the sun covered.

GERMANY:
Soviet Reform

Working closely with Soviet occupation authorities, provincial officials in eastern Germany have instituted sweeping agricultural and industrial reforms completely remaking the economy of the region and gearing it to socialistic machinery.

Once the possession of the Prussian Junkers, who provided the officerial timber for the German army, no less than 7,000 estates totaling 4,000,000 acres have been redistributed to nearly 300,000 peasants, averaging over 12 acres per recipient. Livestock, poultry and implements also have been divided.

Typical terms of redistribution require amortization in cash or kind to the provincial government, with former "land-poor" peasants given additional acreage asked to pay off in 10 years and ex-propertyless farm hands granted 20 years. In some instances, land was parcelled out at a rate of 300 marks per 2½ acres, or $120 in prewar exchange.

If proven non-Nazi, former owners are compensated for their estates, though at a fraction of the last known market values.

After consultation with farmer committees, the state sets up a crop program, and operators are expected to deliver up to 70 per cent of their production to central storage points at fixed prices. The remaining 30 per cent is left for home consumption and sale on the free market, where the price may vary widely.

Equally drastic have been the industrial reforms in Silesia, with workers named to assist company directors in the management of properties and provincial governments controlling the production and distribution of goods and the employment of labor.

A case in point involves a great coal mine formerly controlled by the I. G. Farben trust, where workers' councils in each pit and factory on the property appointed three representatives to confer daily with two company officials appointed by the state on production problems and employees' welfare.

In controlling the economy, state governments make a study of available industrial capacity, raw materials and consumer needs. Then a production program is drawn up by the government, with companies told what to manufacture, where to deliver it and at what price. Workers are shuttled to needy plants. Wholesale and retail prices are also fixed, with the only free market being in whatever individual farmers can sell out of the production left to them.

Provincial officials said the planned economy was likely to remain in force for many years or at least until supplies began to balance demands.

Unusual Infant

Born six weeks prematurely to the British wife of an American G.I. in Birmingham, England, a 5 lb., 12 oz. two-headed baby girl created widespread interest, being about the 25th such child recorded in medical annals. Though records show one such baby lived to be about 30 years of age, this infant lived only 50 hours.

Believed to have begun as an embryonic separation into twins before the process stopped, the infant had two perfectly formed heads and necks, and normal shoulders and body. Said to possess two sets of respiratory organs, the baby breathed at different rates, while the two heads awoke and slept at different times.

While the 21-year-old mother was not immediately informed of the two-headed baby, she believed she had borne twins.

TVA:
Big Year

With about three-quarters of energy output going into war purposes, the half-billion dollar Tennessee Valley authority reported power income of 39 million dollars for the fiscal year 1945 and earnings of 18 million dollars.

As a result of favorable returns in recent years, TVA reportedly will remit 12 million dollars to the federal government, which paid the cost of the project. The first such remittance to the government, TVA has plowed substantial earnings back into the development.

Indicative of the scope of TVA operations, which have not only served to build up the industrial potential of the Tennessee valley but also provided flood control and navigation facilities, 130 municipal and co-operative systems distributed power to 600,000 customers during the fiscal year. Ordinarily, TVA rates are below those of privately owned utility companies.

Major TVA developments in fiscal 1945 included opening of Kentucky and Fontana dams; production of 30,000 tons of elemental phosphorus at Muscle Shoals, and increase to 35,000 of number of farms in 18 states testing TVA fertilizer.

FARM POPULATION:

The farm population comes out of the war not only fewer in numbers, but also with a change in age groupings, Dr. C. C. Taylor of the bureau of agricultural economics points out. Between 1940 and 1945 the number of persons living on farms decreased by 5 millions, or more than 15 per cent. From 1940 to 1944 there was a loss of 40 per cent in the number of males between 14 and 24, and a drop of more than 20 per cent of those between 25 and 44.

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

DREW PEARSON

MISSOURI SNOW SHOVELERS

WASHINGTON. — The problem of snow removal from the sidewalks around the "Summer White House" created something of a problem just before President Truman paid his Christmas visit to Independence, Mo.

At first nothing was done about the snow around the Truman mansion. Secret service agents guarding the house said it was their job to guard, not to shovel. Finally James T. Hopkins, aged 59, got out his horse Dick, aged five, and with a home-made snow plow cleared the snow from the North Delaware street side of the Truman home. But he didn't have time to clear the West Van Horn road side because he had to clear the walks used by children.

One day before Mrs. Truman arrived, however, George Dodsworth, president of the Independence chamber of commerce, called out the chamber's six new directors. He told them that the snow around the "Summer White House" would have to be cleared and their initiation into the chamber would be to do the job.

They did a good job. The walks around the Truman home were thoroughly shoveled.

They did not, however, tackle the drive in the rear of the house. So next morning, two employees from the highway department arrived to clear the driveway. They had shoveled for about 20 minutes when the first lady appeared on the back porch.

"You are shoveling gravel on the grass," admonished Mrs. Truman, always a meticulous housekeeper.

There were some explanations that they had been sent by the highway department to clear the snow.

"I don't care who sent you," replied Mrs. Truman. "I want you to quit."

Which is exactly what they did.

Mrs. Truman left instructions with a secret service agent not to let anyone scoop snow from the drive. And no one has.

THE OTHER LaFOLLETTE.

When the name LaFollette is mentioned in Washington, most people think of the senator from Wisconsin, who succeeded his crusading bull-moose father. But another LaFollette, from Indiana, not Wisconsin, who sits in the house of representatives, not the senate, is also attracting more and more attention.

Empty chairs fill up quickly when Rep. Charles LaFollette takes the floor for a speech. Colleagues may sometimes disagree with the two-fisted Indiana Republican, but they agree that what he says usually is interesting and never fails to pack a wallop.

In fact, one of his recent speeches packed such a wallop that conservative colleagues on the Republican side almost swooned. For LaFollette attacked that super-sacred cow, states' rights, and before he was through had virtually de-horned the animal.

"There are no such things as states' rights," declared the red-headed Hoosier. "There are rights of citizens who live within a state. The man who speaks of state sovereignty speaks the language of totalitarianism. There is only individual sovereignty."

Colleagues on both sides of the aisle listened in amazed silence. Only congressmen to answer were two Republicans: Jensen of Iowa and Bates of Massachusetts. Significantly, no whimpers came from southern Democrats.

"Did not the sovereignty of the states exist long before the federal government was established?" asked Bates.

"Yes, but man existed long before the state of Massachusetts," shot back LaFollette. "The state of Massachusetts did not create its citizens and does not own them. The citizens own the state. In the continental congress and the convention which created the constitution . . . the issue was not states' rights.

"The issue was, 'Shall the people determine that they can be better served by a (federal) government with power over the state.' That is the constitutional answer, and it is the only answer that parallels with any idea of the innate dignity and honor of mankind. From that premise I do not yield, nor shall I ever yield, God giving me the strength to retain my intellectual, moral and spiritual integrity."

CAPITAL CHAFF.

Since publication of General Marshall's letter to Governor Dewey telling how we were cracking Japanese and German codes, every major government has been changing its codes almost daily. In addition, the best cryptographers in the world are now hard at work in every capital trying to figure out new unbreakable codes. All suspect we have broken their codes too. . . . The row between Mayor Maestri of New Orleans and Jimmy Comiskey was patched up at a secret caucus.

Veterans' SERVICE BUREAU

EDITOR'S NOTE: This newspaper through special arrangement with the Washington Bureau of Western Newspaper Union at 1616 Eye Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., is able to bring readers this weekly column on problems of the veteran and serviceman and his family. Questions may be addressed to the above Bureau and they will be answered in a subsequent column. No replies can be made direct by mail, but only in the column which will appear in this newspaper regularly.

On the Job Training

Veterans' administration officials say there is a decided trend among veterans who are taking advantage of the provisions of the educational features of the G.I. bill to get away from college and university study in favor of on-the-job training for various trades. This trend was also noticeable following World War I.

As of December 1 there were 103,526 veterans taking on-the-job training or enrolled in colleges and universities and officials point out that if the heavy enrollment continues, many schools will be swamped with applications by the time the fall terms open in 1946. Disabled veterans are also taking advantage of Public Law No. 16 and as of December 1 there were 35,353 in training — 24,126 in schools and 11,227 on-the-job trainees.

The veterans' administration has also announced that there are more than 87,000 veterans, an all-time peak, receiving hospital treatment and domiciliary care and with a tremendous increase hospital facilities are taxed to capacity.

Questions and Answers

Q.—My husband, who has been in the army for 28 months, who spent 19 months in France and is now in Japan, should be eligible for a discharge. Will he get one soon? He is a corporal and in the 549th Port. Co.—Wife, Scottsboro, Ala.

A.—Your husband is stationed in Kure, Japan, as of December 26, and the war department has no word on when his company will be moved home.

Q.—How many points will discharge a navy enlisted man and how are points counted for dependents? —Navy wife, Thayer, Mo.

A.—The navy allows 10 points for dependency, regardless of the number of children. On January 1, 1946, the navy point score dropped to 36 points for enlisted men and 43 for officers. The navy announced further one point cuts to go into effect January 15 and February 2.

Q.—My husband will have been in the army three years the 26th of December. He was recently sent overseas to Japan. He arrived there November 18. He is in the 32nd division. Will he have to stay there after the bill is passed in February that three-year men will be eligible for discharge, even though he is in the occupational army?—Mrs. L. R. M., Pocahontas, Iowa.

A.—The army says your husband is at Fukrata, Japan, and that high point men will be screened out of the 32nd division to be brought home as soon as transportation is available. They will make no predictions on the possible passage of the bill to which you refer.

Q.—My husband was a veteran of World War I, serving five months and three days. At the time he was to go overseas he became ill and remained in the hospital 114 days with pneumonia and measles and his right ear was affected. He cannot hear from that ear and has a medical record showing he was sick, but they won't give him a pension. He is 52 years old and the doctor says he is unable to work. Is there any way you can help get a pension?—Wife, Jamison, Ala.

A.—If your husband has made application to the veterans' administration for a disability rating and if he has been turned down, he has the right to ask for a review of his case. He also has the right to appeal the decision to a reviewing board of the veterans' administration. Suggest you write the nearest regional office of the veterans' administration about your husband's case.

Q.—My husband served a little over three months in World War I. He has been in the veterans' hospital at Wadsworth, Kans., two different times in the last two years. He is still weak and very nervous, unable to do but very little work and goes all to pieces. I want to know if there is any way we can get help.—Mrs. D. S., Gashland, Mo.

A.—If your husband is disabled as you say, you have the right to file for a disability rating with the veterans' administration and if given a disability he is entitled to a pension. Suggest you take the matter up with your nearest regional veterans' administration, probably at Kansas City.

Q.—I have been told that servicemen are entitled to a raise in their salary for overseas duty which would increase the serviceman's family allowance. My husband has been overseas 10 months. He is a 2nd class seaman. He had this rating when he went overseas and my allotment check has remained the same. Would like to know if I am entitled to any additional allotment since he has been overseas.—Mrs. E. W. L., Dutton, Ala.

A.—The navy department says there is no increase in allotment of navy men when they go to sea.

At last
I shall give myself
To the desert again,
That I, in its golden dust,
May be blown from a barren peak,
Broadcast over the sun-lands.

If you should desire some news of me,
Go ask the little horned toad
Whose home is the dust,
Or seek it among the fragrant sage,
Or question the mountain juniper,
And, by their silence,
They will truly inform you.

By EDWARD EMERINE
WNU Features

THE perfume of greasewood after a desert shower, the faint and fleeting loveliness of saguaro blossoms, the yuccas with their waxen white bloom, the octillos tipped with brilliant red, a cereus blooming at midnight, magic mesas, mysterious paths, balmy nights — that is Arizona, the land of romance, sunshine, progress!

The tourist, the sportsman and the vacationist have all enjoyed the state in brief moments, but to a half-million people, Arizona is home. They live in every section of the state from the northern plateau (4,000 to 7,000 feet above sea level) to the southern part next to the border of Mexico (500 to 2,500 feet altitude). On the broad plains and the mountain sides they graze their livestock, and through the valleys they lead the irrigation waters. They grow long staple cotton, wheat, corn, barley, oats, potatoes and immense quantities of sub-tropical fruits. Their dates thrive, and their citrus industry is steadily growing. From their mines they get copper, gold, silver, lead, asbestos, zinc and other metals.

Arizona is "A Land Made for Living," the citizens say. Phoenix, the capital city, is an example. In 1868 a tiny settlement sprang up as a stagecoach stop. Two years later the townsite was formally laid out, and in 1881 the new community was incorporated. In 1893, Phoenix—the territorial seat of government — boasted a population of 3,000. Today Phoenix is the Southwest's largest inland city, and has a metropolitan population of 153,000. Its graceful skyline, its homes and its industries, is a far cry from the pueblos of the primitive peoples, who, in centuries long past, first inhabited the warm and pleasant Valley of the Sun. Phoenix, built on the site which two prehistoric cities had once occupied, is now the home for thousands of families — families of modest means and families with millions.

Plenty of Room.

Douglas, across the street from Old Mexico, urges: "For a visit, or for a lifetime — come to Douglas!" And Florence, south of the Gila on the Old Spanish trail, calls for "those who dream of a modest home where there is room, and health, and time to think." St. Johns, in Apache county, offers a pioneer reunion and rodeo each year for those who have long called that region home. And Oraibi, in the Indian country, is said to be the oldest continuously inhabited village in the United States!

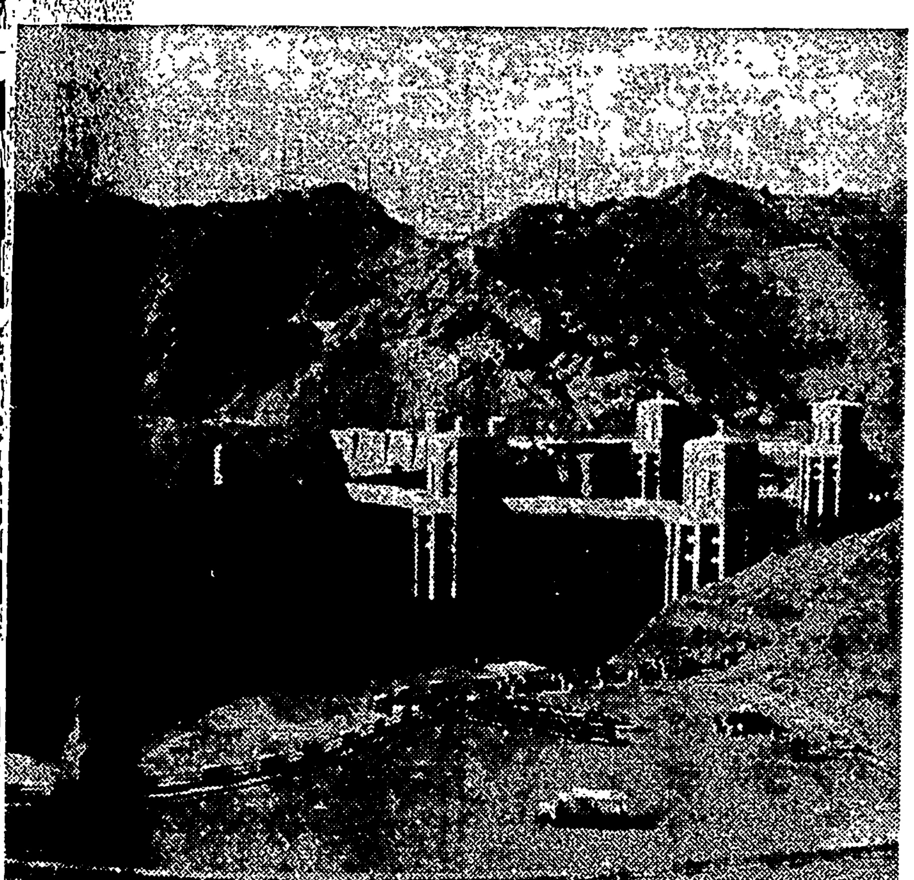
First, there were cliff dwellers, the home-owners of the distant past. Then the Indians, many tribes and many kinds. Ruins of ancient cities tell of homes. In 1540 Coronado came searching for the Seven Cities of Cibola. Then came the Spaniards with their priests, their herds, and their desire to build missions and homes. And later other white men, lured by gold and adventure, came too. Kit Carson came, and bandits too. The covered wagon and the stagecoach rattled over dusty trails.

'God Enriches.'

"Ditat Deus" is the motto of Arizona. It means "God enriches." Yes, God enriches, but man had to do his part. Dams were built, ditches were dug, and the desert bloomed. Modern science in the mines found more wealth than mere gold nuggets. Livestock grew fat. Cities with permanent homes sprang up. The warm, life-giving sun shone down on 113,909 square miles of Arizona. God enriches!

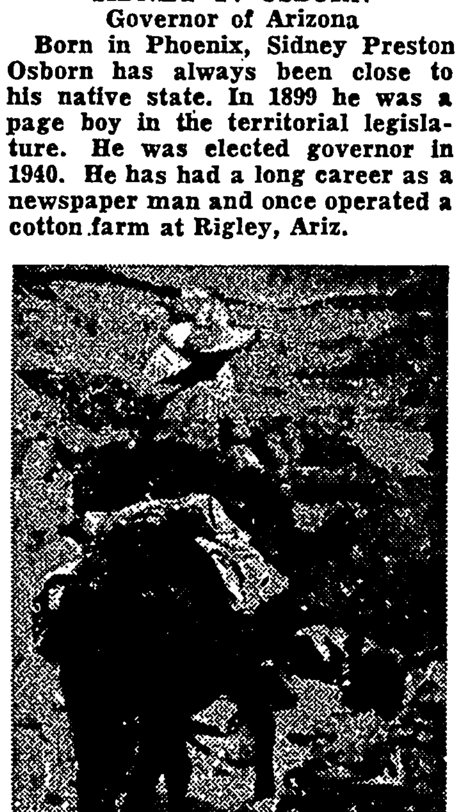
Arizona has 12 national monuments and 10 national forests. Scenic attractions include awesome Grand Canyon, historic Apache trail, fantastic Petrified forest, colorful Painted desert, Natural bridge, Wonderland of Rocks, exotic border towns of Old Mexico, fascinating Meteor crater, Colossal cave, Oak Creek canyon, and scores of prehistoric ruins and cliff dwellings such as Casa Grande, Tonto, Betatakin, Keet Seel and Montezuma's castle. Other landmarks include Inscription house, Dinosaur tracks, Superstition mountain, and man-made wonders such as Roosevelt and Boulder dams, San Xavier and Tumacacori missions, Indian reservations, old stagecoach stations and bullet-scarred ghost towns.

Fishing, hunting, swimming, hiking, motoring — from canyon-walled lakes to cactus-studded mountains, Arizona offers the good life, for a week, or a year, or for a lifetime. It has a little Switzerland in its northern mountains. It has semi-tropical living under palm trees in the southern part. That is Arizona, the Arizona men call home!

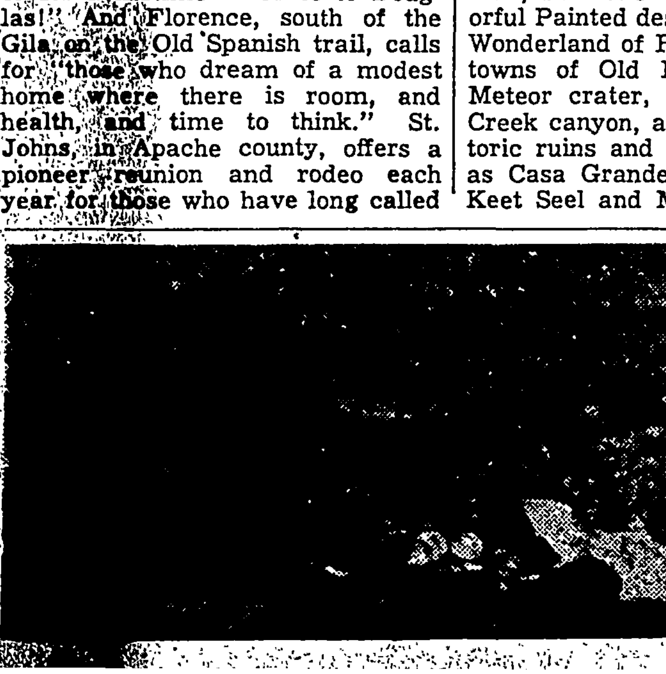


BOULDER DAM . . . Lake Mead on the Colorado river makes fishing, boating and swimming easily accessible to people of Arizona.

SIDNEY P. OSBORN
Governor of Arizona
Born in Phoenix, Sidney Preston Osborn has always been close to his native state. In 1899 he was a page boy in the territorial legislature. He was elected governor in 1940. He has had a long career as a newspaper man and once operated a cotton farm at Rigley, Ariz.



ANGEL TRAIL . . . In the inner canyon of Grand Canyon, the Colorado river is a mile straight down, but nine miles by trail.



The Navajos are the largest tribe of full-blooded Indians in the United States, numbering not less than 42,000, divided into 45 tribes or clans. The Navajo Indian reservation contains about 8,000,000 acres of land. Their rough desert country is characterized by mesa, butte, volcanic neck, canyon and wash, with variety and beauty of erosion and wind-blown sand.

The tribe numbered about 9,000 in 1869, but is the only Indian tribe which has increased its numbers from year to year. The Navajos are pastoral semi-nomads, their movements largely seasonal. They live chiefly by raising sheep, but augment their earnings by blanket weaving, silver work and gathering pinon nuts. They express a rare sense of beauty in their arts, especially hammered silver (left).

"I had a shrimp cocktail, vichy-swah, roast beef, cherry tart, demi-tasse and two glasses of water." . . . "Thanks," said the waiter, "but you didn't have to mention the water — we don't charge for it any more."

While you're not in trouble, cultivate His acquaintance and talk things over with Him. And when He does something for you don't forget to thank Him. He appreciates that."

Customs men confiscated Goering's Luger pistol from Billy Rose when he returned after viewing the Nuremburglars.

FDR enjoyed spinning this yarn: On Christmas Day the telephone rang in the office of the rector of President Roosevelt's church in Washington. "Can you tell me," a voice asked, "if the President is expected to attend church today?"

"That," the rector explained patiently, "I cannot promise. But we expect God to be there, and we fancy that will be incentive enough for a reasonably large attendance." . . . Quotation marksmanship—Vic Mature: The only way to a woman's heart is to saw her in half!

To The People Of Hancock County

Within the next few days you will be asked to make your annual contribution to the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis and this year, more than ever, we hope that you will be as generous as possible.

Many have asked what the Hancock Coun- ty Chapter has done with its money and whether or not we have helped those unfortunate families and victims who were attacked by polio during the recent epidemic. HERE ARE THE FACTS:

One-half of all money collected is kept at home; one-half goes to the National headquarters. This makes an ideal arrangement because if we run out of money locally, as we did this year, we can obtain funds from National headquarters and pay it back when we are able.

The money kept at home is used to aid victims of polio. During the past year the Hancock County Chapter has paid out $1,855.35. For the cure of polio the following families have received aid:

Albert Dietz
Leonard Hall
Mrs. Irma Hall
Maynard Peterson
Melvin Neuberger
Richard Weiland
J. P. Studer
Henry Dieger
Ralph Dahl
Art Wille

Considering the size of Hancock County and the number of cases it had, we are safe in saying that we were probably one of the hardest hit counties in the state.

We are proud to be able to say that in EVERY case this year our Chapter either paid all the expenses or the greatest part thereof. This includes the cost of transportation to Des Moines, Minneapolis or Iowa Cit (as the case may be,) cost of hospitalization at $6.00 per day, doctor bills, check-ups after discharge and other incidental expenses. It goes without saying that treatment is expensive and it takes lots of money to carry on a program as large as this We invite you to talk to the victims or their families to learn whether or not we have done a good job. We have had cases where the victim had no money with which to pay for his cure and it has been our pleasure to tell the family to forget about expenses and to have the bill sent to us. You can readily understand how deeply these folks appreciate the fact that we have been in a position to render this aid.

We wish to stress this is not charity, but rather is a case of good neighbors helping a neighbor who is less fortunate. Polio has a strange, unexplainable way of picking its victims and no home can be sure that it may not be visited the very next time. It therefore seems to us when you contribute to this great cause you are helping to insure yourself and your family against the tremendous expense of polio. We hope that next year there will be no cases, but there may be more than there were this year. That is why it is necessary that we build a reserve of money against any contingency.

We hope to make this the most successful appeal in our history and we ask that you give generously to the solicitor who mails you this letter. It is the solicitor who makes our program possible, by mailing out the letters, he is helping you and our work. Please have your money ready when your letter arrives.

Read the chairman's financial report else- where in the paper. We have a deficit in Hancock County and must re-imburse the National headquarters.

Engineer Merten Tells Of Road Program For This Year

LAST ROAD PROGRAM AHEAD FOR 1946-47

FARM TO MARKET ROADS ON ROAD PROGRAM FOR '46

War Delayed Construction Of The County Trunk Roads

(By C. F. Merten, County Engr.)

After three years of delay because of the war Hancock County will continue with its program of Farm to Market road construction by means of which all the county trunk roads will eventually be built. Contracts have been awarded for the grading and graveling of the following roads which are to be completed in the 1946 season:

The trunk road from Woden south to the old pavement of Highway No. 18 is to be built by the following contractors: The Frank Iblen Construction Company of Atlantic, Iowa, will do the grading for $19,887.51. M. E. Souther of St. Paul, Minnesota, will build concrete box culverts for $11,428.-. Clermont Brick and Sand Co. of Clermont, Iowa, will do the graveling surfacing for $7,844.37.

The trunk road from the corner south of the Crystal Lake Consolidated School east to the pavement on Highway 69 is to be built by the same contractors at the following prices: Grading $18,532.04; Culverts $568.10; Graveling $3,859.40. The unit price for grading on these projects was $0.168 and while this is approximately twice the price for similar work in 1939, it is considered reasonable when the present cost of labor and equipment is considered. The roads are being constructed on a right of way 90 feet wide and the additional right of way required was purchased by the county in 1941 and 1942. Part of the fences, telephone lines, and power lines have been moved back on the new right of way lines and others must be moved back before construction starts.

The next roads on our program are the trunk roads from Kanawha to Goodell which will probably be built in 1947, and the trunk road from Hayfield through Miller which will be built in 1948. Plans are now being prepared in the Engineer's office for these two roads. They will be financed by a combination of federal funds and county funds. In addition to the above Federal Aid Roads we hope to grade and gravel approximately 30 miles of local roads in the various townships of the county. The township trustees will select the roads to be placed on this program and the costs will be paid from our share of the gasoline taxes.

ROY L. MCMILLIN IS CANDIDATE FOR RE-ELECTION

Roy L. McMillin, present treasurer of Hancock County, is this week announcing his candidacy for re-election to the office.

Roy has been a very efficient treasurer and has always received a large vote of confidence. Roy has been treasurer for so long we have lost all count of the number of times he has been re-elected. That fact alone is proof that he is pretty much pleasing the public.

And that statement is true for the rest of our court house officials: Fred Missal, Dutch Brower, Elmer Raw and Fern Katter. We have a fine group of efficient and pleasing officials in the old court house.

KLEMME FARMER KILLS FOX WITH ARROW

Floyd Franklin Bow And Arrow Hunter

Floyd Franklin, farmer living southeast of Klemme, is a real sportsman when it comes to hunting, for he uses a bow and arrow to bag his game.

Friday Floyd was out hunting cotton-tails when he came upon a fox that came into range at about 20 yards and Floyd brought him down with a well-placed broadhead arrow. The fox ran about a hundred and fifty feet and then died in his tracks.

Franklin has been a bow and arrow enthusiast for several years and has shot a lot of rabbits, using a blunt-head arrow for that purpose.

Last fall he went to Wisconsin to try his luck on deer when the season was opened only for bow and arrow hunters. Floyd says about 2,000 men from all parts of the United States registered for the event and about 250 deer were killed

Mr. Franklin saw several deer, but only had a chance to shoot at one, which he failed to kill, but only nicked it in the neck, drawing blood.

Mr. Franklin intends to go back next fall as he says he feels sure of getting a deer as his experience last fall taught him a lot about big game hunting with a bow and arrow

Mr Franklin stated that after the hunting season in Wisconsin game wardens checked results. They found no dead deer which had been and wandered away as so often is the case when rifles are used Only three cripples were located, and they were but slightly injured. The conclusion was that bow and arrow hunters make a clean kill, or not at all.

Floyd states that the long bow has gone out of use for hunting and that the shorter, flat bow, is more effective.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

New Wage-Price Policy Pattern For Settling Industrial Strife; FBI Warns Of Crime Increase

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Industrial Front—With labor adamant in its demands for appreciable wage increases to assure continued high "take-home" pay, and with management equally determined to resist sizable raises in the face of OPA ceilings, President Truman and his aides sought to stave off an economic deadlock imperiling reconversion by granting companies price relief.

Representing a complete reversal of announced administration policy of granting price increases only after operations had proven that management could not absorb wage boosts given first, Mr. Truman's new approach to the problem was expected to result in a general pattern of settlements embodying pay raises of from 15 to 18 per cent.

The administration's new policy was first applied to the dispute in the steel industry over the CIO-United Steel Workers demands for a $2 a day wage increase and was quickly utilized in efforts to break the deadlock in the packing field over the CIO and AFL bid for a 25 cents an hour pay boost.

As a result of the administration decision to grant price increases to the steel industry, the companies agreed to resume negotiations with the USW, though they were not permitted the full advances asked. Pending industry offers of what the USW called adequate counter-proposals to its wage demands, the union considered holding off its scheduled strike of 700,000 workers, affecting the aluminum and magnesium as well as steel trade.

In holding out offers of price increases to the big packers, the government stated that they could help the companies in figuring out what wage raises they could actually advance following their initial proposals of about 7½ cents per hour. In asking for a 25 cents per hour raise, the CIO and AFL declared they would be willing to accept 17½ cents to start with before the situation clarified itself.

The packing dispute was of particular interest to the nation's farmers since companies' fixed costs would go far to determine bids for live cattle to permit profitable operations against wholesale price ceilings. Of general interest was the whole new administration policy in its possible effect upon efforts to hold down living costs and avert an inflationary spiral which would cheapen wages and income and lead to still further demands for relief.

DEMOBILIZATION:
G.I.s Kick

Incensed over war department plans for a slow-down in demobilization, G.I.s the world over raised a storm of protest, with the army quickly reacting to the complaints by ordering the immediate return of surplus overseas troops and announcing a re-examination of policy.

At the same time, General MacArthur declared that soldiers would not be punished for orderly demonstrations in the Pacific theater, stating that the unrest was primarily caused by "acute homesickness aggravated by the termination of hostilities."

In ordering the immediate return of surplus overseas personnel, Chief of Staff Eisenhower said that extensive shipping facilities should be used in sending the men home, with troops with the highest point scores and longest record of service given priority.

A re-examination of the whole demobilization program would touch the recent formula for spreading scheduled shipments home for the first three months of 1946 over a half-year because of war department claims of a shortage of replacements. Despite the slowdown, army strength was expected to be pared by 400,000 under previous estimates by July 1, with more than half of the 1,550,000 troops remaining in service in overseas duty.

Having started in the Pacific shortly after announcement of the slow-down program, G.I. demonstrations quickly spread to Europe, where troops protested in support of their buddies in the east. In all cases, the men were orderly and no violence occurred.

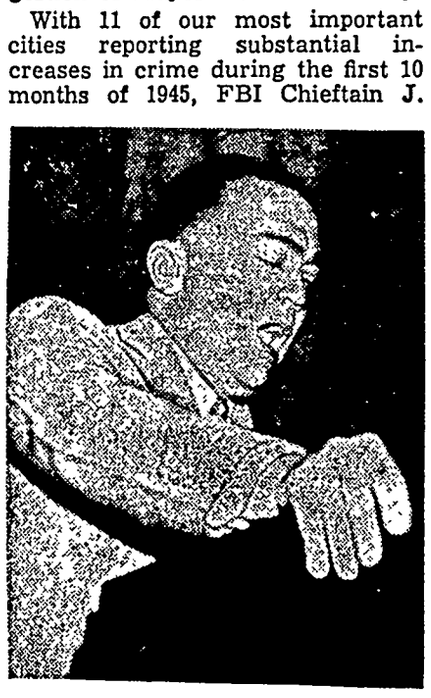
Most vociferous of all, the Pacific demonstrators attributed the slowdown to administration efforts to force through a compulsory military bill to secure replacements; "brass-hats" seeking to retain wartime rank by maintenance of a large army, and the state department's "imperialistic" policies in the far east. G.I.s were told to apply pressure to friends back home to petition congress for a revision of demobilization plans.

CRIME WAVE:
Gathers Momentum

Pointed up by the brutal murder of six-year-old Suzanne Degnan in Chicago, Ill., a dangerous postwar crime wave is gathering momentum, FBI officials warn, with lenient treatment of old offenders and a growing irresponsibility of youth among the principal causes.

Horrified and enraged by the fiendish slaying and dissection of the Degnan girl, an aroused Chicago citizenry acted to spur the search for the maniacal killer, with $36,000 in rewards posted for information leading to his arrest. Of this amount, $5,000 was offered by the municipal government upon suggestion of Mayor Edward J. Kelly.

With 11 of our most important cities reporting substantial increases in crime during the first 10 months of 1945, FBI Chieftain J.



J. Edgar Hoover

Edgar Hoover rapped the abuses and maladministration of our prison systems, declaring that a large percentage of fugitives being sought throughout the country have enjoyed ill-advised clemency. The manner in which murderers, sex-degenerates, outlaws and bandits are released constitutes a national disgrace, he said.

Added to the loose handling of previous offenders is the mounting waywardness of youth, Hoover said, disclosing that of all crimes reported in 1945, 21 per cent were committed by persons under 21 years of age. Young people in this age group made up 14 per cent of all murderers; 36 per cent of all robbers; 51 per cent of all burglars; 34 per cent of all thieves; 25 per cent of all arsonists; 63 per cent of all auto thieves and 32 per cent of all rapists.

As one remedial measure against the growing wave of youthful lawlessness, Hoover recommended increased church or social activity designed to direct youngsters' energies and imaginations into constructive activities.

UNO:
Underway

Meeting in Central hall in Westminster, against a background of great blue curtains set off by a huge gilded globe surrounded by olive branches, the United Nations organization officially got underway with the election of Foregin Minister Paul Henri Spaak of Belgium as its president.

In greeting UNO, British Prime Minister Attlee expressed general sentiment by declaring that organization represented universal hope for peace and the prevention of a third world war which might well destroy civilization. Unlike the ill-fated league of nations, he said, UNO's effectiveness will be considerably enhanced from the beginning by the participation of both the U. S. and Russia.

Calling for close international collaboration of nations, Attlee declared that the various governments should work through UNO instead of considering it as a detached instrument of foreign policy to be used only as an additional means for obtaining an end.

A champion of a western bloc of European nations for economic and political purposes, Spaak was elected to UNO's presidency by a 28 to 23 vote over the Soviet-sponsored candidate, Foreign Minister Trygve Lie of Norway.

Americans Heaviest Investors in Insurance

Though reliable statistics from abroad are not readily available, about two-thirds of all life insurance in the world is owned by citizens of this country, Claris Adams, president of the American Life con vention, declared.

Supporting his statement, he said that at the end of 1945 71 million Americans owned life insurance, that is, more than one-half the population of the country, including men, women and children. During the war, he said, life insurance in force has increased by 40 billion dollars. This represents $1,000 per family and brings the family average up to $4,500.

Life insurance savings constitute one of the principal items, ranking fourth or fifth in the average family budget, Adams said.

WAR CRIMES:
New Case

Even as the U. S. Supreme court considered Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita's petition against his conviction by an American military commission in the Philippines, the war crimes trial of his predecessor, Lt. Gen. Masaharu Homma, got underway in Manila on similar charges of countenancing atrocities of his forces.

In appealing to the highest American judicial tribunal, Yamashita's three U. S. army attorneys had declared that the cessation of firing had ended the need for special military measures and entitled the doomed Jap chieftain to a hearing before an ordinary court. In contesting the petition, the government declared that a ruling against war crimes procedure would upset efforts for punishment of suspects.

Forty-nine-year-old V/Sgt. James Baldassarre of New Haven, Conn., a vet with 28 years of service, was one of the principal witnesses as the Homma trial began. One of the survivors of the "death march of Bataan," he told of how Jap guards shot or bayoneted sick or thirsty American soldiers who wandered from their ranks. "The Japs did nothing for us," Baldassarre said. "No food, no water, no medicine. Nothing but bullets and bayonets."

Ask German Relief

While Senators Wherry (Rep., Neb.) and Langer (Rep., N. D.) rapped the administration for refusing to permit the private shipment of food to Germany to help avert starvation, Dr. Lawrence Meyer of the Missouri synod of the Lutheran church revealed efforts to organize a Christian congress to push for alteration of government policy.

Wherry's and Langer's criticism of the administration came in the midst of President Truman's announcement that he had told a senatorial committee that it was impossible under present conditions to permit shipments. In reporting on the conference with Mr. Truman, a member of the delegation said that Russia objected to reopening of mail to Germany, and service could not be re-established without the unanimous consent of the Big Four.

In revealing his intentions to work for a Christian congress embracing both the Catholic and Protestant churches, Dr. Meyer declared that the force of 60 million members of all faiths in America must be mobilized to impress the administration that the country is not committed to a policy of vengeance. Reporting on his visit to Germany, Dr. Meyer said that of 100 children he saw in one Frankfort hospital, 75 were marked for death because of insufficient food.

FOOTBALL:
Fewer Deaths

Reflecting improved techniques, football fatalities continued to drop during the last season, with only 9 reported as against 49 when Dr. Floyd R. Eastwood of Purdue university first undertook a compilation of grid accidents.

While no fatalities directly attributable to collegiate football were recorded through 1945, those occurring were evenly divided between high school and sandlot play, Eastwood said. Despite the toll among secondary teams, the actual incidence of high school deaths was only about .48 per cent per 100,000 of contestants.

In undertaking his study for the rules committee of the National Collegiate Athletic association and the committee on injuries and fatalities of the American Football Coaches association, Eastwood called for consideration of methods for minimizing occurrence of cerebral hemorrhages. Such mishaps have accounted for 44.7 per cent of all football fatalities reported since 1931.

TOBACCO:
Kentucky Acts

As the market for burley tobacco took a big drop and farmers reportedly were losing $1,000,000 a day in comparison with the previous month, Gov. Simeon Willis of Kentucky acted to close all warehouses under unanimous recommendation of the state legislature.

Main cash crop of Kentucky farmers, burley tobacco, used in cigarette, chewing and pipe mixtures, is auctioned off in various warehouses throughout the state, with buyers from the big manufacturing companies bidding against each other. The season usually runs from December through January.

With the requirement that all sales be transacted under OPA ceiling regulations, prices have been set on all 26 different grades of the tobacco, ranging up to 50 cents a pound or more. Following sharp price recessions after early favorable bidding, average paid for the crop slumped to 38 cents.

POLIO:

Infantile paralysis attacked nearly 14,000 persons in the United States in 1945, making it the fourth worst poliomyelitis year on record, the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis revealed. Invading all 48 states, polio erupted into epidemics in sections of six states and hit 28 states harder than in the near-record year of 1944

The incidence of poliomyelities reached its peak the week of September 15, when 962 cases were reported.

1. Increase in the amount of guaranteed loans for purchase of a home, a farm, or for entering business, from $2,000 to $4,000;

2. Elimination of the provision that all benefits of the G.I. Bill are to be deducted from any future bonus for veterans;

3. Increase of subsistence allowance for single men going to school or taking on-the-job training from $50 to $65 a month, and for married men from $75 to $90 per month;

4. Extends time an educational course may be initiated from two to four years after end of the war and also extends the time for completing a course from seven to nine years;

Questions and Answers

Q. I am an honorably discharged veteran who spent three years and three months in the army and was wounded in action. I found a good farm for sale and borrowed the money from our local bank on the basis that I could repay it with the $2,000 to which I am entitled under the G.I. bill. How can I go about getting this loan started through? I have been to see the representative of the farm security and he keeps putting me off and tells me to come back in 60 days.—G. W. S., Statesville, N. C.

A. You probably should have completed your G.I. loan before you bought the farm, but the first thing to do is to make application to your nearest veterans' administration regional office and they will issue a certificate of eligibility. Then complete the deal through your local bank. Under the new amendments you can borrow up to $4,000 instead of $2,000.

Q. My husband has been in the service 22 months and he is overseas about 14 months and we have five children and he is needed at home. I need him this winter. Will he be discharged?—Mrs. E. B. B., Norris, S. D.

A. Your husband is certainly eligible to apply for a discharge, if he wants it, because all men in service are eligible for discharge if they have three or more children.

Q. Why have young men in the army air corps been discharged with less than a year of service when other men, 18 or 19 years old with two years or more, haven't enough points?—R. Z., Canton, Ohio.

A. The war department says they have no need for more flyers so in many instances cadets are being released. Under army regulations men may be discharged if they are of no further use or if there is no place for them, whether they have sufficient points or not.

Q. I am a veteran of World War I and drawing a pension. Am I entitled to government dental treatment regardless of whether the dental condition is due to service connection. Does this alter the case any?—E. L. B., Tamarack, Minn.

A. The Veterans' administration says you are not entitled to dental treatment unless it is service connected or unless such treatment is required for service connected disability.

Q. My son went to Japan with 47 points. Will he receive any more points or is that the final count?—A mother, Martin, S. D.

A. He will continue to earn points so long as he is in the service.

Q. My husband works nights every other week and would like to take a high school course but cannot because of his present job. Under the G.I. Bill of Rights, would it be possible to take a correspondence course and would the government pay the tuition on such a course? — Mrs. R. V. B., St. Paul, Minn.

A. Yes, under the new amendment to the G.I. bill your husband could take a correspondence course and the government would pay tuition up to $500 but he would receive no subsistence allowance.

With Its War Problems Licked, 4-H Turns To New Program for a Better America

By W. J. DRYDEN
WNU Farm Editor.

THE development of 4-H clubs in America to a membership of 700,000 boys and girls between the ges of 10 and 21 cannot be credited o the achievements of any one individual or institution. It represents he accumulated experiences of a umber of rural communities spread ver America that followed a succession of pioneer leaders.

From a membership of 125,000 in 914, it has grown into one of the argest and most effective education- l groups in the world.

Four-H club members work on uch varied activities as owning and anaging farm animals according o the latest scientific method, planning for efficient use of rural electric facilities, mapping their own nd their neighbors' farms as to soil ypes and soil erosion, planning and reparing nutritious meals, cultivating a garden to supply those meals nd surplus vegetables for the market, introducing new seed varieties, andscaping the family home or the chool house or church, developing arks, baseball diamonds, or organizing recreational activities for the ommunity; organizing discussion roups on the problems of international peace or current economic roblems. In fact, they can be ound working on almost any activty important to the home or the ommunity.

Contests of All Sorts.

Many civic and commercial organizations sponsor contests and enerprises such are a part of every -H club congress. Shown on this age are some of these enterprise winners at the recent congress held n Chicago.

For the past four years, 4-H clubs ave concentrated most of their enrgies on growing "food to feed a a changing world; choosing a way to earn a living; producing food and fiber for home and market; creating better homes for better living; conserving nature's resources for security and happiness; building health for a strong America; sharing responsibilities for community improvement and serving as citizens in maintaining world peace. In short, the same objectives will be pursued as in the past.

Almost Universal.

Four-H clubs are now organized in every state in the Union; in the territories of Hawaii, Puerto Rico and Alaska. Some 20 foreign countries have adopted its principles. Approximately one million dollars in prize money is provided annually by private citizens and corporations to encourage the movement.

The clubs are a part of the national system of extension work in agriculture and home economics conducted by the department of agriculture, the state colleges of agriculture, and the counties co-operating. Four-H club work is a specialized educational enterprise for rural young people, who may become members of organized clubs under the supervision of county extension agents and local volunteer leaders.

The big event of the year for the members is the annual 4-H club congress. In Chicago last December these American farm youths won the hearts of thousands who saw their accomplishments and learned to know the fine-type girls and boys who carry on 4-H club work.

Helen Frances Lehmann, 19, Pleasant Plains, Ill. (seated) and Margaret Rice, 19, of Itta Bena, Miss., were two of the state winners in the 1945 4-H Frozen Foods contest. These two girls, together with 23 other state winners, each won a $50 Victory Bond for their achievements in this contest. International Harvester company was donor of these prizes.

The six "Champion Cooks" selected by 4-H from all sections of the country each received a $200 college scholarship for their culinary ability from Servel, Inc. They are, from left to right, Raecille Parker, Columbus, Ga.; Jan Nelson, Bloomington, Ind.; Rosie L. FEAST DAYS OF A PEOPLE

GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord hath done great things for us; whereof we are glad.—Psalm 126:3.

God wants His people to enjoy their religious life. Being in fellowship with Him is not something to dampen one's spirits, but rather to give joy and enthusiasm full liberty. Even with Israel in those early days when Christ had not come and they had only the promises and types of His coming, He arranged for regular religious feasts or festivals which brought the people together to worship Him.

One can well imagine the delightful fellowship as friends, acquaintances and especially relatives from various places went up to the feast together. Personal joy was heightened by the great spiritual joy which they shared.

The obvious lesson for us is that we who know Christ and have peace and liberty in Him should enjoy our Christian anniversaries to the full in a manner well-pleasing to Him. We need such occasions to renew our faith, to quicken our joy, and to cause us to remember God's grace and His blessings.

The first of the assigned Scripture passages does not directly relate to the feasts of God's people but rather speaks of:

I. The Holiness of the Lord (Lev. 20:7, 8).

God is holy and His people in their earthly walk are to show that they have been sanctified by Him. This involves a separation from worldly practices and an eagerness to do the will of God.

Keeping the statutes of God should be the delight of His people, not a burden or a trial. There is real liberty in conformity to law. Holiness makes for freedom and fruitfulness.

Now we turn to the consideration of the feasts of the Lord. In selecting the verses, two of the feasts were omitted, so we shall include Leviticus 23:3, 9-12 with the others assigned.

II. The Feasts of the Lord (Lev. 23:3-6, 9-12, 15, 16, 24, 27, 28, 34, 39-44).

This is one of the great chapters of the book of Leviticus, presenting both practical and prophetic teaching. The holy "feasts" and the "set times" of Israel (which we shall consider under the one heading of "feasts") were for their spiritual instruction and edification, but they also reveal God's prophetic purpose for both Israel and the Church.

1. The Sabbath (v. 3). This is not strictly considered one of the feasts but a set time—a holy convocation to be held after six days of labor. It is the type of the rest that God has in mind for His people. (See Heb. 4:1-11.)

A word of admonition is in order regarding America's awful disrespect for and misuse of our day of rest—the Lord's day. Is it not time we did something about the desecration of Sunday?

2. The Passover and the Unleavened Bread (vv. 4-6). These could be considered separately but they are closely related. The Passover spoke of the Lamb of God who was to shed His blood on the cross, even as it pointed back to redemption by blood on that dark night in Egypt (Exod. 12:12, 13).

The unleavened bread speaks of holiness. This is not the result of "servile work" (v. 8), but a showing forth of faith in the offering by fire.

3. The Firstfruits (vv. 9-12). Just as the one sheaf was waved before the Lord as the earnest of the harvest, so Christ in His resurrection is the firstfruits of them that sleep in the grave. (See I Cor. 15:20-23.) Note that it was waved "on the morrow after the Sabbath" (v. 11) which is the resurrection morning—our Sunday. What a blessed thought!

4. Pentecost (vv. 15, 16). Fifty days after the feast of firstfruits came a new meal offering; two wave loaves are presented before the Lord. This new meal offering speaks of the believing people of Christ, and so it came to pass that it was on Pentecost that the Holy Spirit was poured out on the Church (Acts 2:1-4), just fifty days after the resurrection of Christ.

5. Trumpets (v. 24). This looks forward to the day when God shall call His people Israel in the latter days. This will bring them together for the great day of

6. Atonement (vv. 27, 28). On that day Christ shall take away the sin of His people (Zech. 13:1), and they shall be prepared for the crowning and joyous feast of

7. Tabernacles (vv. 34, 39-44). This was the great feast of ingathering of the products of the year. Israel then dwelt in booths to recall their days in the wilderness. It was a time of full rejoicing, when sorrow and crying were put away. It is the type of Israel's ultimate restoration and full blessing.

Such are the feasts of the Lord—delightful and faith-stimulating—for Israel and for us!

Household Hints

If there is only a small amount of ground meat left, stretch it into a full meal dish this way: Brown it with green pepper and onion, add salt, pepper and canned tomatoes, simmering until tender. Then serve this tomato meat sauce over cooked spaghetti, sprinkling each serving liberally with grated cheese.

It Seems Einstein's Theory May Become Too Simple!

Albert Einstein was to lecture in a small town. The place buzzed excitedly in anticipation, but few knew why he was important.

"Why he's the guy who invented relativity," explained one.

"Relativity?" asked another. "What's that?"

"Well, I'll explain," said the expert: "If you sit down on a hot stove for a minute it seems like an hour—but if a beautiful blonde is sitting on your lap for an hour it seems like only a minute. That's relativity."

"My goodness!" said the small voice, "he makes a living from such nonsense?"

KANAWHA MAN OUT FOR SUPERVISOR OF HANCOCK

Robert F. Hoadley, farmer of near Kanawha, was in Klemme Monday getting acquainted with the voters and to place his announcement in The Klemme Times as a candidate for the office of supervisor for the term beginning January 1, 1947. (This office is now being held by Penn Eckels of Britt who is a candidate for State Representative.)

From the Kanawha Reporter we quote: "Mr. Hoadley has been urged by his friends to make the race for supervisor. For one thing, it is felt that it is the south part of the county's turn to have a representative on the Board of Supervisors

"Mr. Hoadley is eminently qualified for the position of supervisor He has the ability, judgment and character for the place and has been active in public affairs for years. No doubt he will make a vigorous campaign for the nomination."

Mr. Hoadley is a farmer. He has leased his farm to a World War II veteran for the coming year and has one son serving in the navy.

ROY L. McMILLIN

How do they do it?

COULD you produce one-third more crops with 10% less manpower? The farmers of America did it during the last full year of the war.

How? Partly by working themselves and their machines longer harder. Partly by assisting hired help with wired help.

Electricity has taken over more and more farm chores. It pumps water, grinds feed, cures hay, fills silos. It steps up milk and egg and pork production. It eases household work, too.

Cheap, dependable electricity has done more than any other force to make farming efficient and farm life comfortable.

Who electrified the farms? Rural electric service didn't happen overnight. It started more than 25 years ago—with America's business-managed electric companies. These companies did the pioneering—the pick-and-shovel work.

The advantages of electricity on the farm were many. The problem was to get it to the farmer. Distance and weather called for new methods and materials. New farm machines suitable for electric drive had to be developed.

Each problem was licked in turn by American initiative and ingenuity. Service grew steadily better and cheaper. Farm by farm, area by area the web of wire expanded.

What of tomorrow? Today, business-managed electric companies serve 1,850,000 farms (about two-thirds of all electrified farms) and more than 4,000,000 other rural customers outside of incorporated towns. That's real progress..

But the job isn't done. Right now as fast as men and materials become available, these same companies are extending reliable, low-priced electric service to more than 1,000,000 additional farm and rural non-farm customers. These companies are investing $290,000,000 for construction alone.

This program—long planned—is under way right now.

FARM NOTES
FARM HOUSING

ncrete floors in animal shelt- were a great step forward in liness and sanitation, but it wasn't long before they disclosed two short-comings. They were cold and wet in winter. Many farmers believed this was caused by capillary action of ground water, that is, moisture oozing upward from the ground through the concrete particles. But this was not necessarily the explanation. It may have been true in some cases, but many agricultural engineers held that the wet concrete floor was caused by moist air inside the building dropping part of its moisture-load when it came in contact with the floor, because the floor was colder than the inside air itself. Ordinary concrete, of course, is a good conductor of heat and cold.

Let me tell you about a farmer near Humboldt, Iowa, who made a pretty conclusive demonstration. This man had a fine set of buildings, with a concrete floor in each. His floors were always wet in winter, and he believed it was due to sepage or capillary action of the ground water. He was about to build a new poultry house, and was determined that the new concrete floor would be absolutely impervious to water. So he placed a six inch gravel fill. Over that went a four inch slab of ordinary concrete On top of that, he mopped thirty gallons of asphalt. Finally, he placed another concrete slab. What happened? That floor was just as wet as any he had on his farm. Clearly, the moisture was not coming from the ground. He went along with it for two years, Then he heard about Zonolite Insulating Concrete. In the summer of 1944, he decided to try it, and put two inches over the old floor. All last winter he had a dry poultry house floor. It was dry, even in sub-zero weather, that dust arose from the litter as the chickens scratched in it. The Zonolite floor was warmer than, or at least, as warm as, the inside air; therefore, it stayed dry.

Zonolite floors are not expensive. They can be placed as a new slab or may be put over an existing floor. They pay for themselves in fewer litter changes and less labor, to say nothing of the increased production from healthy stock. The farmer near Humboldt says that he can clean out the poultry house now in half the time it took him before, because the litter does not stick to the floor. I heard of a Minnesota farmer who put a Zonolite floor in one of his three poultry houses, and who left the litter on the Zonolite floor for six weeks, whereas he had to clean it twice a week in the other two houses. "And the litter was dryer at the end of six weeks than it was in the other houses after three days," he said. Quite a saving in litter; quite a saving in labor.

Next time: "Tile As A Lumber Substitute."

IS THIS A SCRAP OF PAPER?

The CIO--- United Steel Workers Union said that its strike does not violate its contracts with steel companies. Here is the "no strike" clause taken from a typical contract.

Let the words Speak for themselves!

"During the term of this agreement, neither the Union nor any Employee, Individually or collectively, shall cause or take part in any Strike, or other interruption or any impeding of production at any plant of the Company covered by this agreement. Any Employee or Employees who violate the provisions of this sectoin may be discharged from the employ of the Company in accordance with the Procedure of Section 8 of this Agreement."

This provision or one similar to it, is contained in each contract between the Union and the various steel companies. These contracts continue by their terms until the autumn of this year.

When a Feller Needs a Friend

("During his visit home the President dropped in on Eddie Jacobson, his old partner in the hat store."—News Item.)

Harry—Well, Ed, how goes it?

Eddie—Pretty good, Harry. How bad are things in your line?

President—They're not good.

Eddie—I gathered as much from the papers. Lately every time I got to thinkin' that I had troubles, I just thought of you. I ain't felt so sorry for anybody since we sold that shirt with the short tail to the tallest man in town.

President—Believe me, Ed, I can use your sympathy.

Eddie—Being President ain't what it's cracked up to be, eh?

President—Not even close. Mind if I just sit down and look over the stock?

Eddie—I ain't got much stock, Harry . . . just a few hats and ties left after the holiday rush.

President (admiringly) —That's okay. Hats and ties look better to me now than when I was in business. It sort of comforts me to sit here surrounded by haberdashery.

Eddie—A hat shop ain't a bad place, Harry.

President—You're tellin' me!

Eddie—The nearest thing I ever saw to a pressure group around here was once when three women came in to tell one man what kind of a necktie he ought to pick out.

President—How long have I been here, Ed?

Eddie—About ten minutes.

President—And not a demand so far for a special favor from any direction! Mighty nice place this.

—*—

Eddie — Well, always remember I'd be glad to have you back with me in the store.

President—That's the nicest thing that's been said to me since I got into the White House.

Eddie—And I ain't lookin' for no post as an ambassador, either!

President — Just imagine being back in the hat shop. . . . Just to be able to sell a collar with no newsreel men recording the deed for posterity . . . to be able to dress the front window without having it full of newspaper men!

Eddie—Just to take a nap on the counter without any fear you were imperiling the future of civilization, eh?

President—Oh, man!

"Certainly there can be no harm in military training in America. The brass hats, of course, must be kept under control and must not possess the attitude 'the king can do no wrong. . . .'

"I do not believe that compulsory training was the cause of war in other countries where it was in effect. It was more the propaganda of 'Gott mit uns' and 'Deutschland uber alles' . . . which will not accompany our military training if it is American training.

". . . If we do have war, I would rather know our son had a year's training to back him up rather than the hurried training some of our boys had in this war without being ripe for it. . . ."

Favoring a modified form of postwar service, Dan W. Johnson of The Times of Ivanhoe, Minn., declared:

"The United States needs some form of military training, but it doesn't need a year's training for all males physically qualified at the teen-age level.

"Basic training in some form could be thrown in with high school or college ROTC, with perhaps a month's summer camp each year for your finished reserve.

"But for the standing army, there's only one thing—regulars. Make the air arm strong and make it sufficiently inviting that enough youth will choose it as a career. Of course, to make it inviting will mean cutting out some of the caste that permeates our present military establishment. . . ."

Declaring that we won the war because of our superior productive capacity and technical skill, Clarence V. Smazel of the Press of St. Louis, Mich., advocated a five-point program instead of postwar service:

"What we really need to do," he said, "is build one department of national defense under a civilian board of experts in fields useful to war; eliminate the war colleges of West Point and Annapolis with their class distinctions, privileges and traditionalism; make our economy function in peace so that we can always have a margin of productivity over anyone else . . . for war; establish secret nests of atomic bombs so that if anybody tried to eliminate our power by suddenly attacking our productive centers we would be able to hit back fast with more and better . . . and have men who know most and behave best in charge, at any level, of every military activity."

South

In calling for compulsory training under the President's plan, W. E. Chapman of the Enterprise of Indianola, Miss., wrote:

"Our people, as a rule, favor compulsory military peacetime training and we are hoping that the congress will pass such a law at an early date.

"Our teen-age boys have much idle time on their hands and you know the old saying, 'idleness is the devil's workshop.'

Asserting that the old adage "a stitch in time saves nine," H. W. Fleer of the Democrat of Waverly, Tenn., wrote the lesson should be applied now.

". . . Some argue that those nations that are everlastingly preparing always meet defeat," he said. "Not so . . . England prepared and so did France and they won out a second time.

"The fact that we were unprepared cost us many extra lives . . . It is not going to hurt any healthy boy to learn the manual of arms. . ."

Backing compulsory training, Carl Portman of the Record-Register of Coalgate, Okla., declared:

"We would leave to the army, navy and air corps officials the type and extent of military training. But we would emphasize the importance of physical culture and discipline in any training program which America might adopt, with particular stress on the building of strong bodies and clean minds for our young men."

Basing most of his opposition to compulsory service on moral grounds, O. D. Parks of The Graphic of Nashville, N. C., said:

"I do not think boys 18 to 20 years of age should be thrown into the environment of peacetime army life, especially with the liquor and beer situation what it is.

"I am all for a large standing army and for military training for our youth. I think this training should be intensive but should be combined with the boy's schooling . . . where he is under some measure of moral guidance."

Suggesting that military training be made part of the educational curricula rather than a compulsory military program, Katie B. Beauchamp of The Magnet of Taylorsville, Ky., advised:

"Make it competitive and boys will not have to be compelled to take it. It could be given somewhat as basketball and football—more athletic than military—and would reach more boys and those who need it most."

East

Advocating modified military training, Russell A. Wheelock of The Shopper of St. Johnsbury, Vt., wrote:

"By all means we should be armed, ready and willing to fight when our way of life is threatened. Therefore, military education in our schools and colleges—yes!

"If we are smart enough to cherish and control the atomic bomb, no country will war with us. Navies, armies, air forces are outmoded, and a waste of taxpayers' money. Money placed on armies would be spent to better advantage educating future scientists to cope with the enemy's weapons. A strict control of Japan and Germany will prevent wars. A strong international policy by America will back up world peace."

Supporting a modified program, C. D. Eldredge of the Courier of Winchendon, Mass., said:

"For young men about to continue their education after completing high school, I feel that a year spent in continuous military training would be a decided mistake. . . . Let the young man who is accepted for college combine his education with the military, and in that way not interrupt his program. It would not necessarily have to be an ROTC but something along the National Guard lines.

"In case of a young man who had no qualifications for college or inclination to continue his education, a "hitch" in the National Guard would do the trick — with little chance of the youth of the nation becoming too military minded. . . ."

Believing the compulsory training to be counter to principles of freedom guaranteed in the Bill of Rights, M. E. Sunderland of The Record of Waterbury, Vt., declared:

"A public health program would be more to the point. With so many men rejected by selective service for poor physical condition, it would seem to indicate that the necessity is for a better standard of national health, which goes back to childhood and infancy. . . .

"Would approve a regular standing army of greater size and a powerful navy by making voluntary enlistments as attractive as possible.

"Compulsory training would subject too many young men to bureaucratic rule and tend to develop a military dictatorship. . . ."

West

In supporting both compulsory military training and President Truman's plan, D. W. Robertson of the Searchlight of Culbertson, Mont., said:

"It is my opinion that a man cannot learn the fundamentals of modern warfare in less than one year. If a lesser period is adopted, our boys will be going into battle only half trained, and this is as bad as no training at all. . . . The only way to avoid war in the future is to have a large enough army, sufficiently trained so that no nation will dare to attack us, and then don't go out looking for trouble.

"We have been fortunate in the last two wars to have time to train an army, but when the next one comes, time will not be allowed for training an army. Really, the only way to stop wars is to do as two senators have been brave enough to suggest, and that is to form an individual state of the world. . . ."

Urging a modified program, Edgar R. Simpson of the News of St. George, Utah, wrote:

"It is my observation that many people think of peacetime military training as a program of physical education and disciplinary training, which they favor. Most do not, however, seem anxious to see boys of 18 taken away from their homes, and opinions of returning servicemen point up some plan whereby boys could have the advantages of discipline, physical training and education along some lines that would benefit them in peacetime activities as well as for wartime preparation, as on a college campus or something of the sort in their home state or area."

Stating that while he didn't think it would worry the President, T. D. Caverly of the Valerian of Valier, Mont., disagreed with Mr. Truman's training legislation. Said he:

"We believe it would be a mighty good thing for every boy and girl in the country to put in a year under strict supervision as to hours and habits, to be trained in calisthenics and be under the direction of the best doctors during that time so the doctors could observe any physical trouble and correct it. But we believe this should not be done at the exact age of 18."

Declaring that the government should adopt a policy of encouraging science to develop the most modern materiel combat means, W. L. Rader of the Courier of Polson, Mont., thought: ". . . it is useless to draft a man for a year for just ordinary military training. This would mean nothing the way war would be carried on in the future and would just be an enormous expense.

"It seems to me what should be done is to have a few roving ambassadors that really keep an eye on what is going on in other countries. And when they come back and make a report—like Lindbergh did to England and the U. S.—we should do something about it. . . ."

THESE FELLOWS ARE AGAINST IT, AND THEY GIVE THE REASONS WHY

aul Metzgar, publisher of the um of Eldon, Iowa, commented: t is my opinion that the military d and should be made attractive gh . . . to draw on the right of men seeking a career. In way a sufficient armed force rained intelligent men could be ntained at all times . . . and a ble reserve could be retained by raining benefits for men in that us.

personally oppose compulsory military training because I do not believe a young man drafted against his own will in peacetime is going to learn enough to make him valuable in a year.

"Industry could never survive if we depended upon the same quality of men who (as a whole) are satisfied with a military career under our present standards of compensation and prospects of advancement. . . ."

In bucking compulsory training, L. M. Audritsh of The Echo of Green Springs, Ohio, wrote:

"The more we think of it, the more we are convinced that the universal peacetime military training program is a dud. . . . Any move to build armies is bound to turn into a contest among nations to see which can build the greatest, most powerful army. This one point alone can just about upset any 'national defense' angle put up by the militarists of the world."

Opposing all forms of military training, J. H. Cramer of the Journal of Blaine, Wash., said:

"A few young officers in the service seem to believe that one year of compulsory service should be required of all young men.

"But to me, this is only another move toward socialism or naziism. An army composed of all young men with trained officers naturally does not want to be trained unless they have a chance to fight."

Three Ages of Man

Shakespeare divided the ages of man into seven, but Moritz Rosenthal recognizes only three. Speaking from the shady side of 75, the great pianist observed:

"A man is young if a lady can make him happy or unhappy. He comes to middle age when she can make him happy, but can no longer make him unhappy. He is old when a lady can make him neither happy nor unhappy."

Alfred J. Schlei

and his twin brother Elmer, were born February 9th, 1890 on a farm in Liberty township, the youngest of a family of ten children born to his parents Frederick and Charlotte Griffen Schlei.

Alfred spent most of his life on this farm. It was his childhood home, and after the death of his father he remained and took care of his mother, and after her passing he purchased the farm, and for several years more continued to operate the same, as a bachelor

Alfred, together with his brothers and sisters attended a rural school one and one-half miles from home. In those days the children walked to school. His favorite study was history, especially as it pertained to civil government, and after his school days he continued reading along those lines.

Alfred was baptized, attended religious instructions, and became a member of the Liberty Methodist Church.

Alfred was a quiet, unassuming man with with a kindly disposition, hence he was a welcome guest at any and all of the homes of his brothers and sisters. He loved children, especially his neices and nephews. When these children were small he played their little games with them, and as these children grew older they came to him with their larger problems which he tried to help them solve.

A few years ago, because of ill health, Alfred discontinued his active operation of the farm He spent some weeks in Rochester, Minn., and at times his health would improve During the last three years he made his home with Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Schlei near Fenton, Iowa, and it was there that he died January 24, 1946 of cancer.

He reached the age of 55 years, 11 months and 15 days, and leaves, two sisters:
Della, Mrs. Ed. Weisbrod, Fenton,
Ellen, Mrs. Edwin Josten, Klemme,
Two brothers;
Wm. Schlei, Klemme, and
Ed. Schlei, Fenton.
and other more distant relatives and friends.

Mrs. Henry Lau

ANNA MARY ROSWAG was born at Elkport, Iowa, March 31, 1861, the third of a family of five born to her parents Bernard and Christina Roswag.

At the age of 13 she came with her parents in a covered wagon to a farm 4 miles east of Garner At this time she attended church and Sunday school in the Ell school house where Methodist services were held each Sunday.

On March 17, 1881 Anna Mary Roswag and Henry Lau were married at the Roswag home by Rev Gottlieb Haefner They began housekeeping on a farm in Liberty township where they resided for 14 years and in the fall of 1895 the family moved to Klemme where they purchased a home and resided there continuously until her death

She was in failing health for the past 37 years, always a patient sufferer, being seriously ill the past three weeks. She passed away peacefully on Monday morning, January 28, 1946 at the age of 84 years, 9 months and 28 days.

She leaves of her immediate family ten children, Leona, George and Erwin at home, William of Garner; Esther (Mrs Steve Day of Hubbard, Oregon;) Lillie Koerner, Martha Bredbenner, Nellie Arnold, Wesley and Lloyd of Klemme One daughter, Mamie and 2 infant sons preceded her in death The father, Henry Lau, went to his reward on October 2, 1922. She also leaves twenty-two grand children and twenty-four great grandchildren who were a continual joy and pleasure to her even though her suffering was usually severe She is survived also by one sister, Mrs. Louis Henschen of Garner and other more distant relatives and friends.

IMPORTANT EVENTS TOOK SPOTLIGHT AT BOCK HOME

There were several important events at the Mitchell Bock home east of Klemme over the week end but all occasions were duly celebrated by having a turkey dinner on Sunday in honor of Mitchell's birthday.

Mr. and Mrs. Bock and Jimmie had as their guests for the day Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Bock and daughters of Garner; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bessman and Harry of near Dows; Mr. and Mrs. Ervin Meyer and Lawrence of Alexander, and Mrs. Naska Bock of Klemme.

A nicely decorated birthday cake served as a centerpiece for the festive board. It was properly lighted with the exact number of candles. (And, as the newspaper writer would say, "That's 30.")

In addition to it being Mitchell's birthday, young Jimmie stole the show as his birthday came on Monday and his Grandmother Bessman had baked a nice cake for him too and it was lighted with 2 candles. Jimmie and his dad ran a sort of contest as to who could unwrap the most gifts. (Jimmie won!)

And still there was another important date in the Bock family, but their 4th wedding anniversary which occured on Sunday, sort of got pushed back into the corner, but was not entirely forgotten.

COUNTY BOARD ASKS FOR NEW PETITION ON DITCH

The Hancock County Board of Supervisors at their meeting last week dismissed the hearing for a cleanout on drainage district No. 8 southwest of Britt, when it was found that cleaning the ditch to original grade would not afford taxpayers in the district the proper drainage.

The Board ordered a new petition circulated to deepen and widen the original ditch and requested a complete reconstruction of open ditches and a reclassification of the district.

Christmas Seal Fund Goes To Work In Hancock Schools

X-RAYS TO BE TAKEN OF ALL HIGH SCHOOL PUPILS

A miniature x-ray film program to be conducted soon in all Hancock County high schools is being described to students this week by Miss Joy Harmon of the Iowa Tuberculosis Association and the State Health Department.

During the program, which is part of Iowa's fight against tuberculosis, miniature x-ray films will be taken on the following dates:

February 13 at the Britt High School.
February 14th at Garner high high school. (morning.)

Purpose of the program, sponsored locally by the county medical society and the county tuberculosis association in cooperation with the health department and state tuberculosis association, is to discover those endangered by tuberculosis before it has made serious inroads on health.

Funds from the sale of Christmas Seals in Hancock County will finance most of the cost, and examinations will be made only with the written consent of parents. Findings will be reported only to parents and their family physicians.

According to Dr. L. H. Flancher, state tuberculosis case-finding director, high school students are entering the age period when tuberculosis takes its greatest toll.

Sponsors point out that "it is good common-sense to find tuberculosis before it is too late" and state that there is no good reason why every student should not take advantage of the examination opportunity. The goal of the program is 100 per cent participation, including teachers and other school personnel.

SOIL CONSERVATION DISTRICT PETITIONS CIRCULATED

Petitions asking for the organization of a soil conservation district are being circulated in each township in Hancock County following information meetings. The information meetings have been held in the following townships: Avery, Orthel, Bingham, Ellington, Britt, Concord, Garfield, Liberty and Ell.

A soil conservation district is an association of landlords organized under the law for the purpose of bringing about better land use and conservation of the soil. It includes our drainage and flood problems

The reasons for forming a district are:

To study with a trained technician the soil and water management problems of the county, and of the individual farmer.

The technical service is paid for by the Soil Conservation Service. Study and recommended weed control measures, set up individual farm plans with those landowners asking for this help. Make surveyes on individual farms whenever requested by the landowner Many other phases of soil and water management are a part of the organized soil conservation district.

The County Committee who is in charge of this program consists of the following men:

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Settlement of Steel Strike Basic to Industry; Plan to Revive Essential German Output

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

On picket line at General Electric plant in Erie, Pa., with dad, this youngster joined CIO for a $2 a day wage increase.

LABOR:
Basic Dispute

A settlement of the steel case portended early solution to a whole string of major strikes affecting basic industries and promised speedy resumption of large-scale production since reconversion has been reported as already 90 per cent completed.

In stepping into the steel dispute to prevent a shutdown of the nation's mills supplying vital material to American industry, President Truman proposed a settlement on the basis of a wage increase approximating 16 per cent and a price boost to operators in the neighborhood of $4 a ton. Though representing a compromise between the two parties, the offer fell below the CIO-United Steel Workers' minimum demands and also ignored their position that price raises were unnecessary.

Because solution of the steel controversy would enable industry to accurately estimate costs partly based on steel prices, an early settlement of the automobile and electrical appliance walkouts was expected to follow.

Meanwhile, government conciliators worked feverishly for a settlement of the CIO and AFL strike against the big packers as the nation's meat supply diminished.

While the packers resisted pressure to increase their offer of a 7½ cent hourly boost under present price ceilings, the CIO cut its demands from 25 cents per hour to 17½ cents and the AFL to 15 cents. A number of smaller operators signed with both unions at the latter figure, with the promise of additional increases to cover higher wages agreed to by Wilson, Armour, Swift and Cudahy.

Though the government gave in to the packers' demands for higher ceilings in an effort to avert a walkout threatening the nation's meat supply, its original offer of raising the price on semi-processed meat sold to the U. S. was rejected on the grounds that there was no assurance of a large volume of purchases.

DEMOBILIZATION:
Hear 'Ike'

Calling himself "only a G.I." although he officially was "of the brass," bald, boyish-looking Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, army chief of staff, appeared before a joint congressional committee to personally report on the demobilization slowdown, which has aroused troop demonstrations the world over.

Gen. "Ike"

Declaring that the new program was adopted to brake an excess of discharges over the original schedule, "Ike" said that we would have "run out of army" by April unless the slowdown was put into effect. As it is, he said, 1,665,000 more men have been released than planned and another 2,000,000 will be separated within the next five months.

Vigorously denying that the slowdown was prompted by the desire of high officers to retain their rank, or by efforts to push military conscription through congress, Eisenhower said that sufficient men were required to occupy enemy territory in Europe and the Pacific, guard seven billion dollars worth of surplus equipment overseas, administer the Philippines, and arrange for withdrawal from Pacific bases.

Declaring that men would be kept no longer than necessary, "Ike" disclosed that all major commanders have been informed that by April 30 all enlisted men with 45 points or 30 months of service on that date were to be released or aboard ship, while requirements were to be further cut by June 30 to 40 points or 24 months of service.

Following his exposition of the new demobilization program, Eisenhower announced that he had banned further overseas demonstrations by troops on the question, though protests from G.I.s were to be passed on to the top. Both enlisted men and officers will be permitted to express their views in the determination of their essential status.

For continuing agitation, several G.I.s were ordered confined to quarters in Hawaii.

GERMANY:
Map Production

Even as church leaders besought President Truman's approval for providing Germany with private relief to avert privation this winter, the war, state and agriculture departments conferred on plans for furnishing material for the revival of essential civilian industry within the reich.

Under the program contemplated, the army would be placed in direction of production on the theory that the provision of vital commodities is necessary to maintain order and health within the occupation zone. The undertaking would represent the second step in occupation policy, the first dealing with prevention of chaos in the immediate wake of war and resurgence of organized opposition.

In supplying Germany with raw materials for essential output, the U. S. proposes to be careful not to stock such heavy industries as iron and steel which might be reconverted to war purposes, or to re-establish any plants that might be earmarked for removal for reparations.

Further, in permitting a resumption of essential production, the U. S. plans to retain close control over the distribution. Sufficient supplies would be allocated for the civilian population while exports of the remainder would be allowed for repaying America and building up overseas balances for purchase of raw materials for industries reestablished under Allied agreement.

Disclosure of the government plan for reviving vital German industry coincided with Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam's appeal to President Truman to permit Protestant churches of this country to ship clothing to the reich this winter. President of the Federal Council of Churches, Bishop Oxnam revealed that congregations throughout the country had thousands of bales of wear packed and only awaited permission to send it.

Having just returned from a tour of Europe with other church officials, Bishop Oxnam joined in a report commending the government decision to supply the reich with 500,000 tons of food to help relieve an ill-balanced and inadequate diet. Because of the lack of heat and the wear of irreplaceable clothing, however, a serious need exists for apparel, it was said.

Forecast Drop in World Sugar Harvest

A 400,000-ton decrease in world sugar production in 1945-46 compared with the year before is forecast by the USDA office of foreign agricultural relations, total output being estimated at 27.8 million short tons, 400,000 below the previous year.

Though North America's beet sugar production has been upward since 1943, Europe's has been downward, and world output for 1945-46 at 7.3 million tons is expected to be the smallest since 1923. Increased harvests of sugar cane in the western hemisphere also have been offset by decreased production in the Far East, Africa, Australia and the Pacific, and an estimated crop of 20.5 million tons for 1945-46 would be 500,000 tons less than the year before.

VETS:
Buck Outsiders

Carrying banners proclaiming that "We Can't Live on Promises," "We Fought for the U. S. A. and Now We're Discarded," and "Welcome Home for What?" World War II vets picketed every mine about Lansford, Pa., in a drive for jobs held by outsiders who accepted employment in the pits during the war years.

While thousands of United Mine Workers in the area refused to cross the ex-G.I.'s picket lines, officials of the Edison Anthracite Coal company refused to discharge outsiders just because they were not born in the district, claiming that it would be liable to lawsuit. Many of the demonstrators had never been previously employed, Edison having rehired all old employees discharged from service.

Despite UMW admonitions against acting against union members, various locals in the area passed resolutions that all outsiders who accepted employment in the mines since January, 1940, or opened businesses in the district were to leave. In formulating their demands, miners declared that since the pits were the principal source of employment about Lansford, hiring of outsiders seriously crimped job opportunities for town residents.

UNO:
Faces Test

No sooner had the United Nations organization to preserve postwar peace gotten underway than it appeared headed for its first substantial test over Iran's appeal for security against alleged Russian designs on the middle-eastern state.

At the same time, Indonesian natives were to call on UNO for support in their fight against the reestablishment of Dutch colonial rule in the East Indies, but since no member nation was expected to sponsor their plea, they could not hope for a hearing.

Iran's determination to push for a showdown, even against British persuasion to defer discussion at this time in the interests of unity, posed a delicate problem, since Iranian delegates could take the issue before the general assembly if the security council which includes Russia vetoed action.

Oil-rich and occupying a strategic gateway to southern Russia, Iran has been under heavy Red pressure ever since the development of the movement of the northern province of Azerbaijan for self-rule with Moscow's support. Efforts to stem the uprising were crippled by the refusal of Russian troops occupying that section of the country to permit Iranian forces to re-establish governmental authority.

Meanwhile, President Truman supported the position of this country's military advisers to the UNO meeting in demanding U. S. control of strategic Pacific islands instead of submitting them to an international trusteeship as favored by America's civilian delegates.

Declaring that the islands should be kept under U. S. control, Mr. Truman disclosed that this country would ask UNO for sole trusteeship. Other islands captured by American forces during the Pacific campaign, but not needed for our security, will be turned over to UNO, he said.

U. S. Aid Needed Abroad

In the U. S. for a vacation, blunt and rugged Winston Churchill told newspaper reporters that he hoped America would not pull out of Europe and jeopardize the fruits of victory. Britain was not strong enough to handle the job alone, he said. Declaring that he favored the partition of Germany, Churchill said that has never occurred except through rough and ready military occupation.

CHINA:
Plot Development

Work of China's national resources commission, charged with developing the country's key industries and administering other enterprises assigned to it, promises to be greatly enhanced with political unification under discussion of party leaders in Chungking.

With the commission presently operating about 30 mines, 30 power plants and 40 factories, American consultants have been called in to help with the improvement, rehabilitation and expansion of the country's youthful oil industry in one phase of postwar development.

Discovered in 1939 on the southern edge of the Gobi desert, the Yumen field has been especially marked for extensive exploitation. Seepages were known in the area for 2,000 years before drilling operations were undertaken and oil struck at 500 feet. Developed to provide China with petroleum after the Japanese had blockaded the seaports, the Yumen field currently is producing 4,000 barrels a day from 25 wells to supply a small refinery.

AUTO INDUSTRY:
Huge Expansion

In preparing to capitalize on a tremendous backlog of five years, plus normal demand, the automobile industry has laid plans for plant expansion and rehabilitation aggregating 800 million dollars.

Of the 800 million dollars, General Motors will spend 500 million. Having originally planned a 150 million dollar program, Ford has added another 50 million for a grand total of 200 million. Chrysler will lay out 100 million dollars.

Veterans' SERVICE BUREAU

EDITOR'S NOTE: This newspaper, through special arrangement with the Washington Bureau of Western Newspaper Union at 1616 Eye Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., is able to bring readers this weekly column on problems of the veteran and serviceman and his family. Questions may be addressed to the above Bureau and they will be answered in a subsequent column. No replies can be made direct by mail, but only in the column which will appear in this newspaper regularly.

Freezing Army Points

This office has received many letters asking whether or not once men get overseas their accumulation of discharge points stops. The answer from the war department invariably has been that men continue to earn discharge points so long as they are in service.

This question was brought to a head recently when Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson was surprised when informed by the army newspaper, Stars and Stripes, that point scoring stopped September 2.

The war department now declares that both are right. Men in service do continue to earn discharge points for their record for use when and if a new freezing date is established. They point out that the first freeze date was May 12 when the total for discharge was 85 points. A new freeze date was established for September 2 when the discharge point total was 70. However, since September 2, the war department has reduced the point score to 50, or 20 points down, which is more than the veteran would accumulate in the four-month period. In other words, while the veteran total is figured at the number of points he had accumulated up to September 2, 1945, his point total had been lowered since that date from 70 to 50, making all who had 50 points on September 2 eligible for discharge. Further lowering of the total points necessary for discharge are promised.

Questions and Answers

Q. Here's a question I've never seen or heard of being directly answered. Are there answers, or just evasive replies? Can the boys in service in Japan take up correspondence work or study in the U.S.A.F.I. if they have the time or ability? Our son is stationed in Osaka with a medical company. He wants to get started in a veterinarian course. Will be watching closely for an answer.—Mrs. A. J. W., Neligh, Nebr.

A. Yes, men in Japan can take certain courses of study with the U.S.A.F.I. However, it is doubtful if such a specialized course as veterinary could be taken by correspondence. Would suggest that your son take the matter up with his company commander.

Q. Is the widow of a World War I veteran, now receiving a pension, entitled to any additional benefits above her pension for doctor's care if she is an invalid?—Mrs. G. H., Eureka Springs, Ark.

A. No, the veterans' administration says that only in some instances of advanced age are widows of World War I veterans entitled to increase in pension.

Q. My husband enlisted in the air corps in August, 1944, for the duration and six months. He is now overseas. Will he be discharged when his enlistment period is up or must he wait until he has enough points? —Mrs. R. S., Sunbury, Pa.

A. The war is not yet over and will not be until so proclaimed by the President or congress. He will remain in the service until he earns sufficient points.

Q. My husband has been in service since August 2, 1945. I am in very bad health. We have two small children and expecting another one soon. Do you think I stand a chance of getting him out? — Mrs. J. R. B., Flat Lick, Ky.

A. I am afraid you stand little chance at the moment. When the third child is born, he will be eligible to make application for discharge.

Q. I was inducted into the army August 20, 1942. I received my honorable discharge May 10, 1943. Am I entitled to the $200 mustering-out pay? All my service has been in the U. S. A. How do I go about getting it?—A. W., Scotland, S. D.

A. Yes. The war department advises that you write to the Chief of Finance, Enlisted Personnel, War department, Washington, D. C.

Q. I have a friend in the navy. He has been in service since July, 1944, and overseas since last October, 1944. He is single and 20 years old. How many points does he have?—Miss B. C., Section, Ala.

A. As of January 1 he has 27 points. Thirty-six are necessary for discharge, 35 on February 1.

Q. I have a son who has been in service since December 18, 1944. He has six dependents, his mother, three brothers, two sisters. Is he eligible for discharge?—Mrs. G. E. P., Scottsville, Va.

A. Only minor children of the veteran are regarded as dependents in earning discharge points. It is possible for him, however, to file application for a discharge if he can make out a hardship case. He will lose his mustering-out pay, however. About his bonds, write to War Bond division, U. S. army, 4300 Goodfellow blvd., St. Louis 20, Mo.

Nebraska "The Cornhusker State"

By EDWARD EMERINE
WNU Features.

ATOP the magnificent Nebraska capitol stands a figure in bronze, The Sower. It is the symbol of Nebraska and its faith—faith in the plains, in the soil, in nature.

Nebraska is the abode of the sower. The seeds are sown, the plants nurtured, the harvest garnered. In war or peace, food is first on Nebraska's long production line from Wyoming in the west, to the Missouri river on the east. Its corn fields, its grain lands, its rows of sugar beets, its ranges where cattle feed on native grasses—from these come the foods that add to this nation's greatness and the welfare of men everywhere. Orchards, gardens, fields and ranges are Nebraska's wealth and the top soil its source of well-being.

The plains, with nature as the sower, were the camping and hunting grounds of seven tribes of Indians. The Otoes, the Omahas, the Pawnees, the Poncas, the Sioux, the Cheyennes and the Arapahoes hunted the shaggy buffalo, the fleet antelope, the deer and other game which had grown fat on the abundant fare provided by the prairies and streams. The Otoe Indians called the region "Nebrathka," which means "flat water" and referred to the long, wide and shallow Platte river.

Battleground of Indians.

Tribe attacked tribe, fighting for this greatest of hunting grounds. The last great battle was fought between the Sioux and the Pawnees at Massacre canyon, near Stanton, in 1873. There were around 40,000 Indians living in Nebraska, and their chief occupation was hunting. Some of them, however, practiced primitive agriculture between wars. Many Indian braves, including Spotted Horse, are buried in Fort McPherson cemetery, while others lie in Pawnee battlefield. The names of Yellow Hand, Crazy Horse, Red Cloud, Sitting Bull and others remain a part of Nebraska's tradition and lore.

Francesco Vasquez Coronado and his party of 30 Spanish cavalry were the first white men to visit Nebraska. That was in 1541. French fur traders and trappers began to venture up the Missouri river about 1700. A Spanish expedition under Capt. Pedro de Villasur reached the region about 1720 and was promptly massacred near the present site of Columbus. The Mallet brothers, with a party of eight Frenchmen, named the Platte river and traveled nearly the entire length of the state in 1839.

GOV. DWIGHT P. GRISWOLD

Gov. Dwight Palmer Griswold was born at Harrison, Sioux Co., Neb., in 1893. His parents were pioneers there. He graduated from Nebraska university in 1914. He served on the Mexican border as a sergeant in 1916, and as a first lieutenant and captain in World War I. He was first a banker, then newspaper publisher, before becoming governor in 1940. He has been reelected twice. His home is Gordon, Neb.

Spain, France and England all claimed the Nebraska plains at different times. In 1769 France ceded all of her claims to the area west of the Mississippi to Spain, but in 1801 Napoleon bought it back. Thomas Jefferson, in 1803, purchased Nebraska from the Little Corporal.

Lewis and Clark commanded the first expedition to Nebraska, 1804-1806. The Hunt party of Astorians skirted the Nebraska region in 1811 on their way to Oregon. Seven of them returned the next year, finding their way across the vast region by following the Platte river to where it joins the Missouri. Major Long with a party of 20 men in 1819 traveled from the Missouri up the Platte to the headwaters of its south fork near Denver. From 1807 to 1820 Manuel Lisa became the leading fur trader and explorer of the Nebraska region. The first military post was Fort Atkinson, established in 1819-1820.

French traders and trappers, hunters of the buffalo, soldiers and adventurers began to wear deep trails in the grass. The Indian tribes resented the white man. There was unrest and battles and massacres. Blood stained the prairie grass. Blood-curdling war cries in the night drove fear into the hearts of strong men.

Westward, Ho!

Rich land in Oregon. Gold in California. Nebraska became the highway of an expanding, restless, imaginative, adventurous nation. Westward — across Nebraska — the course of empire wended its way.

From Independence and St. Joseph came the covered wagons of the Oregon Trail. Gold-seekers came to join them and men heard of the California Trail. The Mormons, under Brigham Young, camped uneasily one winter near Omaha, then struck out boldly the next spring to mark the Mormon Trail. Intrepid riders lashed their horses from St. Joseph to Sacramento and the Pony Express was born, with 500 of its wearly miles through Nebraska. Stage coaches traveled the Overland Trail through Nebraska, and the Union Pacific struck out boldly from Omaha toward the Pacific in 1865. The Western Union's telegraph poles were often cut down by Nebraska Indians.

The Sower beckoned, and men came with plows that bit into the grassroots. Nebraska was organized as a territory in 1854 and became a state on March 1, 1867. Lincoln, named for the Great Emancipator, was made the capital. Nebraska became known as the "Tree Planter's State," for those hardy pioneers soon set out windbreaks, shade trees and orchards. The home of J. Sterling Morton, founder of Arbor day, stands today as a monument to his outstanding work in Nebraska's early home-making days.

Cattle Ranching Comes.

The buffalo were replaced by cattle, and on the open range thousands of cattle from Texas were fed and fattened. One of the most picturesque periods of Nebraska history was that of the cowboy, from 1867 to 1887. Enclosed ranches and mixed farming came next, but the famous old cow towns of Schuyler, North Platte, Kearney and Ogallala will never be forgotten. Their modern equivalents are Broken Bow, Burwell, Alliance and Valentine. The epic struggle between the cattlemen and the homesteaders is recorded in "Old Jules" by Mari Sandoz.

The Sower planted good seed in good earth. From that day in 1833 when Moses Merrill and his wife settled at Bellvue and established the first mission school, The Sower has blessed Nebraska.

SENATOR NORRIS

Many people know about Sen. George W. Norris of Nebraska and his record in the U. S. senate, extending over a third of a century. But in Nebraska he is honored for more than the anti-injunction bill, the Tennessee Valley authority and the "lame-duck" amendment.

Nebraska has the only unicameral, or one-house, state legislature in all of the 48 states. The one-house system began in 1937 and has 43 members elected on a non-partisan ticket.

This reform is the handiwork of George W. Norris who devised the plan, spent his own money to campaign and work for it.

Through the efforts of Senator Norris, Nebraska has a huge grid system which, in connection with irrigating a million acres of land, supplies electric power to farms and towns. All except one or two private electric utility companies have been taken over and added to the public power system.

Senator Norris made his home at McCook until he died there in 1944.

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

SELLING STEEL INCREASE

WASHINGTON. — Most of President Truman's appointments are very brief. Senators get five minutes with him. Congressmen get from 5 to 15 minutes. Cabinet members frequently get only 15 minutes.

So recently eyebrows went up when the White House bulletin board listed OPAdministrator Chester Bowles for a full hour with President Truman. Observers knew that the heat was on to increase the price of steel, and sell to inflation's No. 1 enemy on giving the nation its first big inflationary shot in the arm.

When Bowles entered the President's office, the die was already cast. Truman had decided that steel prices were going up. His job was to sell the idea to Bowles. Truman himself had been sold by his old friend, Reconversion Czar John Snyder of St. Louis, who in turn had been wined and dined by the steel people in Pittsburgh.

Chester Bowles also had talked with big steel leaders. His talks were far more energetic, more persuasive than Snyder's. Bowles once ran one of the best advertising firms in the nation, is an excellent salesman. All his salesmanship was turned on big steel leaders.

"You are going to have a bigger margin of profit than you realize," he told them. "You are now working 44 hours in the mills and 52 hours in your captive mines. When you drop to 40 hours, you will net a big saving in overtime. The price of scrap iron is now at ceiling. It will drop in the spring, which means more saving. Production per man went up to 10 per cent after the last war. It will do the same after this war, which will save you 100 million dollars alone. You can't tell what your profits will be. So why not try out a new increased wage scale without a sharp price hike? Try it out for six months—then come back and we'll examine the whole question again. If you need a price increase then we'll give it to you."

Bowles is a persuasive talker. He has more charm than any Washingtonian since Franklin Roosevelt. But he made no impression.

"After the last war, steel wages soared even without union pressure," Bowles summarized. "So did prices. And once inflation gets going, you'll have labor coming back until they get, not a 30 per cent increase in wages, but 50 per cent or even 75 per cent. You can't tell where this thing will stop."

EUROPEAN REFUGEES

Some of Jimmy Byrnes' expediters have really pepped up old-line state department diplomats when it comes to admitting European refugees.

When President Truman first proposed filling unused U. S. immigration quotas by admitting homeless refugees from Europe, state department diplomats said they had neither funds, nor the personnel—nor perhaps even the disposition.

However, some of the South Carolina blood which Byrnes has injected into the state department (men who drink cocacola instead of tea) decided that Presidential orders should not be kissed off so airily.

Though no money was available, they finally went to the bureau of the budget and squeezed out enough cash money to hire new consular personnel. Already they have started flying supplies to Europe to set up special offices to screen refugees and give them visas.

Old-line diplomats are leaning back in amazement. They have never seen so much speed before.

THE MERRY-GO-ROUND

Last spring the department of agriculture quietly agreed to advance France 750,000 tons of sugar from the Cuban crop. French colonial crops at that time were down to practically nothing and even what we loaned the French permitted a per capita consumption of only 22 pounds annually, compared to our 64. This friendly move is paying off now, however; because under the terms of the agreement, practically the entire French West Indies crop for this year comes to us. It is somewhat larger than was anticipated, and current estimates are that we will receive about 900,000 tons. . . . Henry Morgenthau's book on Germany, which appeared last fall, is not the only book the former secretary of the treasury will write. During his 12 years of close association with President Roosevelt, Morgenthau made painstaking notes on every conversation he had with FDR — and except for Harry Hopkins he probably had more than any other cabinet officer.

CAPITAL CHAFF

The radio time for Senator Taft's attack on Truman's address to the nation was reserved for him by the Republican national committee. . . . When Henry Kaiser signed his new contract with the auto workers, he remarked: "Dick Thomas (UAW president) is the man who came to the west coast last year and convinced me that I should take over the Willow Run plant and make automobiles. That puts the responsibility on his shoulders to see to it that I have the men to do the job."

...is still the nation's No. material, but the lumber ...eed not delay remodel- ing, repairs, or new construction which you have been wanting to get done. There are other materials available right now which will do a good job, and give permanent, satisfactory service. Take clay tile, for instance. Clay tile has been used on farms for years. It was not always used correctly for animal shelters, however; and here it was not used right, the buildings were not warm and dry. Uninsulated tile construction is economical and fireproof and well adapted to machine sheds, garages, and other similiar buildings which do not need insulation.

But the eight inch tile wall has its limitations for poultry houses, hog houses, and other buildings where insulation is necessary. It is no longer recommended for such structures. In such buildings, cavity tile walls should be used. The cavity tile wall is two independent walls, usually made of 4 inch tile, with two to three inches of insulation in the wall. Zonolite insulating concrete. 16 to one mix (16 parts Zonolite concrete aggregate to 1 part Portland cement) does a good job in cavity walls. Zonolite loose fill may also be used.

Tile lends itself admirably to all types of remodeling, even for such a large building as a dairy barn. Many old frame barns are still structurally sound above the mow floor, but have deteriated near the grade line, due to the rotting action of ground water and rain. These can be repaired, with the upper half left intact, by replacing the lower half with structural clay face tile walls. Jack the barn up, one side at a time, and cut off the lower frame wall. You can then place new footings and a new foundation. It's a good idea to plaster the foundation with Zonolite to slow up heat loss. The cavity tile wall is then built up to the required height, laying up several courses of tile at a time, and installing the insulating concrete or fill as you go along. The Zonolite concrete should be rodded firmly into place with a 2x4, to make sure of no later settling. The upper portion of the building is then lowered on to the new wall and anchored securely. The process is repeated with the other side.

To raise the barn, place 6x8 in. temporary timbers up against the mow floor joists, about 2 ft. in from the outside wall. These timbers are held in place by means of six inch posts, spaced about 6 feet on center, and supported by jackscrews. By operating the jackscrews, half of the building can be raised easily to a height sufficient for the mason to lay up the new wall with a minimum amount of trouble.

Next time: Hog Housing Requirements.

More Headaches For The Farmer

Once more the farmer is being asked to break all food production records. To plow more acres, feed more livestock and harvest more crops than ever before. He is being asked to do this so that America may continue to feed and clothe the needy throughout the world, as well as our own folks at home.

To carry out this job the farmer must have tools of production. Most of those he Owns have taken a terrific beating. They can't be tied together much longer with rusty fence wire.

In the teeth of this situation, The Farmer ran into a strike in the steel industry—a strike which hit at the heart of food production.

When the steel plants shut down, manufacturers of farm machinery and equipment, farm Trucks and tractors cannot get steel for their products.

This year the farmer won't receive as many of the replacements he desperately needs. He'll fight ahead with his old, broken machinery trying to crack another food production record, but the cards are stacked against him.

All this means more headaches for the farmer—loss of vital food production, and a bad dent in his pocketbook.

FACTS TOO FREQUENTLY OMITTED

The steel strike was called by the United Steelworkers of America—CIO, which insists on a wage increase totaling $166,000,000. The U. S. Steel Corporation has offered a wage rise which if applied throughout the industry would amount to $135,000,000.

Steel workers are already among the highest paid wage-earners in America. Before the strike their average earnings were approximately $1.16 an hour, $9.26 a day and $46.32 a week—on a forty-hour week. The U. S. Steel offer would have given them about $1.31 an hour, $10.46 a day and $52.32 a week. But they refused it, and accused the steel industry of conspiring to ruin the union with an offered increase of $25 a month, the highest increase in the industry's history.

The strike is a direct violation of the contract between the union and the steel companies. The union wanted a long-term contract and got it. The union agreed not to strike during the life of the contract. Yet, the union struck on January 21.

FIGHTING FOR A WAY OF LIFE

Farmers have a big stake in continuous steel production. They have an opportunity to say what they think about unchecked labor monopolies which bring to a stop the nation's recovery efforts, through excessive wage demands which could only add to inflation and cause soaring prices.

Not until enough of them protest unfair, dictatorial actions and urge proper safeguard against arrogant, heedless union leadership and one-sided labor laws will the country get back to sane, profitable production where everyone works together toward a better standard of living.

Before long the navy will cease to be outdressed by the army.

—*—

The navy is being recostumed, with those historic upside-down pants, sailor collars and demi tasse hats doing a fade out for snappier and more modernistic clohing.

—*—

Tradition is a fine thing and the old-time sailor suit was good enough for countless stout-hearted Americans to fight and die in, but nobody could feel swankily tailored in it.

—*—

Some people say, however, that the garb was a fine thing: It made the wearer fighting mad.

—*—

The change is not official yet, but the navy is trying out completely new uniforms for Jack Tars, and they are fully as smart as the army, marines and aircorps. Pants are pants, the buttons are in the right place and there is no lacing remotely associated with them. The old blouse with the wide collar is also gone, as is the traditional sail hat.

—*—

Strike up the band,
Here comes a sailor,
Freed from (at last)
Farragut's tailor!

—*—

You can now join the navy and look as good as if you were in the army.

—*—

When a girl has to choose between the army and the navy it will be all even so far as the costumes are concerned.

—*—

Those old-fashioned bell-bottom trousers were designed so that a tar could shake 'em off swiftly if he went overboard, but modern youth can break swimming records even in a paratrooper's field regalia.

—*—

Nobody knows why the hat was designed, but it was never a fit and was one reason why so many boys joined the army.

Opry House Notes

If there ever was a New York theatrical season walloping the notion that only dirt pays in the show world and that the big rewards go to the author who gets his ideas from under the linoleum, this is it. All the big money making musicals (with one exception) are of the refreshingly wholesome type. And away on top as money makers are the revivals of old time favorites, notable for loveliness of words and music.

"Show Boat," first produced almost twenty years ago, and revived in 1932, is back, for instance, and as terrific as ever. Believable human beings, decent impulses and the glorification of the more wholesome things of life mark every minute of the show.

—*—

On the other hand, there is that sign in 12-foot letters in Times Square that should help place some of the responsibility for juvenile crime, "Rougher and Tougher Than 'Murder, My Sweet'."

Quick, Hot Breads

Taste-tempting hot breads add a orful touch to any meal. Golden-sted muffins or fluffy biscuits are perfect accompaniment to meat salads and go equally well with lass of milk for a snack or with ee or tea for breakfast.

on't shy away from making ffins because you fear only fair ults. Quick breads are the most ily mixed of all baked goods and need to bear in mind only a simple rules to have success. he most important point to re-mber is not to "over-mix." ffin batter, for example, should "bumpy"—stirred only until dry ingredients are dampened the liquid. Biscuits should not worked to death—they will be more flaky and tender if the ook is not too ambitious.

Quick hot breads are an easy to put appetite appeal into the simplest meal. Served with butter and jam, they will really give the family something to look forward to even if the main dish is hash from left-r roast or soup and salad from accumulation of dabs of food in refrigerator.

heese adds flavor as well as pro-n to a meal when made with ffins like the following:

Cheese Muffins.

akes 12 medium-sized muffins)
¼ cups sifted all-purpose flour
teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
⅓ cup grated American cheese
egg
cup milk
¼ cup melted butter

ift flour once, measure; sift into xing bowl with baking powder and t. Add grated cheese and mix roughly. Beat egg, add milk and elted butter, and pour into the ter of the dry ingredients. Stir ickly until dry ingredients are st dampened. Batter should not smooth. Fill greased muffin pans out ⅔ full. Bake in a moderate-hot oven (425 degrees) for 15 or minutes, until golden brown. rve hot with butter and jam.

If you want to do other unusual ngs with muffins you might like em with a prune or a spice fla-r. Both of these will add extra joyment to meals.

Prune Muffins.

3½ cups flour
½ teasp o salt
4 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
⅔ cup shortening
1 cup brown sugar
2 eggs
1¼ cup milk
¾ cup cut, cooked prunes, well drained
Prunes and nuts for decoration

Sift together first four ingredients. ream shortening and add sugar gradually. Then add beaten eggs and milk. Add dry ingredients and mix thoroughly. Mix in prunes. Turn into greased muffin pans and decorate each muffin with a half a prune and nut. Bake in a moderately hot (400 to 425 degrees) oven for 25 or 30 minutes.

Spice Muffins.

2 cups sifted flour
1 egg
½ cup sugar
1 cup milk
¼ cup melted shortening
1 teaspoon ginger
1 teaspoon nutmeg
1 teaspoon cinnamon
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt

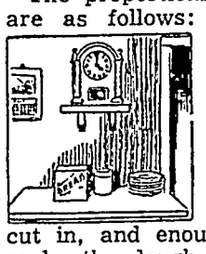
Sift together all dry ingredients. Combine egg, sugar, shortening and milk. Add dry ingredients and stir until smooth. Fill greased muffin pans ⅔ full and bake in a moderately hot (400 to 425 degrees) oven until done, 25 to 30 minutes.

What are our standards for making biscuits? Perfect biscuits are light and fluffed, fairly straight and even on the sides, level on top, well shaped and regular. Their tender crust is golden brown and rather smooth. When broken open, they show a creamy white, fluffy crumb which is even and fine-grained.

Over-mixing, or too long kneading of the dough makes biscuits tough with a pale crust. Speed and light handling are essential for flakiness.

Under-mixing, on the other hand, causes lack of flakiness in biscuits. These biscuits also lack in volume. The fat needs to be well distributed for a flaky texture.

The proportions for plain biscuit are as follows: 2 cups of flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, ¾ teaspoon salt, 5 tablespoons shortening and ½ cup milk. The dry ingredients are mixed; the fat cut in, and enough milk added to make the dough. Knead the dough for about 30 seconds, then roll and cut. Use a hot oven (450 degrees) and bake biscuits for 12 to 15 minutes.



Apple Sauce Biscuits.

2 cups flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons fat
1 egg
½ cup tart apple sauce
½ cup thick sour cream

Sift dry ingredients. Cut in fat. Beat egg and add to applesauce and sour cream. Add to first mixture. Turn on a floured board and knead for 20 seconds. Roll to ½ inch thickness and cut into 2-inch biscuits. Place on an oiled cookie sheet, sprinkle with grated cheese and bake.

Buttermilk Biscuits.

2 cups pastry flour
1 teaspoon salt
4 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon baking soda
4 tablespoons shortening
¾ cup buttermilk

Sift dry ingredients and cut in shortening. Add buttermilk and quickly mix to a soft dough. Turn out on floured board and knead for 30 seconds. Pat to desired thickness and cut with a small cutter. Place on oiled sheet and bake in a hot (425 to 450 degrees) oven for 10 to 12 minutes.

Lynn Says:

Here are tips on egg cookery: Beads on a meringue come from too much sugar. Frothy meringue comes from too little sugar. Two tablespoons of sugar to one egg white is a good rule to follow.

Eggs keep better if they are not washed before refrigerating.

Never place meringue on a hot pie filling. It will form syrup between filling and meringue and "skid." Pile the meringue in the center of the pie and anchor to the crust on the edges after spreading.

To open eggs evenly without breaking the shell, crack with a knife that is not too sharp.

The volume of the egg white may be increased slightly when 1½ teaspoons of water are added to white before whipping. This applies particularly if the eggs are not as fresh as possible.

Notes of a Newspaper Man:

Some of the Broadway brain-trusters were "solving" the world's problems. The gab switched to the re-emergence of Joe Stalin.

"I don't get it," said one. "So-called reliable sources reported Joe was very sick—some said dying or dead. Now he turns up, and they say he's in the best of health and was merely enjoying a vacation."

"Oh, I dunno," observed another Thinker. "I hear Stalin is far from well—and right now is suffering from a terrific grippe."

"Yeh-yeh," interrupted a third who made the most sense. "The same terrific grip he's always had on everything."

Mayor O'Dwyer's two-cent sales-tax plan to help finance the subway recalls the time Jimmy Walker was a State Senator and the legislature at Albany was arguing a raise in subway tariff. . . . State Senator Nichol was against raising the fare.

"Don't you think," orated Senator Nichol, "that the people of New York City go too far for a nickel?"

Walker's retort: "You've gone pretty far—for a Nichol!"

The elder Edison hated wearing a dress suit. Mrs. Edison, however, talked him into putting one on for a reception. . . . The affair was stuffy and Edison squirmed in discomfort. . . . He finally told Mrs. Edison he was going home. "I can't stand this doggone straitjacket!" he groaned as he left.

At home, to make sure the soup-and-fish apparel would never bother him again, Edison took hammer and nails and nailed the suit to the wall. . . . "There," he said when finished, "I hope you suffer as much as I did!"

It Could Happen: A group of brass hats gathered to consider the formation of a Society for American Participation in World War III and IV. . . . The first speaker keynoted the meeting by declaring: "Regardless of the so-called agreements made by the Big Three, we know sooner or later we will have to fight another war! We will have to fight Russia over many things—or Britain over markets! And—"

From the audience a voice hesitantly inquired: "But, gentlemen, isn't there something we can do to PREVENT another war?"

"What!" roared the chairman. "Throw that un-American out!"

The mail brought this unsigned contrib. A poet was irked by a pest who told him he could spend his time more usefully cooking. . . . The poet ignored him. . . . "Well," continued the bore, "don't you think a cook is more important than a poet?"

The poet pondered and then said: "I'm sure there isn't a dog in town who wouldn't agree with you."

"Well, it looks like the honeymoon between Truman and Congress is over."

"Yeah, now he has good reason for going home to mother."

Sounds in the Night: At the Diamond Horseshoe: "Relax, dearie, or that halo will choke you to death." . . . At the Embassy: "They wrote a song about her, 'O, What a Beautiful Moron!' " . . . At the Zanzibar: "Dull? They named a butter-knife after him!" . . . At Versailles: "He'll do anything for me, and I for him. But I'm running out of right arms!" . . . At the Golden Fiddle: "George Jean Nathan doesn't dislike actors. Only those he sees in shows." . . . At Ciro's: "She was in a terrible accident. She was having her face lifted and the derrick broke."

Wilson Mizner's balm to newcomers in the theater: "Remember this—most of the time the stumbling blocks which get in your way—will merely be the dust you leave behind tomorrow."

Faces About Town: Elliott Roosevelt being mobbed by admirers while leaving the "Show Boat" premiere at the Ziegfeld Theater. . . . James Stewart introducing Marie McDonald to Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr.... George Jean Nathan with a padre in the Cub Room of the Stork. Reforming? . . . Former Sec'y of War Henry Stimson unrecognized by the Pierre passersby. . . . Damon Runyon putting down candidates for a column about celebs who talk about themselves. . . . Marion Murray, whose betrothal to a General was cancelled suddenly, trying to be gay about it. . . . Candy Jones, who has a cold, at the Zanzibar ringside, wearing (among other things) a baby's teething ring, the inscription on which reads: "Don't Kiss Me!"

Sallies in Our Alley: A ham actress, famed for her conceit, visited the Hartmans at the Waldorf. . . . "I had a big season in Hollywood," she boasted, "including three terrific scenes with Errol Flynn." . . . "Yeh," quipped Grace Hartman, "he fights with everybody." . . . Oz Nelson says with many people marriage is a gamble, but with Hank Greenberg it's a Gimbel. . . . A PEOPLE DISCIPLINED
Temperance Lesson

LESSON TEXT Numbers 14:11-24.
MEMORY SELECTION: For whom the Lord loveth he correcteth; even as a father the son in whom he delighteth.—Proverbs 3:12.

Instruction, training and culture, sometimes calling for the touch of judgment or punishment, that the lesson may be rightly learned—this is the meaning of discipline.

It is a good word and speaks of that which is much needed in a disordered and dissolute world.

Our lesson tells of God's plan for the discipline of the people of Israel in preparation for their entry into the Promised Land. They were not ready when God first brought them up to it, but through hard and trying experiences they learned. They did not believe God, so they had to learn the hard way.

One wonders whether we will be wiser than they. America is now in the awful grasp of a postwar wave of careless living, of moral disintegration and of awful dissipation. Alcoholic liquors flow in an uncontrolled flood of destruction. Where is the moral fiber that made America great?

I. There is a Limit to God's Patience (vv. 11, 12).

The background of our lesson is the report of the spies who were sent up into the land. All agreed that it was a good land, but 10 of them were afraid of its inhabitants. Two of them, Joshua and Caleb, urged the people to take God at his word and go up to possess the land. But the people rebelled and wanted to turn back to the fleshpots of Egypt.

God had been patient with the people, but the time had come when further patience ceased to be a virtue and would only be indulgence. Then judgment came—and fast!

There is a limit to God's patience with a sinful people. It is almost heartbreaking to think of the possibility that America may all too soon press its downward course to the point where God says, It is enough.

II. There is Power in Intercessory Prayer (vv. 13-19).

Moses stepped into the breach and made a mighty and moving plea for his people. He knew the power of intercession and called on God for mercy upon the people. He pointed out that the honor of the Lord was involved in bringing His people into the land. He recognized the guilt of the older members of the nation but asked for another chance for the children. He based his prayer on the known qualities of God, his justice and, above all, his mercy.

Does not this strongly suggest the importance of Christian people making their influence count in the solution of social problems? Prayer accomplishes more than this world has ever conceived to be possible. Praying people count with God, and hence they count in the affairs of men.

More Christian people ought to be deeply concerned about our country's liquor problem, and all the physical, moral, social, political and spiritual ills which are caused by drink.

III. There is Punishment for Unbelief (vv. 20-23).

The pardon of God for the people as a whole did not overlook or wink at the awful unbelief of those who had rebelled against God.

He had not left them without a strong basis for faith in him. Again and again he had made known his might in miraculous deliverances during their days of travel from Egypt. But they simply hardened their hearts in unbelief.

Lack of faith in God is no little offense against him. He has a right to our unquestioning belief and immediate obedience. Somehow we have come to regard it as a special favor toward God if we believe him, when the fact is that unbelief in such a God is definitely and obviously sin.

IV. There Is a Reward for Courageous Living (v. 24).

God is looking for men of faith. All through Scripture we find the Lord coming magnificently to the help and blessing of the one who will believe him.

Caleb and Joshua were brought into the land, preserved through all of Israel's wandering, and kept in vigor even to old age in order to enjoy the promised possession (see Josh. 1:6-9; 14:10-12).

Caleb is an example of what courage, faith, self-control—yes, discipline, can do for a man. We need men and women—yes, young men and women with the spirit of Caleb. Social customs of our day encourage self-indulgence. Drinking is on the increase. Moral standards are low and seem to be getting lower.

What shall we do? Teach our young men and women to have faith in God and to discipline their lives in accordance with his word, so that they may be set free for courageous and useful living.

ouble Wedding Anniversary elebrated Sunday In Liberty

IEMERS, RIDDERS OB-SERVE 25th WEDDING

urprise Dinner Held At The Liberty Church

A double silver wedding anniversary was celebrated Sunday at e Liberty Township Methodist hurch when Mr. and Mrs. Ben idder and Mr. and Mrs. Ben Rieer were the honored guests.

At noon a dinner was served to out sixty relatives of the two uples. This was followed by a ogram after which open house as held from 2:00 until 4:00 p. m. hen friends and other relatives ho came to honor the two coules were served ice cream,, coffe and cup cakes.

Mrs. Riemer (Mattie Gates) and rs. Ridder (Hattie Gates) are win sisters. The couples were arried in a double ceremony at he parental Fred Gates home at ngram, Wisconsin on February 0,, 1921 at the Methodist Church, ith the Rev. Charles Adee perorming the ceremony.

The couples came immediately o Hancock County to farm in Liberty township. The Ridders beran housekeeping on the Eric Joten farm, and the Riemers moved nto the old Albert Riemer place where they have lived ever since. Mr. and Mrs. Ben Ridder a couple f years ago purchased the old eo. Ulrich farm which is now heir home.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Ridder are the parents of two children: a daughter, Mrs. Loren Gast, whose husband is in the service, and Elwyn, at home.

Mr. and Mrs Riemer are the parents of a daughter, Miss Lois, at home.

For the annivesary dinner the children presented their mothers with beautiful corsages and the fathers a white boutonnier. Both of the ladies wore rose colored dresses and accessories that were alike.

For the dinner the tables had been beautifully decorated; bouquets of roses adorned the brides' table, while the other tables had bouquets of snapdragons. Two 3 tier decorated wedding cakes, each topped with a silver bell, formed the centerpieces for the table at which the two honored couples were seated.

Both of the decorated wedding cakes were baked and decorated by Mrs. Emory Weaver, neice of the brides.

Following the dinner in the dining room of the church, a program was given. The Misses Marie and Margaret Pringnitz, and Margaret Haefner formed a trio and three numbers were given. Mrs. Bernard Pringnitz accompanied them on the piano. This was followed by a special reading by Miss Peggy Coobs, after which Mr Emil Beier gave a short history of both couples.

Rev. H. E. Harvey then spoke. Both of the grooms and both of the brides responded with brief talks.

During the open house period, some seventy-five people signed the register books and Mr. and Mrs. Riemer and Mr. and Mrs. Ridder were presented with gifts of silver.

Out of town guests and relatives who attended included: Mrs. Fred Gates of Clear Lake, mother of the two brides; Mrs. Ira Lathram of Clear Lake, aunt of the brides; Mrs. Robert Mertinson, a sister and her husband of Minneapolis; Martha Ridder of Watertown, South Dakota, aunt of Ben Ridder; Mrs. Ida Ridder, mother, and Walter, brother of Ben Ridder of Leland; and Mrs. August Nuehring, of Liberty, only aunt of Mr. Riemer. There were present many relatives of both couples from this community.

A bit of history connected with the wedding 25 years ago is entirely "off the record," but it can now be told. When these 2 swanky young men were about to wed these dark eyed brunette twins, and as long as the prospective grooms were not twins, but had similar last names, all that was necessary was to change the first name of each young gentleman and it was found that each had the middle name of "Ben." Therefore their first names were pushed into the discard and from then on it was Ben Riemer and Ben Ridder! So each of the fair damsels who were twins each had a husband whose name was Ben, and with a very similar last name, and so it has been for 25 years.

Infantile Paralysis Fund Needs Many More Contributions

AAA TO HOLD SIGN-UP MEETINGS SOON

Farm Plan Will Aid Soil Conservation Program

AAA Community Committees will soon hold sign-up meetings in their respective communities relative to the 1946 Farm Plan, said Alfred V. Josten, AAA Chairman.

The Farm Plan, explained Mr. Josten, is an individual work sheet that seeks to bring each particular farm into a working unit to accomplish goals of crop and livestock production and conservation practices to conform to a pattern designed to meet estimated needs of the nation. The new type of conservation program for 1946 puts more responsibility on farmers and AAA Committees in selecting conservation practices for each farm that will accomplish most in rebuilding fertility to repair the damage resulting from high production during the war.

Mr. Josten said county budgets have been set up for use of funds appropripated by Congress to help farmers meet costs of needed conservation work in the county. Therefore, a careful job of planning the work is necesary. We want to be able in Hancock County to report an efficient use of these funds toward initiating a long-range conservation and soil improvement program.

LESS THAN HALF OF GOAL NOW REACHED

Contributions Still Needed To Save Lives

Mrs. R. A. Jorgenson, Secretary of the Hancock County Committee of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, reports that the March of Dimes fund totalled $1,227 40, as of Saturday, February 9. A few more contributions are coming in each day, but a lot of more dollars must be contributed by the good people of Hancock County to make the drive a complete success.

The Hancock County Committee had hoped that the March of Dimes drive, which closed January 31, would bring in at least $3,000 This amount was estimated as needed to take care of balances due the National fund and to take care of the anticipated need of 1946. Those who have not yet contributed to the fund should mail in their contributions immediately.

Following is a list of totals received from contributors who gave each of the following towns as their mailing address:

Britt	$289.80
Garner	279.25
Klemme	246.45
Kanawha	99.90
Goodell	70.65
Corwith	58.55
Woden	36.60
Crystal Lake	32.85

Total	$1,227.40

A total of 3,500 letters were mailed out and to date 803 have been returned with contributions.

The committee has a complete record of each contribution: The name, amount of contribution and the address. This information is on file for inspection by anyone interested.

A few more contributions will be turned in by the several theatres of the county who cooperated in the campaign.

If YOU have not contributed, do so at once and help bring the fund up to the $3,000 mark so urgently needed.

Radar Opens Way for Scientific Exploration of Stratosphere; Filibuster Fair Employment Bill

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

RADAR:
Reach Moon

With U. S. army radar contact with the moon, vast possibilities confronted a rapidly developing scientific world, which had recorded the explosive use of atomic energy only a short six months ago.

Having sent radio waves 238,857 miles up to the moon at the rate of 186,000 miles a second and registered echoes 2½ seconds later, army physicists working on the project at the Evans Signal laboratory in Belmar, N. J., saw these possible revolutionary wartime and peacetime uses of the new technique:

- Radio control of long-range jet or rocket-propelled missiles, circling the earth above the atmosphere.
- Study of effects of upper layers of atmosphere on radio waves.
- Drawing of detailed topographical maps of distant planets and determine the composition of other celestial bodies.
- Radio control of strato-ships sent aloft to record astronomical data computed aboard such craft by electronic devices.

CONGRESS:
Seek Labor Curb

Despite the general congressional tendency to give the administration wide latitude in handling the strike situation, especially in an election year, southern solons led by Representatives Smith (Dem., Va.) and Cox (Dem., Ga.) have prodded cautious legislators toward consideration of anti-strike measures.

Hitting congressional timidity for taking the teeth out of the President's proposed fact-finding legislation, Smith declared his intentions to restore the right of federal officials to look into disputants' books in studying issues and establish a 30-day anti-strike period.

In addition, Smith joined with other congressmen in calling for legislation which would make unions as well as companies equally responsible for observing contracts, and went even further in demanding the prohibition of sympathy strikes and the organization of supervisory and management employees.

Crippling Strike

As the far-flung steel strike involving upwards of 800,000 workers took effect, government officials looked to a widespread closing of many plants dependent upon the vital material for peacetime products.

Ordinarily, the big auto manufacturers hold only a 10-day inventory of sheet steel, while producers of washing machines, vacuum cleaners and similar items build up 30 to 40 day stocks. Anticipating a walkout, however, many companies ordered heavily in preceding weeks, though the government restricted permissible inventories of sheet steel to 45 days and other steel to 60 days.

In evaluating the situation, government officials declared that the volume of production would be partly influenced by the amount of material manufacturers may decide to draw on from stocks. Though many of the bigger companies in the auto and appliance industries have been struck, smaller plants and parts suppliers have been free to work.

Rescinding all priorities after the CIO-United Steel Workers left their jobs, the government directed warehouses to channel stocks to utility, fire, police, hospital, railroad, food processing and other outlets serving the public needs.

Plant Seizures

In taking over struck packing plants, the government declared that meat was a vital product, necessary for the maintenance of American strength in securing the peace during the continuing postwar emergency, differentiating it from goods of a civilian nature.

Though AFL members agreed to return to their jobs, the CIO packinghouse workers rebelled at going back in U. S. controlled plants under old pay rates. By taking over the plants and re-establishing old conditions, they said, the government had robbed them of their one weapon for enforcing higher wage demands.

While the government took over the plants of Swift, Armour, Cudahy, Wilson, Morrel and others, with company officials conducting the business under U. S. supervision, federal conciliators maintained efforts to bring the disputants together on the wage issue. Increased price ceilings were proposed to offset higher pay advances.

PEARL HARBOR:
Short's Turn

In telling the Pearl Harbor investigating committee that the war department's withholding of intercepted Japanese messages prior to the fatal attack on the naval base had not permitted him to make adequate preparations against assault, Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short took the same position as Admiral Kimmel.

Lashing the war department for having made him the "scapegoat" for the disaster, Short declared that had he been furnished the gist of intercepted Japanese messages pointing toward imminent war, he would have girded his Hawaiian command for an all-out alert. As it was, he said, he only ordered a watch against sabotage and presumed it was satisfactory since Chief of Staff Marshall had not countermanded the step.

Discussing the intercepted enemy message of December 6, indicating a break in diplomatic relations, and the concluding part of the dispatch December 7, specifying the exact time for the rupture, Short asserted that had the war department sent him the information promptly, he would have had four hours in which to prepare for an attack. A telephone call to Hawaii would have taken a few minutes, Short stated.

TALK:
And More Talk

Resisting northern efforts to push through the fair employment practices bill, which prohibits discrimination in hiring workers, southern senators led by Misissippi's Theodore G. Bilbo carried on a lengthy filibuster against the measure in their drive to talk it to death.

With all of the southern senators save Pepper (Dem., Fla.) lined up against the FEPC, one outdid the other in holding forth against the measure. Whereas Bilbo announced his readiness to deliver a 30-day speech, Eastland (Dem., Miss.) threatened to outshine his colleague by filibustering for two years.

In forming ranks to talk the FEPC to death, the southern senators, referring to chamber members as "my delightful and revered friend," etc., concentrated on discussion of the contents of the formal senate journal, which carries a detailed account of proceedings. For hours Dixie's stalwarts talked about the advisability of including a chaplain's prayer in the report before Taft (Rep., Ohio) got them off on something else by succeeding in having the matter tabled.

GRAIN:
Big Demand

With the government planning to export between 200 and 225 million bushels of wheat during the first half of 1946, and with livestock producers and distillers scrambling for grain to meet heavy feed and processing needs, farmers were assured strong and steady markets through the year.

Because of the government's export program and feed and processing needs, the nation's supply of wheat was expected to dip to around 200 million bushels by July 1, with some sources predicting even less. With one to two months supply on hand, many mills already are beginning to feel the pinch, and distillers have been forced to use hulled oats for alcohol despite smaller gallonage per 100 bushels.

Though the department of agriculture considered limiting the use of wheat for feed, it reportedly was reluctant to act because of a shortage of feed in the poultry producing New England states.

VETS:
Surplus Goods

Disposal of surplus goods to vets promised to be speeded up through the formation of a special division in the War Assets corporation to handle the program and meet numerous objections posed by past practices.

Though the volume of surplus goods for disposal will depend upon the final determination of service needs after demobilization, the Chicago regional office of WAC was quick to set up model procedure to facilitate the movement of government material to G.I. applicants.

Under the new system, any vet desiring surplus goods will be given a certificate to purchase whatever material he wants, and a WAC representative then will conduct him to the department handling the item. If the product is not available, the vet will then be notified when it has been received, and he will be permitted to make a purchase under ceilings established by OPA.

Formerly, vets had complained that ceiling prices were too high, and that they had not been notified of public sales to dealers on a bid basis for unclaimed surplus material.

Doctors Aid 'Blue Baby'

Snug in a scarlet and ivory suit, with a red cap tucked over golden curls, 2-year-old Judy Hackman of Buckley, Wash., kicked impishly as she was wheeled out of famed Johns Hopkins hospital in Baltimore, Md., to be taken home after a delicate operation had repaired a malformed heart that menaced her life.

When first brought into the hospital, Judy faced early death as a "blue baby," but Doctors Blalock and Taussig skillfully sewed a good artery to a defective one, increasing the supply of oxygenated blood in her system. As the youngster recovered, the blue line in her lips gradually was supplanted by a rosy hue.

GERMANY:
Rural Elections

First free voting in Germany since the Nazi rise to power in 1933, elections held in the rural sections of the American zone of occupation resulted in a decided victory for the liberal Social Democratic party, which polled 41.4 per cent of the ballots.

In swinging to the Social Democrats, the Germans passed up the conservative Christian Democratic Union of Catholics and Protestants, which drew 28 per cent of the vote, and the radical communists, who polled about 3 per cent.

Lending credence to the American authorities warning that the elections were largely determined by personalities rather than basic party principles was the defeat of the Christian Union. Seeking to swing over the small land-owners' vote, organization candidates asserted that a radical victory would lead to subdivision of existing acreage to accommodate refugees.

INSURANCE: Policy Loans Up

Reflecting increased emergency needs resulting from the economic dislocations following V-J Day, life insurance policy loans have risen since the end of the war, almost doubling in the case of some companies over the record low point of 1945. Advances averaged between $100 and $200.

Despite the rise in new loans, however, the debt position of policy-holders was far more favorable than in 1939, the amount outstanding at the end of 1945 having been pared almost 200 million dollars to about 1 billion from the prewar years. Whereas the ratio of loans to reserves stood at 13 per cent in 1939, it now is only 5 per cent.

While cash surrender value payments also rose moderately following V-J Day, the total of 240 million dollars in 1945 compared with 732 million in 1939.

FARM PRICES:
Familiar Pattern

Since the end of World War II, the prices of farm products have shown a tendency to follow a trend similar to that which occurred after the end of World War I, according to the Alexander Hamilton institute. When World War I was drawing to a close, prices first showed a moderate recession from the peak which was reached during the wartime rise, and then resumed their advance.

South America May Be Rich Oil Source

Some of the world's greatest deposits of oil may be found locked in or beyond the forbidding Andes mountains of South America, says Ethyl News magazine. South America already is the second largest oil-producer in the world, and evidences of the presence of petroleum are found the full length of the Andes, giving foundation to the belief that some of the world's major deposits may be located there, it is declared.

Wartime depletion of oil reserves makes the discovery of new deposits all the more imperative, according to the publication, adding that part of the answer may lie in the snow-clad, towering Andes running 4,500 miles from Tierra del Fuego up to the Caribbean coast of Venezuela.

IF YOU look over the list of all the leading ball players for the last 30 years, including baseball's hall of fame at Cooperstown, you'll find that over 90 per cent of them came from cities and towns under 10,000.

Mort Cooper

Cobb, Speaker, Jackson, Mathewson, Alexander, Cy Young, Johnson, Grove, Sisler, Eddie Collins, Hornsby, Foxx, Lajoie, Home Run Baker, Wagner, Bob Feller, the Cooper brothers, Keller, Dickey, the DiMaggios, Hartnett, the Deans, Carl Hubbell, and so on came to their fame from isolated and unknown spots on the map. Such instances run into the hundreds. New York's main contributions have been Gehrig, Greenberg and Frish. Chicago has turned out a few stars, including Phil Cavaretta. Baltimore gave the game Babe Ruth. But New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston and other crowded cities in proportion have lagged far behind.

In towns running from 1,000 to 10,000 population there is always room for a ball field. In these "Sweet Auburns, loveliest villages of the plains," there is space in which kids can hit, run, throw and slide. They can play the game up to the hilt. But in a city such as New York, you can see thousands trying to play on crowded streets as cars come through to drive them back to the sidewalks. Ever try to slide over cobblestones while eluding a fast-moving automobile?

Few Stars From Cities

Take a look at the now famous Cardinal roster, which embraces at least 30 stars. At least 95 per cent of these came along and up from places you never heard about. If these players had been born in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, etc., possibly two or three would have made the big leagues. That is the way the percentage runs. Gehrig and Frisch came along through Columbia and Fordham. But few street kids have a chance to get any college course and find a ball field where they can develop.

Baseball's hall of fame, now and in years to come, would be extremely thin if it had to look to the crowded, thoughtless larger cities for its talent. If there isn't enough within these cities, there is always space enough outside — and there are still busses running and there will soon be motor cars available.

Complaining about juvenile delinquincy, youthful crime, is a waste of time. The responsibility belongs to older people who through sport and the full support of so many hard working organizations can change the entire picture in a few years.

Athletes and Condition

What group of athletes keep in better physical condition—or worst physical condition, so far as professional sport is concerned?

At a recent gabbing session we ran into a number of coaches, assistant coaches, trainers and assistant trainers who know their way around, who have been in charge of various sports for many years. It was their belief that professional football players and professional tournament golfers on the average were in better physical condition than any other group, and that professional baseball players trailed the list.

This statement will bring a loud and lusty squawk from many ball players, but it happens to carry more than a mere shade of truth. Anyway, the coaches and trainers who felt this way about it should know what they are talking about.

"This, of course, doesn't include all ball payers," one trainer said. "But it includes too many of them. Most of them couldn't do half the job a pro football player has to face. Watch most of them hit a triple and you'll find them puffing at third base and that's less than 100 yards. They don't turn in enough road work to build up their legs. A pro baseball player should last far longer than a pro football player, considering the punishment the footballer has to take, but few of them do. Last season the New York Giants had Mel Hein, Herber and Ken Strong, each with nearly 20 years of football behind him. There have been many others such as Hutson with 10 or 12 years already cashed in.

"For example I see where Detroit's Tigers this season have 43 exhibition games. This means a total of 197 contests from March to October, a long march that demands the best sort of physical shape. Many of them will be ready for this endurance test. But quite a lot won't be, unless they make a far harder effort to get in shape and keep in shape than so many have made in the past. Those fellows heading south early are the smart ones. This will be the toughest season any of them will have to tackle."

MUNITIONS TO JAPAN

WASHINGTON.—The Pearl Harbor investigating committee has now spent nearly three months digging into military - naval - political reasons why we were caught asleep on December 7, 1941. While this is important, all the facts show that Japan would have attacked anyway; if not at Pearl Harbor, at some other place, and if not on December 7, at some other time.

Meanwhile, we have seized various documents from the Japs, showing that this war was carefully built up over a period of years and that certain American munitions makers were either unsuspecting or deliberate Jap co-partners.

If we are to prevent war in the future—and that presumably is one motive of the Pearl Harbor committee—the manner in which American business aided the Japs to prepare for Pearl Harbor is important. We must build up machinery so this doesn't happen again.

MUNITIONS LOBBIES

One thing the Pearl Harbor committee might well investigate is the way lobbies developed in Washington to put pressure on the government to sell war goods to Japan. These lobbies, representing oil, gasoline, scrap iron, airplanes, machine tools, made a lot of headway with the army and navy, sometimes with the state department.

One man they never affected was Harold Ickes. As secretary of the interior he controls the export of helium gas, and at exactly the same month the above report was written, the Germans were trying to buy helium from the U. S. A. for their zeppelins.

The army, the navy and Secretary of State Hull gave their okay. But Ickes said no—unless American inspectors were stationed in Germany to see how the helium was used. Finally the question came up in cabinet meeting. Secretary Hull gave a long speech telling why it was perfectly safe to sell helium to Germany without inspection. As the vote went round the table, every cabinet member voted against Ickes.

But Ickes still said no. Under the law, the secretary of the interior has absolute control over the export of helium. No one can overrule him. So finally FDR turned to Ickes and said:

"Well, Harold, you're the boss. You win."

VETERANS' PROBLEMS

Lt. Col. R. P. Bronson, chief of the contact and service branch of the Veterans' administration, blinked when he was handed a telegram from a distressed veteran the other day. It read:

"Assistance needed stop brother murdered here December 26 stop reply by wire."

Colonel Bronson instructed an aide to phone the veteran's home city and see that he was given immediate help. Then he continued to leaf through the daily file of pleas that come to his desk.

"It's all in a day's work," he said. "But I'll admit that one had me stumped for a while."

Wide and varied are the SOS appeals the Veterans' administration receives from men wearing the discharge insignia. They range from vets wanting to get traffic tickets "fixed" to those who want to adopt children, purchase new automobiles or get liquor licenses.

"We're the 'Little Mother' agency of the government," said the colonel, a two-fisted overseas veteran with a sense of humor and four battle stars on his campaign ribbons. "We do our best, but of course we can't please everybody. It would make it a lot easier on us if some of our correspondents realized that their off-the-track problems hinder the handling of thousands of legitimate requests from men seeking benefits under the G.I. Bill of Rights and so on. When they ask us to find them wives, that sort of stumps us."

The love interest is uppermost in unusual V.A. mail. However, a Maryland vet recently wanted help in getting his water main connected.

A West Virginian posed the following $64 question:

"Do you know of or can you find out about some government agency which can assist me in finding a wife? I am a veteran of two years and nine months service—age 39—and so far, for some unknown reason, I am unsuccessful in finding a bride. Hope to receive a favorable reply very soon."

Lincoln Established Department Of Agriculture 84 Years Ago

Great President Always Remained A Farmer at Heart

Abraham Linclon sat at his desk studying a document a clerk had laid before him. Now and then he would raise his eyes to glance out the window at a blue-clad sentry pacing the White House lawn.

Soon he finished reading, took off his steel-bowed spectacles, reached for a pen and signed his name to the last page.

The paper he signed that May day in 1862 was not an army-shifting order that would change the tide of battles, but nevertheless its effects have been felt in war and peace in the three-quarters of a century that have followed. The document was an "Act to Establish the United States department of agriculture." Thus in the agony of the Civil war was born an organization which today serves six million of the nation's farms.

Americans remember Lincoln best as the Great Emancipator whose principles have stirred men the world over. Few citizens, perhaps, realize the profound effect Lincoln and his administration had on the agriculture of the United States. For not only did he foster the act establishing the U. S. department of agriculture, but he promoted other legislation that gave farming an impetus that has speeded its development to this day.

Lincoln was farm bred. He never lost the feel of the earth. All his life he was a close student of agriculture. He knew its needs and the possibilities of its advancement as few presidents have before or since.

The story of Lincoln's boyhood on the farm is an American classic. His early days were spent on a 30-acre tract near Knob creek about 10 miles from his birthplace at Hodgenville, Ky.

Moved to Indiana.

When Abe was seven years old, the family moved across the Ohio river into southern Indiana. Tragedy was to come early into the young boy's life for it was here that his mother, Nancy Hanks Lincoln, died. The Lincolns had established themselves on a knoll surrounded by low-lying, marshy fields. Abe had to walk a mile to haul drinking water.

Thomas Lincoln had taken an option on 160 acres of land at two dollars an acre. He completed payments on about half of that total, varying his farming activities with hunting and occasional jobs of carpentry. Seven years after the family had arrived in Indiana, the farm's cultivated area totaled only 17 acres.

The Lincoln family moved to Illinois in 1830, taking up land along the Sangamon river in Macon county. Soon after arriving, Abe reached his 21st birthday. That meant freedom from his father's yoke. So he bade farewell to his family and moved on to New Salem.

Student of Agriculture.

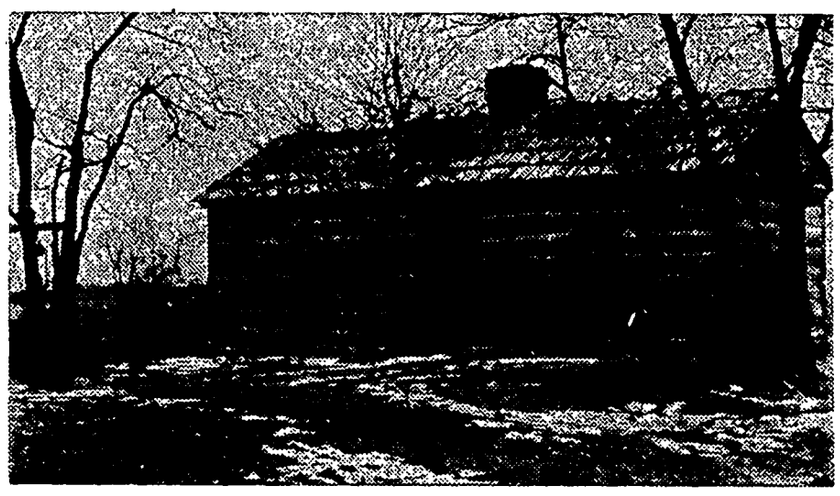
As a successful lawyer riding the Illinois circuit and visiting neighboring states occasionally to try cases, Lincoln was a close student of agriculture. He was often invited to speak before farmers' meetings. One of the most notable instances historians record of his appearances before farm groups came in 1859 — a year before he was elected President — when he was invited to address the agricultural fair held by the Wisconsin State Agricultural society at Milwaukee.

On that occasion he said:

"No other human occupation opens so wide a field for the profitable and agreeable combination of labor with cultivated thought as agriculture. Every blade of grass is a study; and to produce two where there once was but one is both a profit and a pleasure. And not grass alone, but soils, seeds and seasons, saving crops, diseases of crops, what will prevent and cure them; hogs, horses and cattle; trees, shrubs, fruits, plants and flowers—each is a world of study within itself."

His words were prophetic of the research conducted today by plant breeders, animal husbandmen and soil scientists at state agricultural colleges and experiment stations.

There was great room for progress in agriculture when Lincoln entered the White House. Farming was still being done with horse power although an impressive start had been made in mechanization. But it still took about as long to plow a field, plant a crop and cultivate it as it had in George Washington's time. This was particularly true in the pioneer areas of settlement in the West.



ILLINOIS HOMESTEAD . . . This is the last farm home built by Thomas Lincoln, father of the president. Abe Lincoln, then a grown man, helped his father build the house and visited it often. It is in Coles county, near Charleston.

Reaper Coming into Use.

The early 1830s had witnessed the introduction of the reaper but its use was not universal when the Civil war broke out. Farmers had been using the steel plow for about 25 years. The modern fertilizer industry was not established until 1850, after scientific experiments in Europe had demonstrated the value of plant feeding. By 1860 production had reached only 20,000 tons. Last years farmers used more than 12,000,000 tons.

Food production was just as important in the Civil war as in World Wars I and II. Lincoln and his advisers sought measures both near and long range that would strengthen the position of agriculture. The administration threw its weight behind three major bills and within a year they had become the law of the land. They were: the act establishing the U. S. department of agriculture; the land grant college act to which the nation's farmers today owe the existence of the far-flung system of agricultural colleges in every state of the union, and the homestead act.

Lincoln had advocated the establishment of a department of agriculture in his first message to congress, in December, 1861. Then he had said:

"Agriculture, confessedly the largest interest of the nation, has not a department nor a bureau, but a clerkship only. While it is important that this great interest is so independent in its nature as not to have demanded or extorted more from the government, I respectfully ask congress to consider whether something more cannot voluntarily be given with general advantage."

By the time he delivered his second annual message, the department had been created and Lincoln was able to report:

"I have caused the department of agriculture of the United States to be organized to carry out the act of congress of May 15th last. The commissioner informs me that within the period of a few months this department has established an extensive system of correspondence and exchanges, both at home and abroad, which promise to effect highly beneficial results in the development of a current knowledge of recent improvements of agriculture, in the introduction of new products and in the collection of the agricultural statistics of the different states. Also it will be prepared to distribute largely seeds, cereals, plants and cuttings, and has already published and liberally diffused much valuable information."

The department of agriculture thus played its part in the Civil war. Its services to the nation's farmers have continued to grow. Every farm home today feels its benefits. Farmers everywhere are assisted by county agents in improving their tillage methods, testing their soil to determine plant food needs, so as to increase the output and quality of their crops.

The land grant college act or the Morrill act, signed by President Lincoln on July 2, 1862, marked a milestone in the development of scientific agriculture. The act gave to each state as many times 30,000 acres of public land as it had senators and representatives — this land to provide funds for the establishment and support of "a college of agriculture and mechanical arts."

"Today the state agricultural colleges which Lincoln's administration helped to create are one of the farmers' greatest allies," said a statement of the Middle West soil improvement committee recently. "Their scientists and teachers are constantly discovering new facts about the soil and its plant food needs, crop and livestock improvement and better farming methods.

Practical Training.

"These colleges equip young men to apply their training to practical farm work. Here and in the agricultural experiment stations, agronomists are carrying on tests with crops, soils and fertilizers. The benefit of this information is available to any farmer seeking advice in applying nitrogen, phosphorus and potash to his land for profitable crop production."

The third great agricultural measure which marked Lincoln's contribution to the future of American farming was the homestead act which he signed May 20, 1862. Since the day this act became operative approximately 250 million acres of public domain have been thrown open to farm ownership.

The effect of the homestead act in promoting farm production during and after the Civil war was tremendous.

By its provisions, 160 acres of land was given free to every settler who would live on it for five years. Landseekers rushed to take advantage of the offer. Before the war ended 2.5 million acres were allocated—or an average of 15 thousand farms of 160 acres each.

Railroad lines were extended to link the western farm lands with the markets of the east. The food these new farms produced helped supply the union armies, and combined with the agricultural output of the east, built up a surplus that found a profitable market in Europe.

Following the Civil war the homestead act was instrumental in building up the farming empire west of the Mississippi which became the land of opportunity for the veterans of that war.

As America hails the 137th anniversary of Lincoln's birth, agriculture acknowledges its debt to him. The progress farming had made in the past 80 years would never have been possible without his help.

Practical Farming Advice Sent Out By Agriculture Colleges

Most farmers are well acquainted with the news and advice sent out by their state colleges of agriculture. These colleges were established under the land grant college act. Typical stories are the following.

KANSAS

Probably the best insurance on any Kansas farm against costly machinery breakdowns is a good farm shop that can be heated and made comfortable for winter use. A complete overhaul of all farm equipment every winter is a goal worth attempting and it's impossible if you have to work out in the snow.

OREGON

A serious breakdown in the Alumina plant at Salem has interrupted the production of ammonium sulphate for distribution to Oregon farmers, but repairs are being rushed so that shipments may be resumed this month if present plans work out, reports Art King, extension soils specialist at Oregon State college. War substitute lining in the crystalizing equipment failed, causing the shutdown.

GEORGIA

"In making their 1946 plans, Georgia farm families should strive to maintain the gains they have made in recent years," Walter Brown, extension director, declared. "The inflation threat continues and inflation is almost certain to be followed by deflation."

Veterans' SERVICE BUREAU

EDITOR'S NOTE: This newspaper, through special arrangement with the Washington Bureau of Western Newspaper Union at 1616 Eye Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., is able to bring readers this weekly column on problems of the veteran and serviceman and his family. Questions may be addressed to the above Bureau and they will be answered in a subsequent column. No replies can be made direct by mail, but only in the column which will appear in this newspaper regularly.

Speed of Discharge

Apropos of the confusion existing in the minds of both members of the armed services and civilians, Gen. Dwight Eisenhower testified before a joint meeting of the house and senate January 15 that all men in the army with two years' service would be on their way out by July 1, 1946. He further said that veterans and civilians who are now complaining have no reason to expect discharge for another three or four months under the original demobilization program set up by Gen. George C. Marshall as chief of staff.

Although further cut in number of points eligible for discharge may come within the next few weeks, as of January 15, discharge points necessary for the army remains at 50 for enlisted men and 70 for officers.

General MacArthur has announced that the point score for men under his command is 48 for enlisted men and 68 for officers. These figures apply to all who had earned that number of points as of September 2, 1945. It is pointed out at the war department that each theater commander has the authority to reduce the point score for discharge.

War department heads agree that discharge of veterans is proceeding at a rate that is too fast for the efficiency and safety of the army and replacements are not coming fast enough although training of replacements has been cut from 17 to 13 weeks.

Questions and Answers

Q. I was discharged from the regular army in January, 1944, and now I would like to put in another hitch, but because of a paragraph in my discharge papers am unable to. It reads: "Is not recommended for re-enlistment, induction or re-induction. Sec. 8. AR 615-360." How can I have this fixed and re-enlist? —Reader, Albertville, Ala.

A. Section 8 of army regulations to which you refer means that you are unfit for military service and will not be accepted, according to the war department.

Q. What does a man in the army get discharge points for? If married, but no children, is the wife considered a dependent? Are any discharge points allowed for her?—Mrs. B. J. D., Mt. Sterling, Ohio.

A. Discharge points in the army are allowed for service in this country and overseas, for minor children (not more than three) and for decorations or battle stars. A wife is considered a dependent in so far as family allowance is concerned, but not for discharge points.

Q. I heard any one in service under 20 years of age can get a discharge to attend school even if he hasn't enough points. Is this true? —Mrs. O. S., Lewistown, Ill.

A. No discharge is granted to permit a man under age to attend school. He may go to school at the army institute in this country or to any one of the courses which have been instituted overseas.

Q. We are the parents of two boys who served their country, one three years in the army, the other almost four years in the navy. The father is 55 and mother, 49. We do not own any property and live in one of the boy's home. The father worked at a saw mill and made 50 cents an hour. When the boys went into service, we thought if we could get by without starving we would not draw from the government on them. We had one single girl in school and one 13-year-old boy in school. We did get by and did not starve, but it took every cent to do so and keep the two in school. Would it have been dishonest to have drawn on one of the boys? If not, could we get it yet? They are both honorably discharged.—Mr. and Mrs. P. H., Valley Head, Ala.

A. It certainly would not have been dishonest for you to take an allotment from one or both of your boys for the allotment would have been entirely voluntary on their part out of their pay and the amount they voluntarily set aside for you would have been matched by the government. You cannot get it now, since they are discharged.

Q. My husband had war bond allotments taken from his pay which he received when he was discharged at Indiantown Gap, Pa. Would like to know where to write, since he has not received his bonds. —Mrs. W. W. R., Millmont, Pa.

A. Write to the war bond division, U. S. army, 4300 Goodfellow blvd., St. Louis 20, Mo.

Q. If a man has enough points for discharge is there any way a regular navy man can be released if he hasn't served his full six-year enlistment?—Wife, Duluth, Minn.

A. The navy says, "No."

Maid Had Toothsome Bit Of Information for Mistress

THE mistress had given the nursery-maid notice to leave.

"So I'm a flirt, am I?" said the nurse indignantly.

"You are — and more," answered the mistress.

"Well, replied the girl, "I just think you are jealous because I am better looking than you are—your husband told me so! And what's more, I can kiss better than you. Like to know who told me that?"

"Don't you dare to suggest that it was my husband!" stormed the mistress.

"I'm not suggesting anything," laughed the maid. "But if you must know, it was your dentist!"

Mix This Cough Syrup at Home. Quick Relief

Easily Mixed. Needs No Cooking.

Here's an old home mixture your parents probably used. But, once tried, you'll always use it, because it gives such quick, pleasing relief for coughs due to colds.

And it's so easily mixed. Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. No cooking is needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, if desired.

Now put 2½ ounces of Pinex (obtained from any druggist) into a pint bottle, and fill up with your syrup. This makes a full pint of truly splendid cough medicine, and gives you about four times as much for your money. It keeps perfectly, tastes fine, and lasts a long time.

You can feel this simple home mixture take right hold of a cough. It loosens the phlegm, soothes irritation, and helps clear the air passages. Eases the soreness, makes breathing easier, and lets you get restful sleep.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well known for its quick action on throat and bronchial irritations. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.—Adv.

FOOTNOTES on FARM HOUSING

by LLOYD SHERWOOD
NORTHERN LUMBER CO

You don't need me to tell you that hogs are a big business in Iowa In actual figures, we have one-seventh of the total hogs in this country. Last year, the U. S. Department of Agriculture issued Circular No. 701, listing the requirements of the model hog house. How well does your hog house meet their specifications?

1. Pens, floors, walls, ceilings, and equipment that can be cleaned so as to prevent disease and to control parasites. Some of the principal swine diseases influenced by housing and sanitation are cholera. tuberculosis, pneumonia, pleurisy, flu, anthrax, brucellosis, dysentry, swine erysipelas, sore mouth, parasitic skin troubles and worms.

2. Adequate space for the hogs. For shelter only, 5 to 6 sq. ft. of floor area should be provided for 100 pounds of weight. 8 to 10 sq. ft. for 200 pounds; 11 to 14 sq. ft. for 300 pounds; 16 to 20 sq. ft. for 500 pound pigs. If pigs are confined indoors or if self-feeders are used in the pens, additional space is needed for exercising. A farrowing pen should be provided for each sow. Pens 7 by 8 ft. are recommended for sows under 350 pounds in weight; pens 7 by 9 ft., 8 by 8 ft. or 8 by 9 ft. for sows weighing 350 pounds or more. A 6 by 8 ft. pen with good guard rails is regarded as the minimum for a small sow. For very large sows, pens 8 by 10 ft. may be needed. Outside pens should be of the same width as an inside pen, and may be 8 to 20 ft. long If the outside runs are used as a feeding floor, a length of 12 feet is desirable. Boar pens and runways should be somewhat larger than those provided for sows of equal weight.

3. Protection from cold, wind, rain, and snow, and from excessive summer sunshine. Hogs need a sleeping environment that is warm in winter. This means tight construction in all details. It also means insulation.

4. Air temperature, humidity, and air movement which mean health and comfort for the animals. For fattening hogs, the minimum temperature that is recommended is 40 degress. For farrowing sows, 50 to 60 degrees, because little pigs chill at lower temperatures. The capacity of the ventilating system should be based on the number of hogs that will be fattened in the house. Under most conditions, a ventilation rate of about 1,080 cu, ft. of air per hour per 300 pound hog will remove the moisture. This will require an outlet flue area of about 20 sq. inches per hog for gravity ventilation.

5. Adequate light for performance of chores.

6. Safety provisions for the animals and persons.

7 Facilities for feeding and watering which mean a minimum expenditure of the operator's time and energy.

(More about hog houses next time.)

—Lloyd Sherwood.

Tomato Processing

Tomatoes can be smoothly cut into slices plump with rich, red juice — but the knife that cuts them may turn black if made of ordinary steel. The knife is discolored by the acids in the tomatoes; yet one of these acids — vitamin C — is of particular benefit to the human body. Today, tomatoes are canned in great quantities, and many of the canneries use processing equipment made of stainless steel. The stainless steel will resist any corrosive effects of the fruit acids and it will not blacken or impart a foreign taste to the tomatoes. Juice is preheated in open stainless steel kettles at one packing plant and then piped to the canning rooms. Here fillers, equipped with stainless steel tanks, pour the juice into cans fed by gravity conveyor to the filling machines. After the cans are closed, processed and attractively labeled, the juice is ready to go on its way to the dining table.

Stain Removal

If you don't know what caused a spot on clothes or table linen, approach with caution, say clothing specialists. The first cleansing treatment a spot receives may decide whether it comes out or becomes a permanent fixture. Many stains can be set with heat — from hot water or an iron, or by alkali in soap or hard water. Never take a chance on an unknown stain and plunge the stained fabric in warm soapsuds. Never press fabric until stains are removed. The safe way to deal with a dubious stain is to sponge with a cloth moistened in cool soft water, if the stain is not greasy. If the stain appears to be greasy, sponge with cleaning fluid (grease solvent.) Most common household stains will dissolve in one or the other of these safest solvents. Stains tend to become set with age, so stained garments should not be put away until some convenient future time.

Popular Juice

Most widely popular of homemade juices is that from tomatoes. It is easy to can by processing the jars of hot juice in a boiling water bath. Home-canned tomato juice sometimes separates because the pulp is heavier than the light-colored juice so settles below it in the jar. The finer the sieve used for straining the juice, the less the pulp will settle. If tomato juice is packed hot the chances of keeping are much better. The vitamin C in juice and canned whole tomatoes is approximately the same. Some vitamin A and other nutrients may be lost, when seeds and pulp are discarded. Tests have shown that the easiest way of preparing the juice is the most saving of vitamin C. This is to simmer the tomatoes until the juice begins to flow. Sieve while the tomatoes are hot. Reheat just to boiling. Then add a teaspoon of salt per quart of juice, if desired. Pour into hot jars at once and process for 15 minutes.

Staff Sat. Melvin Coobs Home From Pacific

Staff Sergeant Melvin Coobs, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benn Coobs of Klemme arrived home Monday morning after spending 32 months in the service, the last 19 months in the Pacific. Staff Sgt. Coobs was in a number of campaigns, including Okinawa.

Besides the Asiatic-Pacifi theatre of war he was stationed in several camps in the States: Camp White, Oregon, Camp Callan, Cal.; Camp San Louis Obispo, Cal., Camp Beale, Cal. and Camp Stoneman, Cal.

Staff Sgt. Coobs has received an honorable discharge from the army.

Art Polsdofer Family Honored At Farewell Party Tues. Eve.

Neighbors gathered at the Art Polsdofer home Tuesday night to hold a farewell party in their honor. Nineteen families were present and the evening was spent informally. The visitors brought food and a nice lunch was served.

The Polsdofers will move to the farm 2 miles west of Klemme now occupied by the Harry Pringnitz family.

Thursday evening Mr. and Mrs. Ned Howard entertained to dinner Mr. and Mrs. Harold Brown and son Bobbie of Washington; Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Johnson and daughter Linda Jean of Clear Lake; Mrs. Henry Medaus and Emily Johnson.

Not In Condition

Following picnic dinner at Call Park in Algona, Bancroft Foresters undertook to show their children how foot races really should be won. Somewhere down the home stretch the editor of the Bancroft Register stumbled, and Erwin Heldorfer fell over him, and when they were picking themselves up, Walter Kockler coming up behind, piled into them. Outside of a few skinned knees and elbows, there were no other casualties.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Stille and daughter Lois, and Mr. and Mrs. Lee Anderson and Linda Lee of Charles City, left Friday for Louisiana and other points in the south to enjoy a 2 weeks vacation trip and to visit relatives and friends.

DOING OVER THE WHITE HOUSE

The White House is to be remodeled and enlarged at a cost of a million and a half dollars. Not even the Republicans thought a place could run down under Democratic tenants to that extent.

One item in the program is cited as "entire new floors in the President's personal quarters, as the old ones are loose and worn." That gives you some idea how Mr. Truman has been pacing up and down the rooms lately.

An entirely new heating system is to be installed too, it is announced. We had an idea that the White House was hot enough for anybody just now.

Maybe they mean "cooling" system.

The grounds are to be done over, too. We understand there will be a series of fountains and pools through which a President can wade with his shoes on when the problems are especially hot.

There is also a rumor that Mr. Truman wants a chicken run, a well and an old-fashioned hammock on the grounds to give him something of the rural flavor he loves so well. (Opponents of the plan insist that whatever Mr. Truman needs it is decidedly not a hammock.)

Mrs. Truman is going to get new rugs, carpets, drapes and curtains, and you know what that will mean to a woman.

Boy, will Mrs. Roosevelt be sore! She was there 12 years without getting what Mrs. truman is getting in a few months.

Also a large room artificially dampened and equipped with rattan chairs, old fishing tackle and foghorns so that the President may get all the atmosphere of being on his yacht without actually being so.

(Note to Mrs. Truman: Whatever they do to the shebang, you be sure you get the kitchen the way you want it first.)

THE 1946 AUTOMOBILE

Oh, fetch the motor ads to me
And let me read, my pet,
Of all the beauties of the car
I know I cannot get;
I want to know the shape and form
And sense the charms untold
Held by that lovely motor car—
Which is NOT being sold!

What is the radiator style?
Full facts I must possess
About the car nobody has
(And no one gets, I guess);
What of the headlights and the hubs?
Oh, I would be afraid
To choose, without more facts, a bus
That isn't being made.

And what of the upholstery?
I hate to fret about
My comforts in a limousine
Nobody's turning out;
Those little gadgets all around,
So novel and so quaint—
How are these little gee-gaws in
"The motorcar that ain't"?

Peace, It's Wonderful

Bill Hadden, attorney general of Connecticut, conferred with Dr. Stoyan Gavrilovitch, chairman of the UNO site committee, to sing the praises of Nutmeg State locations the other day. We hope Bill suggested the appeal of Amity Road, Woodbridge, and, perhaps, the old site of Harmony Lodge back home.

And, in view of the way UNO is dodging so many issues, how about Duck Island, just off Clinton?

Personally we nominate as a permanent site the Pease House, Saybrook Point.

radish and top each pattie with a slice of cheese. Broil until cheese melts. Serve on plain or toasted buns with tomatoes, onions, relish or mayonnaise.

Here are two rich hearty soups which you might like to serve with any type of sandwich. These, of course, may be made ahead of time as soup will improve in flavor on standing.

Pepper Pot.
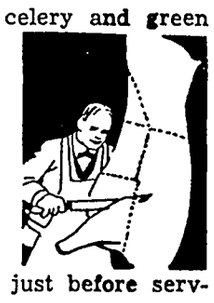
(Serves 6)

1 onion, sliced
¼ cup celery, diced
¼ cup chopped green pepper
¼ cup butter
¼ cup flour
1½ quarts of meat stock
1½ cups diced potatoes
1 tablespoon salt
1 teaspoon chili powder
1 cup cream, whipped

Simmer onion, celery and green pepper in butter about 15 minutes. Add flour and stir until well blended; then add meat stock, potatoes and seasoning. Cover and allow to simmer one hour. Add cream just before serving.



Corn Chowder.

1 quart potatoes, diced
2 cups boiling water
2 tablespoons salt pork
1 medium onion, chopped
1 No. 2 size can of corn
2 cups milk
1 tablespoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons chopped parsley or celery leaves
½ cup cream

Cook diced potatoes in boiling water for 10 minutes. Cut salt pork in ¼-inch dice, saute and add onion. Continue cooking until pork is brown and crisp and onions are soft and yellow; then add these, with the corn, to the potatoes. Boil gently until potatoes are tender; add milk, salt and pepper. Bring to the boiling point again and add parsley or celery leaves and cream. Serve piping hot.

Two desserts which come to mind for meals such as I've just described are a Cranberry Parfait and a Fluffy Fruit Ice. They are light enough to contrast well with soup and sandwich luncheons and easy to make.

Light, fruity desserts offer taste and color contrasts to rich, heavy meals. Here, Cranberry Parfait is served in tall glasses topped with a square of jelly to make the dessert more attractive.

Cranberry Parfait.

½ can cranberry sauce
2 tablespoons powdered sugar
1 egg white
½ pint cream
1 teaspoon almond extract

Beat the cranberry sauce and powdered sugar with a fork. Whip the egg white and cream. Combine the two mixtures. Flavor with the almond extract and chill. Serve with a square of cranberry sauce.

Fluffy Fruit Ice.

2 tablespoons unflavored gelatin
2 tablespoons cold water
2 tablespoons sugar
½ cup water
1 cup syrup from mixed fruit
2 tablespoons lemon juice
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 egg white, beaten
1 tablespoon sugar

Soften gelatin in cold water. Bring sugar and water to a boil. Add gelatin and stir until dissolved. Cool. Add syrup, lemon juice and salt. Pour into refrigerator tray. Freeze until firm. Place in a chilled bowl, break into pieces, and fold in egg white which has been beaten with remaining sugar. Return to refrigerator tray and freeze until firm. Mixed cooked or canned fruit may be served as a garnish.

Things You Knew All Along:
(But which dopey me just found out.)

President Truman is not ill, but the Army has completed plans for a Presidential suite at Walter Reed Hospital. FDR and other gov't officials invariably used the Naval Hospital at Bethesda, Md. Since Mr. Truman served in the Army (in World War I), the Army has no intention of turning over its prize alumnus to Naval medicos, should he need a doctor. (Mr. Truman discovered that trying to be a middle-of-the-roader means you get slugged from both sides.)

In Berlin the Nazis (civilians, too) gather in front of U. S. PXs and beg the Yanks "for chawklott, choongum" and other goodies, even ciggies. The Americans often share with them. When the Nazis are a safe distance away they make "cracks," thumb to nose, etc. Nurses just back also report the Nazis practically dare the Yanks to hit them with their vehicles or bikes as they cross streets. But when they see the Russians coming in cars, they flee. Because the Russkys run over them! (They respect THEM!)

Midtown Novelette: A noted attorney revealed this in the Blue Angel. A mother and a daughter were threatened with eviction from a 72nd St. apartment. . . . Because the neighbors complained of the girl's vocalizing. "She's always practicing!" said the landlord. . . . Their lawyer argued the owner into withdrawing the dispossess notice and warned him: "Some day you'll pay to hear her sing!" . . . They moved, anyway, because the neighbors were so mean. . . . That was 3 years ago. . . . If those neighbors do not know what became of that girl—they can pay to find out—at the Met Opera House . . . Patrice Munsel!

TRUE TO A GREAT HERITAGE

LESSON TEXT: Dueteronomy 4:1, 32-40.
MEMORY SELECTION: He hath made his wonderful works to be remembered.—Psalm 111:4.

A goodly heritage is the gift of God to his people. By faith they must enter into it and possess it. Thus they honor him who has promised, and they witness to all the earth that he is a great God and a loving heavenly Father. It magnifies his name to believe on his word and to act on his promises.

Israel, having failed God and plunged themselves into years of wandering by their unbelief when they just came up to the Promised Land, were now ready to go over Jordan and take the land.

A new generation had grown up, and for their instruction Moses rehearsed the history of the people, repeated the promises of God, and renewed their remembrance of his law. The book of Deuteronomy gives that "second law" — actually a review of what had been given before.

As they entered upon God's rich heritage for them they were admonished to

I. Hearken to God's Law (v. 1).

To hearken means more than to hear and forget. It carries with it the giving of attention to what is heard with the purpose of doing something about it.

God's law, his statutes and judgments are for the good of his people. They are not designed to limit their freedom, but to provide the channels through which they shall be most free to live and to accomplish that which is good and noble and useful.

Two things were assured to Israel if they hearkened to the law of God. They would first of all "live." This does not mean only that they should escape death, but that they might enter into the fullness of life.

"The Bible teaches that we are free to choose between a high grade of life or a low grade, between a life which involves fellowship with God or a daily existence which means nothing more than the enjoyment of animal comforts and following our own willful ways" (Earl L. Douglass).

The second result of obeying God's law would be their going into and possessing the land which God gave them. There is victory and attainment, as well as blessed fellowship for the one who obeys God. That is true today as it was in the time of Moses.

II. Remember God's Love (vv. 32-36).

The loving mercies of God toward his people had revealed his infinite greatness and glory.

He revealed himself in the fire—and they might well have been consumed by it—yet he graciously spoke to them instead of destroying them. They were to recall, too, that he had done a mighty and wonderful thing in taking them out of the powerful hand of Egypt and making them into a people for his name.

Sad is the state of the soul of the man who has lost his sense of the miraculous. To live in the midst of the constant demonstration of God's power and his mercy, and to see and feel nothing but the commonplace touch of humdrum daily life, is to be blind and deaf—yes, to be dead spiritually.

Is he any less powerful today? Certainly not! He is still the God of the miraculous and nowhere is that divine energy more evident than in the spiritual life of man.

The wonders of God in creation were rehearsed for Israel. They learned of his care for his people. "But far more wonderful are the works of God in the new creation and his infinite care for his people redeemed from a ruined race, and made inheritors of eternal residence in the heavenly Canaan" (Hight C. Moore).

III. Depend on God's Promise (vv. 37-40).

The Promised Land was before them, but it was for them to go in and possess it. There were warfare and struggle ahead, mighty warlike peoples to overcome. Were they able for it? No, not in their own strength!

How were they to accomplish this formidable task? By counting on God. He had promised to drive out the nations now holding the land. He is a God not only in heaven, but also on earth (v. 39). The people who believe him may go forward expecting miracles to happen.

Obedience to God's law brings fellowship with the eternal and omnipotent One, and the confident assurance that he will bring victory and the full accomplishment of his will for the obedient believer.

That is as true now as ever. Yes, let's be accurate and say that it is more true than ever, for believers now are indwelt by the Holy Spirit of God who makes real in and through them all the grace and beauty and power of God.

VOLUME 51. KLEMME, IOWA, FEBRUARY 20, 1946 NUMBER 14

Follow-Up Being Made On T. B. Testing Program

T. B. PROGRAM BEING CARRIED OUT IN COUNTY

Flossie McBride, Public Nurse Is Checking Cases

An intensive search for unsuspected cases of tuberculosis in Hancock county currently is being made by Miss Flossie McBride, public health nurse.

Miss McBride's work is the preliminary phase of the 7th annual tuberculosis survey conducted in this county by the medical society and the Christmas Seal Sale Organization in cooperation with the Iowa Tuberculosis Association and the state health department.

At the request of the family physician, the nurse is calling upon persons known to have had intimate contact with a case of tuberculosis as shown by records of the Iowa health department. She invites these persons to have a tuberculin skin test and later a chest x-ray to learn "if they, too, have been infected with tuberculosis."

According to the nurse, tuberculosis is a communicable disease which often does not reveal its presence to the individual durmg the early stages of infection.

"It is possible," the nurse said, "for a person to have tuberculosis and not know it. Our purpose is to discover such cases before they readh an advanced stage. If cases are found and treatment started early in the course of the disease, serious ill health can be avoided in many cases."

The tuberculin skin test will be made at the individual doctor's office and chest x-rays of those who react positively to the first test will be taken at a date and place to be announced later.

Half the cost of the program will be borne by funds made available through the annual sale of Christmas Seals and the remaining cost will be met by the state health department.

HISTORICAL BOOK HAS BEEN PRINTED

The 50th Anniversary Book, published by the Klemme Evangelical & Reformed Church was completed and delivered last week and is being distributed among the members of the congregation.

The 50th Anniversary Book is a complete historical sketch of the church and the community and is profusely illustrated from cover to cover, bound in blue leatherette cover in the new plastic binding with the cover page printed in gold.

The book will be a very valuable piece of literature in the years to come, as Rev. Grosshuesch and his staff of workers put in many tedious hours of study and research to get accurate details of the history of the congregation, and early day stories of this community. They are to be complimented for the fine work accomplished.

The Times is happy to have had a part in producing this fine book.

FIRST IN WAR . . . FIRST IN PEACE . . . AND FIRST IN THE HEARTS OF HIS COUNTRYMEN

Foot sore and weary, a ragged army shivered about the campfires at Valley Forge—Men, whose courage could not be questioned, but with a doubt in their hearts as to the wisdom of making the supreme effort for the cause of Freedom—

Walking among his men a tall stately figure renewed their strength with a word and restored their courage with a smile—they broke camp—they crossed the icy Deleware—they met the enemy—fought, conquered and established a new nation.

General George Washington led them to victory!

THE KLEMME TIMES HAS CHANGED TO MODERN NEWSPAPER SIZE AND STYLE

KLEMME TIMES COMES TO YOU IN MODERN SIZE

Only 12-Em, 7-Column Paper Printed In Hancock County

The Klemme Times comes to you in the new 12-em, 7-column this week, which is now considered the most modern style for weekly newspapers in the United States, and many leading weekly newspapers are joining the ranks of the growing list of weeklies changing over to the new size.

Changing from 6 to 7 columns gives us increased space for our reading material and advertising. The new size is convenient for the reader, as well, as it is not too large and awkward to handle while reading.

Another Step Forward

This is just another step forward in the post-war plans of the Times plant. A larger and modern press was recently installed enabling us to to handle book printing, and other types of commercial work which was difficult to handle in the past. Other new machinery is on order to speed up our commercial printing; another automatic press will be installed when we have more space, and a new building is being planned for the near future.

We hope you will like the new size of The Klemme Times this week, and watch for further improvements.

We have "growing pains."

And there is this to remember: Give a scientist an echo and he won't rest until he gets an argument.

It's amazing. Hollywood would even call it colossal. The moon is 225,000 miles from the earth. That's even farther than the road companies of "Life With Father" and "Hellzapoppin" have traveled jointly.

Up until now man has never been able to establish contact with the moon except through the Lick Observatory or Tin Pan Alley.

Scientists have been trying to communicate with the moon for ages, but all they got back was "They don't answer." The Man in the Moon has been one fellow free from the nickel-nickel-nickel jingle. He didn't even know what our best hair oils and nail polishes were.

But an American Signal Corps man, Lt. Col. John De Witt, has said "Hello" to the moon.

All we hope is that we don't send a message to the moon and get back, "So you're the guy!" or, "Remember, you started this business!"

The establishment of contact may mean the ability to detect rocket planes of the future and provide communication between the earth and great airships cruising near the moon, but the whole business fills us with goose pimples.

Splitting the atom and getting rebuttals from the moon all in one season is NOT good.

Elmer Twitchell, the well-known pinochle wizard, astronomer and all-day sucker designer, says that he has been working on the problem of contacting the moon all his life. "I got answers," he declared today. "But no answer from any place is good unless it is signed."

Elmer says he even tried to contact the moon, using an irresistible question, "Would you be interested in a T-bone steak dinner for ninety cents?" He got an answer, "Is that with mashed or french fried?" which made him so sore he hung up without making certain whether it was from the moon or not.

Are You $50,000 Smart?

To help raise funds for the Alfred E. Smith memorial hospital, a quiz with a winner take all prize of $50,000 was conducted by John Kieran at the Waldorf the other night. Two men, W. R. Coe and Lester Stone, tied in a photo finish and split the prize $25,000 each.

Inasmuch as $50,000 marks a new high for quiz contests and everybody is saying, 'Gee, I wish I had been there," we have secured the 12 questions and answers. Try them on your cerebellum:

1. What is the mean approximate distance from the earth to the moon? 239,000 miles.

Current of River Main in Germany Defies Steamers

So powerful is the current of the River Main in Germany that even steam vessels have never been able to make headway against it.

Therefore, all water craft that plies between Aschaffenburg and Bamberg has to be towed by a kette boot, or chain boat, that makes periodical trips up this swift stream by pulling itself along a giant chain for the entire distance of 180 miles.

Pennsylvania
THE KEYSTONE STATE

By EDWARD EMERINE
WNU Features

PENNSYLVANIA has something for everybody."

It is more than a boast, more than a slogan. The Keystone state is so varied in climate, scenery, industries and occupations that it defies articulate and coherent description. Whatever your interests, your plans, your ambitions or hopes, listen to the story of Pennsylvania.

Are you interested in American history? Start at Independence hall in Philadelphia, the Cradle of Liberty. Wander through the streets where Benjamin Franklin lived and worked and helped create a united nation. Or travel to Gettysburg where the greatest battle of the Civil war was fought. Visit Fort Necessity, near Uniontown, the scene of Washington's first battle, in 1754, when he was commander of the colonial troops. See the museum at Valley Forge, formerly Washington's headquarters during that cold winter when the colonies' hope was at its lowest. Go to General Braddock's grave near Farmington, or to the Old Blockhouse at Pittsburgh. Swing up to Erie to see the Niagara, Commodore Perry's flagship in the battle of Lake Erie in 1813.

DELAWARE WATER GAP . . . Along Route 611, southeast of Stroudsburg, Monroe county. From early spring until late autumn the Pennsylvania hills are among the most beautiful in the world.

Mountains, Lakes, Forests.

Vacation? Sports? First of all, you'll like the famous Pennsylvania Turnpike and the other smooth highways of Pennsylvania. There are mountains and valleys, rivers and streams. Pennsylvania has 200 sizable lakes for boating and water sports—with Lake Erie thrown in for good measure! You'll find trout streams and lakes for fishing, and Mount Davis in Somerset county with its 3,213 feet for you to climb. The "Grand Canyon of Pennsylvania" (Pine Creek Gorge), at Wellsboro, or Pymatuning lake and wild waterfowl refuge in Crawford county, should thrill you. There are picnicking and camping sites by the hundreds, old trails to follow, and 6,500 acres of virgin timber in Cook Forest state park. These are but a few; others can be found in every nook and corner of Pennsylvania's 45,000 square miles of beauty.

Are you an industrialist? Then you'll want to investigate the great coal fields, like those at Scranton, or look into Pennsylvania's billion-dollar textile business. The steel mills at Pittsburgh with their blast furnaces roaring should tingle your blood. And don't forget to see the site of Drake oil well, Titusville, where petroleum, the black gold, was first struck in the United States. Everywhere you go you'll see a factory, a mine, a great industrial plant.

BUCKHILL FALLS . . . In the heart of the Pocono, Monroe county.

You're a farmer? Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, ranks second in the United States in income from farm products! Just remember that the thrifty "Pennsylvania Dutch" knew how to till the land, and their grandchildren do too! Big barns, fine houses and well-tilled fields like those in Franklin county will tell you more than words. The Pennsylvania landscape is dotted with farms and the big city markets are right at hand. Pennsylvania farmers do not have to ship long distances to find a place to sell their crops, their livestock, poultry or dairy products.

The Commonwealth leads in the production of buckwheat. Other important crops are winter wheat, rye, oats, corn, potatoes, tobacco, apples, peaches, pears and grapes.

Many Colleges, Universities.

Schools? The institutions of higher education include the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia, founded in 1740; Washington and Jefferson in Washington, founded in 1780; Pennsylvania State college; University of Pittsburgh; Carnegie Institute of Technology in Pittsburgh; Lafayette college, Easton; Lehigh university, Bethlehem; Temple university, Philadelphia; Bucknell university, Lewisburg; Dickinson college, Carlisle; Franklin and Marshall college, Lancaster; Allegheny college, Meadville; Duquesne college, Pittsburgh; Grove City college, Grove City; Haverford college, Haverford; Swarthmore college, Swarthmore. There are 14 colleges for women, including Bryn Mawr. Lincoln university and Cheyney training school for teachers are for Negroes. There are 13 state teachers colleges and 7 junior colleges!

Pennsylvania (Penn's Woods) was named for William Penn, the founder of the province. His charter was granted by Charles II in 1681. The terms, "Commonwealth" and "General Assembly," were originated by Penn and remain in the state constitution to this day.

The United States was born on Pennsylvania soil. The articles of confederation were adopted in Philadelphia; the Declaration of Independence was written and signed there; the treaty of peace which ended the Revolutionary war was ratified in that place, and later the constitution of the United States was formulated there.

The Commonwealth has built its industries largely on basic elements. It produces nearly half the steel of this nation, shipping it to all parts of the world. The greatest metal production ever attained at one locality is at Pittsburgh. The bituminous coal annual output averages approximately 100 million tons, while anthracite averages over 51 million tons. The Commonwealth produces high-grade petroleum, iron ore, pig iron, steel for rails and structural purposes, lime, slate and other metals and minerals. A list of products manufactured in Pennsylvania would fill a book!

Traditionally progressive, the people of Pennsylvania offer you a warm welcome to visit their state. Seeing is believing!

Little Known Stories About Well-Known People:

The current March of Dimes campaign recalls a delightful story about a grand lady: A New York merchant once approached FDR's mother at a banquet and offered to contribute $500 to the Warm Springs Foundation if she would pose for a picture with his mother. Sarah Roosevelt replied she would be willing to pose even if he didn't contribute any money. . . . The merchant then said he would give $1,000. . . . "And now," he added, "I'll bring my mother over here. She is 92, and this will be the biggest thrill in her life."

"In that case," said the 84-year-old Mrs. Roosevelt, "I'll go to her—I'm younger."

While working as an editor for several leading magazines, Theodore Dreiser wrote a fabulous amount of wonderful wordage—short stories, poems, plays, essays, social studies and novels, including his most famous work, "An American Tragedy." In '27 he visited the Soviet Union as a guest of the government. When he stopped in England on his way back, Mr. Churchill asked him, "Well, what do you think of Russia?"

"I told him," Dreiser said to Bob van Gelder), "that I thought it was a wonderful country, a wonderful system."

"Nonsense," Churchill said, "it won't last seven years."

Decades ago, Clarence Darrow, the famed lawyer, was the principal speaker at a woman's club. After his address he found himself in conversation with a few ladies who insisted on discussing birth control. "Mr. Darrow," said one, "what do you think of birth control for the masses?"

"My dear lady," replied the famous man, "whenever I hear people discussing birth control, I always remember that I was the fifth."

The late George Norris made a speech in which he pointed out that mankind's scientific and mechanical progress hasn't prevented the barbarism of war. . . . "We have wars," said Norris, "because the human race has learned how to improve everything—except people."

Neatest comment on Eisenhower's outline of demobilization plans came from one of the boys on the GI Liberation Committee in Paris. Gen. Ike had told Congress: "When you see firemen playing checkers in the firehouse you don't send them home because there's nothing to do. And it's the same in Germany. The soldiers may be sitting around with nothing to do—or so they think. But their presence there is very necessary."

"Mebbe so," said the soldier (who'd been told five times of a sailing date, only to have it changed), "but even a fireman gets disgusted—when there are nothing but false alarms!"

This is a Mark Twain tale we haven't come across before. . . . When Mark was at the height of his career he informed a friend: "It took me ten years to discover that I had no talent for writing."

"And you gave it up?"

"Oh, no! By that time I was too famous!"

"As long as we're on puns," adds Frank Case's son, Carroll, "the winner and still champion is old Samuel Johnson, who was approached by a would-be wit in the Mermaid Tavern (the Algonquin of its day). The wag said: 'Now admit it, Sam; the only reason you don't like puns is that you can't make them.' . . . To which Johnson punned: 'Sir, if I were pun-ished for every pun I shed, I'd have no puny shed in which to rest this punish head.' "

That reminds us of our pet pun. . . . "A pun," someone said, "is the lowest form of wit, pun my soul it is!"

Quotation Marksmanship: Dorothy Dix: Drying a widow's tears is one of the most dangerous occupations known to man. . . . Geo. S. Perry: Tugboats shooting the air full of sharp, white toots. . . . Paul Ernst: Looking crisp and cool as though she had slept on mint leaves. . . . F. E. Jones: Impatient soldiers overseas waiting for Returnity. . . . Ben Grauer: He rode to the bottom on one-way pawntickets. . . . Jack Marshall: He's a patriot with the accent on the riot. . . . Thoreau: I would not talk so much about myself if there were anybody else whom I knew so well. . . . LaRochefoucauld: "In their first passion women love their lovers. In all others they love love.

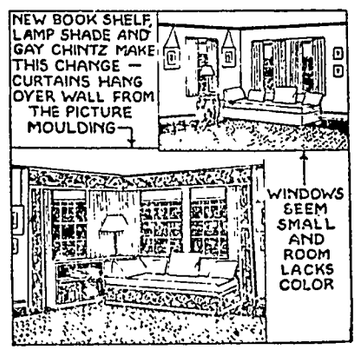
When Winston Churchill debarked from the Queen Elizabeth in N. Y. recently a reporter asked why he wasn't going to defend British policy in Palestine at the Garden's "That We May Live" rally.

"I'm only going to vacation here two months," he replied.

The reporter observed that most U. S. politicos are lucky to vacation one month. Churchill bit into his cigar and quipped, "If I were a politician, I'd still be Prime Minister."

Creating a Modern Air in Living Room

HOUSES of glass are realities today and, if you want to give any house a modern air, try to make the windows seem important. One way is to frame them in a group by covering the wall and leaving the glass exposed.



NEW BOOK SHELF, LAMP SHADE AND GAY CHINTZ MAKE THIS CHANGE — CURTAINS HANG OVER WALL FROM THE PICTURE MOULDING
WINDOWS SEEM SMALL AND ROOM LACKS COLOR

An inexpensive chintz with grey-green ground and a flower pattern is used for draperies and to trim the couch cover of heavier gray-green cotton material which is also used for the cushions. The glass curtains are hung on rods suspended from the picture moulding with picture wire and hooks. The side drapes are unlined but the valance is made over buckram. Both are tacked to pine strips and are hung with picture hooks. One end of the book shelves is closed in to make a head for the couch. The outside is painted grey-green and the inside dark green. The parchment lamp shade has green bindings

True Magnetic Pole Site Found

RAF Polar Explorers Claim Discovery of Right Spot Far North.

LONDON. — A century-old Arctic belief was disputed recently by 11 RAF polar explorers who claim the discovery of the true magnetic north pole above the tip of North America, 300 miles north-northwest of its supposed location of Boothia peinsula.

Word of the discovery was reported here by the Royal Geographic society from RAF Wing Commander D. C. McKinley, who piloted a converted British Lancaster bomber. across the magnetic pole last May, according to the United Press.

McKinley reported that he and his 10 fellow explorers fixed the true location of the magnetic pole on Prince of Wales island, along the coast of McClintock channel.

Technical details of the historic flight were withheld pending McKinley's return to London.

Fragments of his report made public by the society revealed that the perilous mission was executed under incredibly difficult conditions to gather weather information badly needed by the Allied air forces.

They flew through temperatures ranging to 35 degrees below zero over Arctic wastes where the slightest mishap would have meant death for the entire expedition.

Just 100 Years Later.

By coincidence, the explorers left England on May 10, 1945, exactly 100 years after the start of the ill-fated expedition led by Sir John Franklin, who set out in 1845 to discover the Northwest Passage.

There were no survivors of that voyage, but 14 years later Franklin's two ships, H M.S. Erebus and Terror, were sighted drifting ghost-like off the Newfoundland banks.

McKinley's group selected the period from May 10 to May 26 for the flight because that is the optimum period for the sun and moon, both of which are above the horizon 90 degrees apart during those two weeks, giving the best direction guides.

They flew in the specially converted four-engined bomber Aries, which made a successful global flight in the autumn of 1944. For the polar flight, the Aries was stripped of all camouflage, armor and armament, and its nose and tail were streamlined. The modifications increased its gasoline load to 4,000 gallons and enabled the plane to be fitted with extra observation domes.

Over True Pole.

The expedition took off from its forward base in Iceland on May 16, 1945.

At 2 a. m. (Greenwich mean time) on May 17 their compasses indicated the plane, then flying at 15,000 feet, was exactly over the true magnetic pole.

McKinley dropped a Union Jack and circled the spot several times to allow his photographers to take pictures of the location. Then they set course for their Iceland base, which they reached 19 hours after the takeoff.

Their discovery appeared to have refuted a scientific belief held since 1831, when a British expedition under Capt. John Ross claimed to have fixed the location of the magnetic pole on the west coast of Boothia peninsula, northernmost point of the North American continent.

Ross located the pole at north latitude 71 degrees, west longitude 96 degrees, about 300 miles south-southeast of the spot named by McKinley on Prince of Wales island.

At 12:45 p. m (Greenwich mean time) on May 26 the Aries returned to Shawbury, England.

LARD IN A NEW DRESS

Farm and Home Week visitors at Iowa State College last week heard about the new improvements being made in lard. The new product will not have the characteristic lard taste and smell, will keep on the kitchen shelf and will be in a more convenient and attractive package.

I wish to thank all of my many friends, whom I didn't realize I had, for all the cards, and letters sent to me while I was in the hospital which were appreciated so very much.

CELEBRATES DISCHARGE

George Luitjens, jr. of Denison celebrated his recent discharge from the army, but not in the way he had planned. While in Omaha recently, a pigeon box fell from a bank building, striking Luitjens on the head knocking him unconscious.

"ORNERIEST" PERSON

New London residents believe they have in their midst a very despicable person, perhaps the most despicable person of 1946. Recently, a jar containing money collected during the "March of Dimes" campaign for the infantile paralysis fund was taken by someone unknown from the local post office. It is estimated that between $25 and $30 was taken.

FINDER REWARDED

The finder of a toupee lost near Independence will be amply rewarded. As a plane landed at Independence, one of the occupants stuck his head out of the window and was 'scalped" by the wind, his toupe blew off! The owner reports that the winter weather is rather hard on his head and besides he paid $65 for the hair.

BROADCASTS TWICE

Eddie Schumacher of Whittemore appeared on two radio broadcasts from the west coast recently. Eddie, seaman first class in the Navy, appeared on a Kay Kyser and "Breakfast at Hollywood" programs. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Schumacher were disappointed in that they did not hear him at either time.

Owned By Those We Serve

Cooperatives and Local Business

TO THE BUSINESSMEN OF THIS COMMUNITY:

Certain interests have been carrying on an extensive advertising campaign to convince you that the Cooperatives are of no value to local businessmen.

Cooperatives in Iowa are a valuable asset to any community and to the businessmen in that community.

NOTE THE FOLLOWING EXAMPLES:

1. A single Farmers Elevator Cooperative returned by way of patronage refunds over $80,000 in one year to the farmers in its community. Those dollars were available to increase the purchasing power of the farmers in that community in the stores of you, the local businessmen. If that elevator had been owned by foreign investors, those dollars would have been drained from that community and not one of them would have added to the purchasing power of the people in that community. This example can be duplicated by numerous other Cooperatives in the State of Iowa.

2. The members of this Cooperative and other rural electric Cooperatives in Iowa will be in the market for millions of dollars worth of electrical, plumbing, and other equipment as soon as it is available. A survey made in 1944 based upon the demands of Cooperative members, shows a demand for farm and home equipment in the total amount of $95,470,000, an average of one million dollars for each Iowa county.

Do You, Mr. Local Businessman, Want To Kick That Business Away?

3. Nothing in centuries has contributed more to a higher standard of living in the community than electricity, particularly on the farm This increased standard of living on the farm creates the general up-building of the community beyond the dreams of even a few short years ago. Consider this, Mr. Local Businessman, when somebody asks you to join a campaign to destroy Cooperatives. A higher standard of living on the farm means a higher standard of living for you!

AROUND IOWA

HEATING PLANT STRIKES

The big boiler furnishing the heat for 4 business houses in Eldora took a bad time to develop leaks. During one of the coldest periods in the winter, the boiler started leaking and caused some of the stores to be without heat. Stoves were the order of the day for some stores and apartments, while others were forced to close for 2 days. A new boiler was finally located in Chicago and was rushed to Eldora.

NOT QUITE DEAD

Kenneth Graybill who had been doing butchering in the Schaller community will be doubly certain that he does not stand too close to any animal he thinks is dead. Recently he had killed a hog and hung it up preparatory to skinning it. The animal was thought to be past any reflex actions, but not this case—it snapped its jaws at Graybill's hand, almost cutting off the end of the second finger on his right hand and crushing the bone. The finger end was fastened back in place by a physician with the hope that it may grow to the finger.

THRILLING TIMES

Residents of the Berea community near Fontanelle have devised a new means of having some thrilling times that beat those of their younger days. A wooden platform about 16 ft. long has been covered with galvanized iron and tied to a tractor at the end of a 40 ft. rope. The tractor would start across the field and then turn suddenly giving a whip-crack effect to the sled The past few weeks of ice and snow have provided several good times for those interested in trying to stay on the sled. It has been reported that not many were able to stay on until the end of each trip.

FIVE YEARS LATE

Five years after their wedding Leonard Kelly and Mary Fordyce, both of Emmetsburg, enjoyed their wedding dinner, At the time of their wedding, February 1, 1941, the groom was on his way to the induction station He was home for 2 furloughs before going overseas, but the other members of the wedding party were unable to be present. One night recently, the parents of Mrs. Kelly entertained at a wedding dinner for their daughter and husband. All members of the original party were present.

BUSY DAY

Two of Miss Margaret Hansen's friends decided to be married on the same day, February 2, and both wanted Miss Hansen, of Belmond, to play the nuptial music for the weddings which were some 20 miles apart The first wedding was at 2:00 p m. in LaPorte City, the other at 8:00 p. m. in Cedar Falls. By riding with the star mail carrier to Hampton, riding a bus to Mason City, staying friends overnight after missing the last bus to Cedar Falls, she finally made connectinos for the first wedding—the rest of the day was spent rushing to get in on rehearsals for both weddings. She reported the next day, that both nuptials took place as scheduled but she does not remember much about the day!

Save What You Get

And that hard work is wasted unless milk is saved. Cats and dogs can drink the skimmilk. So can calves after they are a month old.

Spilled milk won't make butter and cheese . . . neither will the milk left in the pail. Save it all.

And what about the cream separator? Make sure it isn't a cream thief. Prevent loss by having skimmilk tested at least once a month. The pay check comes from milk and cream that gets to market.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE PROMISED LAND

When God commanded Moses to march with his people into "a fine, large land abounding in milk and honey," He could have pointed to Iowa, which ranks first in the nation in honey production and is growing constantly in dairying importance.

In 1945 Iowa produced 25,630,000 pounds of honey, or 11 per cent of the nation's total. The state, which also ranks first in the production and income from the sale of beeswax, had ideal weather conditions for apiary activity last year and increased its honey yield production more than 6½ million lbs. over 1941, the previous record-yielding year.

That Iowa is "flowing with milk" is attested by its 1945 production record of more than six billion pounds. Last year this "fine, large land" produced more than 10 million pounds of cheese, and in 1944 produced 215,700,000 pounds of butter, the quality of which is respected throughout the United States. Iowa's successful buter marketing organizations send a large part of the manufactured product to large, eastern industrial centers by rapid-service, refrigerated trucks.

Careful breeding, consistent production records and the planting of drouth-resistant forage crops account for Iowa's increased dairy production, especialy during hot, dry months.

This year Iowa celebrates 100 years of progress.

FREAK TREE

In the corner of four counties a tree grows that has drawn many people to see it during the past several years. The cottonwod set out in 1871 by John Jones has four main branches, pointing to the four counties, Taylor, Adams, Union and Ringgold. When surveyors made the new road No. 25, and graveled it, the course of the road was changed a few feet to save the tree. In early days, young couples went buggy riding around the tree, then remarked they had traveled in four counties.

The first American carpet was made by Wm. Sprague in 1791.

Brazil possesses some of the world's largest deposits of manganese.

The circus was introduced into the U. S. by P. T. Barnum of Connecticut.

"Bungalo" homes are patterned after the thatched cottages of Bengal, India.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Russ Crack UNO Unanimity; Supreme Court Okays War Trials; Short Stocks Peril World Relief

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

UNO:
Use Veto

With Russia's use of the powerful veto power in the United Nations Organization's security council to prevent clearance of Britain of Red charges of imperilling the peace of the world, Big Three unanimity was broken for the first time in UNO.

Cast by Andrei Vishinsky, the veto climaxed a bitter exchange between the Red representative and British Delegate Ernest Bevin, growing from Russia's request to the security council to investigate the presence of British troops in Greece and Indonesia. Answering Vishinsky's charges that the Tommies' protection of rightist interests in Greece threatened peace, Bevin declared that the communists were conducting a widespread propaganda campaign against the British.

The break in unity came when Bevin demanded that the security council clear Britain of the Russian charge and Vishinsky insisted on adoption of a resolution which would have placed Britain in the position of indirectly admitting forcible occupation of Greece. When Vishinsky was overruled and the delegates prepared to vote to clear Britain, the Red representative made his veto.

Pick Site

While UNO delegates continued in their first session in London, the organization's site committee concluded an exhaustive study by recommending the establishment of permanent headquarters along the New York-Connecticut border just above Long Island Sound.

To include a 50 square mile site for primary facilities, plans were revealed for an extension up to 140 square miles. Known as an enclave, the site would legally be considered as a tract or territory within the U. S.

A combination of rolling farm lands and exclusive residential property, the area involved includes a population of 12,500 and may be purchased for about 80 million dollars by UNO through treaty. Though UNO discussed buying the land for from $600 to $800 an acre, residents of some townships protested against sale on grounds that the purchase was too extensive.

GERMANY:
Industrial Pattern

As American, British, Russian and French experts toiled over the revamping of the postwar German economy to eliminate the reich's future war-making potentialities, the general pattern of reconstruction emerged, with the nation committed to light industry and agriculture.

Terms already drawn by the Big Four call for the abolition of such prewar German industries as synthetic gas, rubber, ammonia, primary aluminum and magnesium, ball and taper bearings, certain war chemicals, heavy farm tractors and machine tools, aircraft, ship building and munitions. In eliminating these industries, however, provision was made for relaxation of some restrictions to facilitate exports to pay for imports.

In recognizing that Germany would have to make substantial imports, particularly in food, to balance her postwar economy, the Big Four have agreed on such exports as coal, coke, leather goods, beers, wines, toys, musical instruments, textiles and apparels.

WAR CRIMES:
O. K. Trials

In rejecting Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita's appeal of his conviction to hang as a war criminal, the Supreme court of the U. S. by a 6 to 2 decision upheld the legality of the trials by an American army commission in the Philippines to establish a judicial precedent.

Concerning itself only with the jurisdictional question, the high tribunal pointed out that congress has sanctioned trials of enemy aliens by military commissions for offenses against the laws of war, and Japan agreed to such proceedings in the Potsdam declaration.

In dissenting with the majority opinion, Justice Rutledge declared that to hold any individual was outside the protection of the fifth amendment requiring full indictments and judicial trials set a dangerous example. Justice Murphy warned that the proceedings might be used against some future President and his military heads.

INDUSTRIAL FRONT:
New Policy

Even as Republicans and conservative Democrats pushed stringent labor legislation in the midst of extended strikes, the administration was evolving a reconversion wage-price formula designed to encourage employers to raise postwar pay.

The conservative bloc held full sway in considering restrictive labor legislation in the house, beating down efforts of liberals and some moderates to modify or eliminate provisions of the Case bill setting up a mediation board to study industrial disputes; prohibit strikes or lockouts for 30 days; outlaw violence in picketing and boycotts and make both parties liable for contract violations.

In holding fast their ranks, the conservatives turned down amendments to substitute temporary fact-finding panels for the mediation board; kill the ban against sympathy strikes and boycotts, and remove all provisions of the Case bill and make it merely a declaration of policy.

Modification of the administration's wage-price policy represented a compromise between Reconversion Director Snyder's stand for a flexible formula to relieve industry of any squeeze between higher pay and OPA ceilings and OPAdministrator Bowles' strong fight for a retention of rigid regulation to prevent an inflationary spiral.

OVERSEAS RELIEF:
Supplies Tight

With the U. S., Canada, Australia and Argentina able to supply only 12 million of 17 million tons of wheat needed by European nations, administration officials sought to assure America's fulfillment of its commitments for 6 million tons of the deliveries in the face of a growing grain stringency in this country.

Declaring that in winning the war we could not afford to permit hunger and starvation to thwart our victory in the postwar period, Undersecretary of State Acheson stated that Americans may have to increase their sacrifices on some items. Even with U. S. efforts to avert privation, there will be some suffering, he said.

In seeking to stretch the country's dwindling grain supplies to meet both domestic and foreign needs, Secretary of Agriculture Anderson called upon farmers to cut down on the feeding of cattle, hogs and poultry. With grain stocks shrinking, officials also expressed concern over possibilities that unfavorable crops this year might force heavy liquidations of livestock later in the absence of substantial feed reserves.

SHIRTS:
Production Spur

Increased supplies of men's shirts were expected to be forthcoming with OPA's revision of pricing policies permitting manufacturers to turn out more expensive items in the face of a shortage of lower cost fabrics.

Under OPA regulations, producers have been compelled to balance their output of all lines to attain a "maximum average price," with the result that they could not turn out more of any one type without upsetting their over-all charges. Though maintaining the "MAP" (maximum average price) OPA paved the way for manufacture of more expensive shirts by raising the price of higher quality broadcloth items by about $4 a dozen and of carded cotton 30 cents a dozen.

While trade circles attributed the cheaper material shortage to textile producers' inability to produce the fabric because of high raw cotton charges and inadequate ceiling prices, federal officials cited a serious manpower scarcity in the mills and uncertain employment conditions until the price-wage problem is settled.

CAPITOL HILL:
Hot Hearing

No smooth sailing accompanied President Truman's nomination of big Ed Pauley, former treasurer of the Democratic national committee, for undersecretary of navy, with a senate naval affairs committee hearing prominent witnesses charge him with political interests in tidewater oil, a Mexican refinery and sale of a U. S. tanker to Mexico.

In the hottest hearing since consideration of Edward J. Flynn as minister to Australia, Secretary of the Interior Ickes and former Assistant Attorney General Littell charged Pauley with attempting to influence them into having the government drop its suit for jurisdiction over tide-water oil lands extending three miles beyond shore and leave them to the states.

Ickes admitted that Pauley had told him that several hundred thousand dollars could be raised for campaign purposes from states' rights oil men if the suit were dropped and Littell testified that Pauley had informed him that he had raised money for the 1940 presidential race from such interests and they expected to be rewarded.

While tidewater oil figured prominently in the hearings, Max Thornburg, former petroleum adviser to the state department, charged that Pauley had tried to push through a refinery project in Mexico on excessively favorable terms. Thornburg also said that Pauley sought to sell a tanker to Mexico during the critical period of 1941, stating he would remit his share of the proceeds to the Democratic committee.

Having vigorously denied all allegations, Pauley was particularly irked by Thornburg's tanker testimony, roaring: "This is a dirty, deliberate, premeditated lie. Anyone who would say I did that is a liar."

VET ADMINISTRATION:
Under Fire

Though President Truman and other veterans groups gave their full support to Gen. Omar Bradley's Veterans' Administration, Commander John Stelle of the American Legion declared his organization would press its fight against the VA to cut the red tape hampering its service and speed up G.I. care.

In rapping the VA, Stelle charged that the VA was far behind in administering vet affairs, citing a backlog of 102,830 unprocessed applications for G.I. education; 20,411 pending claims for waiver of insurance premiums; 18,847 undisposed death claims; 287,000 unanswered letters, and a lack of suitable hospital facilities, especially for non-service disabilities.

Replying to Stelle's attack, Bradley pointed to the tremendous increase in cases during the last six months, the scarcity of office space and adequate clerical help, and difficulties in securing both hospital facilities and medical assistance. Of 500,000 applications for training under the readjustment act, he said, 131,398 are receiving schooling and 258,781 have been declared eligible; of 2,000,000 disability claims filed, 1,567,000 have been adjudicated, and of 1,594,000 letters received, 1,537,000 have been answered.

FARM INCOME:
Record Indicated

During the first 11 months of 1945, cash income to farmers including benefits totaled $19,692,000,000, while for the same period of 1944 the total was $19,290,000,000.

The index of the quantity of goods sold was 135.1 for the 11 months of 1945 as compared with 137.4 for the same period of 1944, the decrease being offset by a rise in the index of prices received for farm products from 130.4 in 1944 to 135.3 in 1945.

Yanks Bring Civilization to Okinawa with Cement Mixer

Marines and Seabees on Okinawa are enjoying the novel experience of having their laundry done in a cement mixer by native women, who have learned that their new-fangled washing machine is far superior to the old-fashioned method of beating out clothes on a rock.

The mixer, useless for its intended purpose after prolonged service, required alterations when converted. These were taken care of by Seabee machinists and marine transportation men. For instance:

Blades of the mixer were removed and were replaced by six two-by-four bumpers. When the mixer rotates, the clothes hit against the bumpers as they do in most washers used by American housewives.

Truman Labors Under New Deal 'Inheritance'

Congress Seen Taking Advantage of President's Rightist Leanings; Lacks Influence of FDR to Put Policies Over.

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

It was a cool, crisp winter day. A week before the erratic Washington weather had seduced a whole circle of credulous pansies which pushed their startled faces up from the garden on the White House lawn. Poor bemused flora! They were soon frozen as solid in their beds as the President's labor legislation in congress.

We hurried along Pennsylvania avenue, our coat collars turned up, arguing heatedly as newsmen do when they are released from the inhibitions which seize them the moment they sit down and meet the solemn stare of their typewriter keyboards with that threatening noose, the deadline, tightening about the medulla oblangata.

"The most astounding thing," said one of us, "is the way Truman, with all his experience in congress, can't get along with it. If he would only buttonhole some of the thinkers in the opposition, say Vandenberg in the senate and men like Wollcott in the house, and appeal to their sense of patriotism, he wouldn't have all this trouble."

"It isn't as simple as that," interrupted another, as we paused to show our photographic passes to the guard at the gate (who has known us all by our first names for a decade but who always solemnly studies our cards as if they were aliases). "It isn't as simple as that. After all, congress has to be realistic in an election year. They are facing real issues. And the President's program isn't realistic."

"Whether or not it is realistic," the third member of the group put in, "after all it isn't his program. He inherited it. It's New Deal and the New Deal is Old Hat now. It doesn't represent Harry Truman's ideas at all but he has to go through with it."

All I felt I could add to those sage observations, without agreeing that the New Deal was Old Hat or the latest Downing Street model, whether it was realistic or modernistic or neo-marxian, was that it certainly is probable that if the President were able to shatter his inheritance to bits and then remould it to something nearer his heart's desire, he could probably put a lot more pep into his selling talk to congress.

By this time we were adding our coats to the huge pile of garments on the great Aguinaldo mahogany table in the lobby of the executive offices and taking our place in the line outside the conference room.

Resentment Shades Chief's Feelings

On this particular day the President started off with the note on which the whole conference was carried. I don't quite know how to describe it. He kept smiling. He didn't lose his temper. But there was just a shade of resentment in his voice and his words. It all sounded more like the later, somewhat disillusioned days of his predecessor, than the merry moments when a Roosevelt interview was always a good show as well as a newsful event—I mean the early days before the weight of war descended upon FDR's wearying brow. There is a weight on Truman today quite as heavy, for peace has its miseries as well as war. Just as it was freely predicted that "the United States will never stand for an occupying army for any length of time" (which proved to be so painfully correct), so everyone took for granted that any President in office when the war ended would have an impossible job.

But let's get back to the crowded office of the President on the winter day I am describing. He sat there smiling, exchanging wisecracks with the men in the first row. On the table behind him were the photographs of his family, crowned with a great bunch of jonquils from the White House greenhouse. He looked cheerful enough. The usual signal "all in" was sounded. He stood up and began to talk about what he called a "tempest in a teacup"—the controversy over building an addition to the White House. Personally I think it is the height of folly to continue the effort (begun by Theodore Roosevelt) to try to house the office work of the President under the roof of "the President's House," but I mention this controversy simply because it reflects the seamy side of White House-congress relations. Many of the President's friends feel that trying to make a modern office out of a beautiful old American colonial residence is folly, but they also felt that much of the furor raised in congress was due to a desire to embarrass Mr. Truman.

Why can't Truman get on with congress? Perhaps because he is a little too much like them. This is merely a hunch but I am not the only one who has toyed with the idea: both congress and the President (I realize that "congress" is a loose term because the legislators are a collection of many men of many minds) inclines farther to the right than the inherited Roosevelt program is targeted. Congress, the part of it that knows Harry Truman well, undoubtedly feels that his heart leans just about as far in the same direction. Therefore, he just can't get these more leftish ideas across. Harry Truman has a tremendous respect for the office of the presidency, a deep feeling of duty to carry out the program which death placed in his hands—a duty and a function he never sought. He cannot toss this heritage into the discard. And he probably reasons that if he feels that responsibility, the members of the party should do likewise. But it must be remembered that it was the powerful influence of a personality which could win an election four times, a task no American had dared to attempt even for the third, which kept congress obedient and even then, toward the end, only falteringly.

Truman Reveals His True Self

On this particular day of which I am speaking, I think we heard Truman revealing his true self. He believes that the White House should be enlarged. He resented the opposition which he suspected was at least in part personal and political rather than the product of sincere conviction. I thought I heard that in his voice.

But I also think I heard in his words, a similar expression of his own philosophy, when he said that he thought the present industrial strife was a struggle for power between labor and management. In other words that basically it was not the demands of the men who work for more pay nor was it an objection on the part of industry to pay higher wages, as much as it was a pitch battle between labor leaders and the top men in management to see which could beat the other down.

To one who brags about being middle-class, without even a drop of blood of an Irish king in his veins, it sounded like good, sound (call it stuffy if you want) middle-class resentment. Then the President added that he thought that both labor and management had too much power and it was time for the government to step in and assert the power of the people which government is supposed to represent.

But when we asked the President if and how the government was going to assert itself to exert the "power of the people" to settle the mess, all he said was that he had done all that he possibly could do.

He could have called out the army and the navy, the national guard, the FBI and the United Marching and Social Clubs, and taken over the steel industry the next day. But a step like that, which was no more than the wave of a tapering cigarette holder yesterday, was one which no cautious middle-class, middle-western, middle-of-the-road American would like to take except under duress. (I say that as one such.)

And so congress, part of it responding to the pressure of management and part of it under the pressure of labor, fiddles and filibusters while industry contentedly lives off its fat, labor on union funds or relief and the "people" with all their alleged "power" wonder how long, oh Lord, how long!

DREW PEARSON

FARMERS AND LABORERS

WASHINGTON. — It gives no joy to issue storm warnings. But the price-wage turmoil of today may have equal or even greater repercussions next spring when farmers lose their food subsidies.

What most people don't realize is that the public is squarely in between two powerful, well-organized pressure groups, both with very conflicting interests, both sometimes taking a public-be-damned attitude. One is organized labor. The other is the farm organizations, which, while they can't strike, can and will exert effective pressure when subsidies are removed.

Both groups work against each other in the following manner: When labor raises wages in the cities, this sucks labor away from the farms. Whereupon the farmer has to raise farm wages in order to compete with the cities. This in turn increases his cost of production, forcing him to increase prices or go out of business.

At present, the farmer can't increase prices because of OPA. So the government, recognizing the injustice of his higher operating costs, gives him a subsidy. When this subsidy is removed, he will have to increase prices — unless operating costs are reduced. And the current strike wave is constantly forcing up the cost of labor.

All this operates in a vicious circle. For, the minute food prices go up, labor will come in for more wage increase, based upon the cost of living.

Organized labor, of course, can better take care of itself. But unorganized and unprotected are a great body of white-collar workers, unskilled labor, plus the middle-class business men who get squeezed in between. This is the group which is getting sorer and sorer at labor. There was a time when they were sympathetic, but not now. This is the red flag of public opinion which organized labor needs to watch.

U. S. MARES TO EUROPE

Biggest foreign purchase of horses since Mussolini drained the southwest for his Ethiopian transport divisions is now taking place in the middle west. UNRRA is buying 16,000 American mares for disposal in Greece, Yugoslavia, Poland and Czechoslovakia — countries from which the Nazis drove away most of the horse population.

The mares are being purchased under the supervision of the department of agriculture which has passed the job on to the Sparks-Norris horse and mule company in St. Louis, Owen Brothers in Memphis, and Dean Bowns and W. L. Elder in Des Moines. Average price paid by UNRRA to the dealer is $77 and $97.50 per head.

This has aroused criticism in the farm belt, because dealers are paying only $50 to $60 per horse, thus netting a profit of about $25 each. However, agriculture department officials defend prices on the ground that dealers take a risk on sick horses, accidents during shipment, etc.

The army paid an average of $165 per head for horses during the war, but was more particular, rejecting horses for scars and blemishes. Mares now being purchased must be three to eight years old, broken for both work and riding. They are being shipped overseas from Baltimore, New Orleans, Jersey City, and Portland, Me.

NOTE. — Tip-off to the fact that Mussolini was plannning to conquer Ethiopia came two years before his war started when, in 1933-34, the Italians suddenly bought $342,798 worth of mules from Missouri, Arkansas and Texas.

ADMIRAL NIMITZ'S POINTS

Adm. Chester Nimitz, new chief of naval operations, was sitting in the navy building barber shop near a captain in the naval reserve.

The four-striper, exchanging pleasantries with the former U. S. commander in the Pacific, twice reminded his superior that he had sufficient points to get out of service, and seemed just as anxious to be separated as the average seaman first class.

Smiling mischievously, Nimitz replied, "I never thought I'd get enough points to get out of the Pacific."

MERRY-GO-ROUND

Those two one-time enemies, AFL's William Green and United Mine Workers' John L. Lewis, were seen, heads together, lunching at the Mayflower hotel here recently. "This may be an historic conference," Green remarked to a passing friend.

Says Congressman Smith of Wisconsin regarding a department of peace: "I would be in favor of spending as much for this type of program as we are spending for the military establishments today. I would like to see a secretary for peace within the cabinet." . . . Teachers' Digest has sent to 30,000 leading educators the following sage advice: "You may admire Russia or you may dislike her violently. No matter how you feel, one fact remains: If Russia and the U. S. agree, these two countries can assure the peace of the world."

Veterans' SERVICE BUREAU

EDITOR'S NOTE: This newspaper, through special arrangement with the Washington Bureau of Western Newspaper Union at 1616 Eye Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., is able to bring readers this weekly column on problems of the veteran and serviceman and his family. Questions may be addressed to the above Bureau and they will be answered in a subsequent column. No replies can be made direct by mail, but only in the column which will appear in this newspaper regularly.

When Will Vets Return?

The Washington office of Western Newspaper Union has received scores of letters from parents, wives, sweethearts and friends of men in service, all asking when their loved ones will get out of the service. We cannot answer these letters with any degree of accuracy because there is no way of ascertaining when men with a given number of points in a given theatre will be released. There are too many circumstances which must be considered in any particular area.

Here, however, is the promise of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, made in his recent address before a joint session of congress January 15, as regards enlisted men:

"By April 30, 1946, all enlisted men, except volunteers, with 45 points as of September 2, 1945, or with 30 months' service as of April 20, 1946, will be separated from the army or aboard ship returning home.

"By June 30, 1946, all enlisted men, except volunteers, with 40 points as of September 2, 1945, or with 24 months' service as of June 30, 1946, will be separated from the army or aboard ship returning home."

General "Ike" further said that whether this rate of discharge can be maintained depends directly upon the rate of replacements or inflow into the army. So this commitment is limited to July 1, 1946.

Questions and Answers

Q. I am a widow of World War II with one child. I drew an allotment for myself and baby until he was killed in action in the navy. His insurance was made to his parents and neither the baby or I was mentioned in the papers. Now his parents are drawing this. Is there any way for me to get this or any part of the insurance?—Mrs. O. M. C., Crossville, Ala.

A. There is no way for you to obtain this insurance if you were not named as beneficiary, unless parents of the serviceman are willing to share with you. You, however, are entitled to a pension for yourself and baby.

Q. Would it be possible for a veteran's widow who is receiving a Spanish American war pension of $30 per month, to exchange it for a World War pension to which she is also entitled? How would she go about making the exchange?—B. M. D., Elk Mills, Md.

A. Yes, the veterans' administration says it is possible. Consult your nearest regional veterans' administration office, probably at Richmond or Baltimore.

Q. We had a nephew who was in the army in the Philippines when war was declared. He was taken prisoner and died in a Jap prison camp in July, 1942. He did not carry insurance. His mother is a widow and is she entitled to receive any compensation? The boy's father was a World War I veteran and died in 1930.—His aunt, Watsontown, Pa.

A. I would say that the widowed mother, if she was dependent upon the veteran, is entitled to a pension. However, she should file a claim with the nearest office of the veterans' administration, probably at Philadelphia or Pittsburgh, and they will determine her eligibility.

Q. My son has been discharged from the army. He entered service February, 1941. Is he entitled to the pre-Pearl Harbor ribbon? He was entitled to three bronze stars, but only one was shown in his discharge. Is there some way this can be put on his discharge and where can I obtain the information?—Mrs. W.M.J., Purvis, Miss.

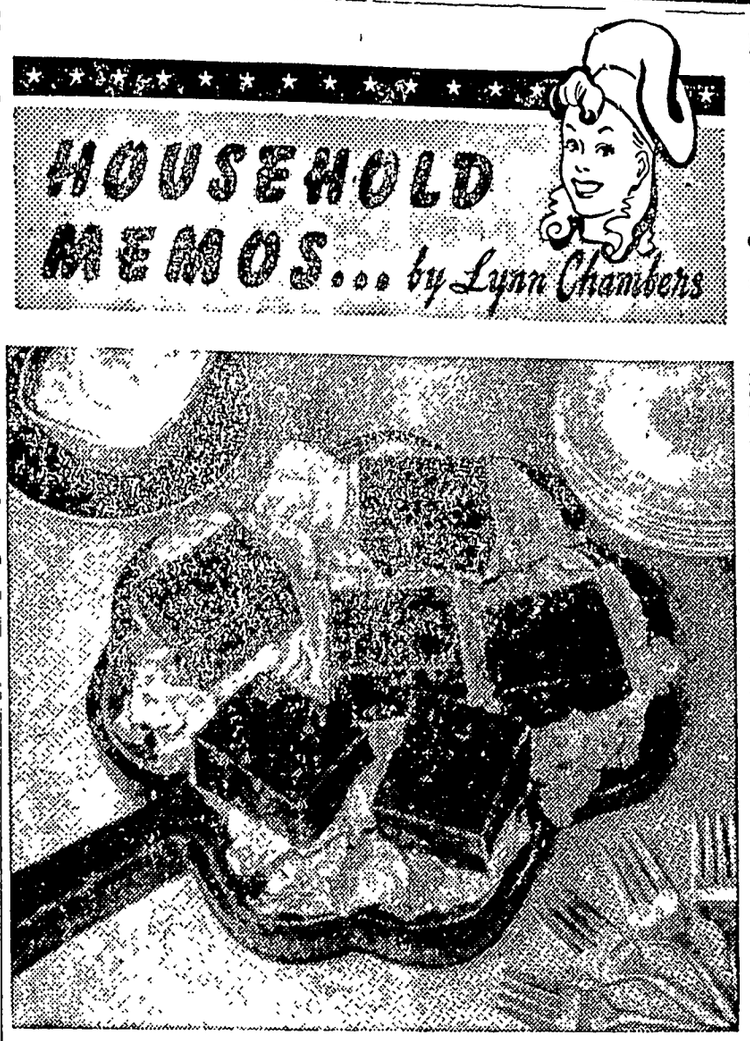
A. For answers to both questions write to the office of the adjutant general, enlisted personnel, war department, Washington, D. C.

Q. My husband has one child and has been in the marines since August, 1943, and overseas since June 1, 1945. How many points does he have? He is in Peiping, China. When can I expect him home?—Mrs. D. H. S., Lewisburg, Pa.

A. As of September 2, your husband has 38 points. He is not likely to be home soon since the marines are screening all low point men and regulars out of units scheduled to return home soon. Fifty points are necessary for discharge.

Q. I have had three years in the army. Received my honorable discharge in the fall and put in a claim for trouble with my ankle, also tonsils. Received my notice for examination in December, x-rays, etc. As yet I haven't heard from them. Am I eligible for a disability pension? —D. H. W., Salisbury, Md.

A. It may take several weeks for the veterans' administration to catch up with your claim. They will eventually, however. There is a shortage of manpower in all veterans' administration offices. Keep writing or calling the office where you filed.



Serve Salads for Afternoon Snacks
(See Recipes Below)

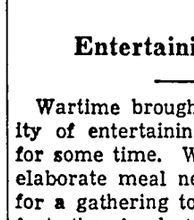
Entertaining Easily

Wartime brought back a simplicity of entertaining which will last for some time. We learned that an elaborate meal need not be served for a gathering to be successful. In fact, the simplest of food well prepared and nicely served will bring cheers from any crowd.

A salad with tiny sandwiches served with tea is ample refreshment for an afternoon meeting of the club. A mouth-watering coffee cake with coffee is ideal for an evening get-together. Chocolate milk and sandwiches or a casserole is perfect fare for the children's party.

With sugar still among the scarce items, it's a good idea to conserve on this precious foodstuff whenever possible. Judicious use of sugar substitutes will pull you through many a scarce period, and salads and sandwiches served with beverages will take care of the other times.

When selecting a recipe, check over the amount of sugar required before starting to mix so that you will not be caught short-handed. Consider also whether it is wise to use, say two cups of sugar for a cake, or whether a cake with half or less of that amount couldn't do just as well. It often will.



Many cookies and dessert sauces can be made just as sweet without sugar. These little economies will save sugar for the times when you really need it.

Here are two versatile salads which can easily meet entertaining needs. Both can be served with thin strips of sandwiches to act as a main dish.

Molded Main Dish Salad.

1 tablespoon unflavored gelatin
½ cup cold water
1 cup tomato juice
1 small can salmon, flaked
2 diced, hard-cooked eggs
½ cup chopped celery
1 tablespoon chopped onion
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
Salad greens

Soften gelatin in cold water. Heat tomato juice to boiling. Add gelatin and stir until dissolved. Chill until partially congealed. Flake salmon; add. Add remaining ingredients. Place in individual ring molds or one 8½-inch mold. Chill until firm. Unmold on bed of lettuce greens and serve with french dressing or mayonnaise.

Frozen Fruit Salad.
(Serves 8)

1 cup cottage cheese
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup pineapple, finely diced
1 cup cherries, pitted
1 cup peaches, sliced or diced
2 oranges, diced
8 marshmallows, quartered
1 cup whipping cream
½ cup mayonnaise

Combine cheese, salt, fruits and marshmallows, tossing together lightly with a fork. Chill. Whip cream until stiff and combine lightly with mayonnaise. Fold in cheese mixture. Place in freezing tray for three to four hours; or, pack in equal parts of ice and salt for four hours. Serve on crisp lettuce and garnish with additional whipped cream blended with mayonnaise.

Lynn Says:

Keep well-groomed: Art gum or wall paper cleaner may be used on light-colored felt hats and kid gloves for cleaning.

Light-colored furs may be cleaned and much improved in appearance by rubbing well with corn meal or flour. Shake out throughly and then brush well.

To prevent blisters from new shoes, cover irritated surface or place where shoe is most likely to rub with a small piece of adhesive tape.

To mend woolen garments, ravel a thread from the cloth itself and use for darning.

Sandwich Fillings

1. Combine 2 cups ground ham, 5 tablespoons mayonnaise, 5 tablespoons prepared mustard and use on whole wheat or rye bread.

2. Mash 3 ounces of cream cheese with 1 tablespoon worcestershire sauce and 2 tablespoons finely cut chives. Use with rounds of whole wheat or white bread.

3. Combine chopped hard-cooked eggs with minced celery, onion juice, chopped sweet pickle and mayonnaise to moisten. This is good on any type of bread.

4. Combine cottage cheese with chopped dates and preserved ginger and spread on white bread.

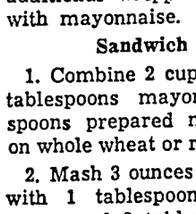
5. Mix cottage cheese with chipped, crisp bacon and add salad dressing to moisten.

A fruited coffee cake is always delightful because it has flavor and is appealing to look at. Here is the quick type which uses an easy method with a choice of fruit.

Fruited Coffee Cake.

2 cups flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
⅓ cup sugar
½ cup fat
1 egg, beaten
1 cup milk
8 apricot halves or
4 peach halves or pineapple slices

Sift flour once, measure. Sift flour, baking powder, salt and sugar together. Cut fat into dry ingredients until mixture resembles coarse corn meal. Combine egg with milk. Add to dry ingredients. Stir only until mixed. Pour into greased 8-inch-square pan. Leave apricots whole and cut peaches or pineapple in half. Arrange fruit over top of dough. Mix 2 tablespoons flour, 2 tablespoons brown sugar, and 1 tablespoon fat together. Sprinkle this mixture over the top. Bake in a moderate (375-degree) oven for 30 minutes.



If you want to serve a light dessert for an afternoon club meeting or evening snack, it can be made entirely without sugar. Orange juice and prunes offer a flavorsome combination.

Frozen Orange Prune Whip.
(Serves 8)

1 egg white
½ cup extra-sweet corn syrup, golden type
½ cup prune pulp
1 cup cream, stiffly beaten
½ cup orange juice
½ teaspoon grated orange rind
1 tablespoon lemon juice

Beat egg white stiff. Gradually beat in syrup. Add prune pulp (made by rubbing cooked prunes through a sieve, or by chopping fine), folding it in thoroughly. Chill cream until very cold, then whip until stiff. Add orange juice, grated rind and lemon juice to cream. Combine prune and cream mixtures and freeze in refrigerator tray until firm.

WHAT MAKES A PEOPLE GREAT —RELIGION IN THE HOME

LESSON TEXT: Deuteronomy 6:4-12.
MEMORY SELECTION: Every day will I bless thee; and I will praise thy name for ever and ever.—Psalm 145:2.

Home, church, school and the state—these are the four institutions which determine the greatness of a people—and the most influential of all is the home.

What a child becomes under the nurture of the home will determine his interest in the church, his attitude toward school, and eventually his value as a citizen of the nation. How tragic then that we are giving so little attention to our American homes!

The religious life of the home is the most important element of its activity, for it is the determining factor in the life of the child. It is in the home that the child's whole existence centers and from which he receives the repeated impressions, day by day, which determine character and destiny. It is in the home that the parent has the opportunity to demonstrate the reality of the faith professed in the church, and to show the child that Christianity really counts in the ordinary experiences of life.

Three things appear in our lesson as characterizing the religion of the home.

I. Worship (vv. 4, 5).

Twice a day the orthodox Jew repeats the words of these verses: namely, at the time of prayer, morning and night. They remind him of his personal relationship to God, and they recall one of God's primary reasons for calling Israel to be his people. They were to be a national witness to the one true God in the midst of the almost universal worship of many gods. They were to stand for monotheism in the midst of polytheism.

So important is the complete devotion of man—and that brings in the whole family—to God that when Jesus was asked what was the greatest of all commandments (see Mark 12:28-31), he named this passage together with Leviticus 19:18.

Nothing should take precedence over the true worship of God in our hearts, and in the hearts of all those we hold dear in our households. The Eternal One, the Source of Life, the All-Powerful One, he is "our God" (v. 4) and he looks to us for complete and constant devotion to him. Let us give it.

II. Instruction (vv. 6-9).

It was not enough that these words should be repeated in some regular or formal worship, but they were to be taught to the children in the home with all faithfulness and diligence—and by the parents.

We are far too eager to delegate the teaching of our children to others. In religious matters it is the church and the Sunday school which are responsible. Many parents do not even take their boys and girls to the house of God. They just send them. Mark it well, such parents are delinquent in their duties to God and to their families.

But our vital point is this—it is the business of the home to teach religion, to do it regularly, and to make it a normal and natural part of daily life.

This is a matter of great significance. The faith which we profess in the church must be effectively brought into the home. It is not enough to carry a Bible on Sunday. It should be in use in the home throughout the week; not only in family worship, but in the incidentals of daily life.

The family altar has gradually disappeared, and it is regrettable that it has, for the testimony of generations indicates that in family worship some of the most useful men and women of all ages have received the direction of life which made them great for God.

III. Remembrance (vv. 10-12).

Israel had a history full of the magnificent mercies of God. In the day when, by his help and blessing they were to be established in their land, they were to recall his blessings and recognize his goodness.

There are few, if any, more powerful incentives to faith and courageous living than the remembrance of past blessings. To recall how God made it possible for ordinary men and women to, by faith, subdue kingdoms, quench the fires of persecution, turn back the armies of aliens, to become strong in the midst of weakness (read Heb. 11) is to make one ready for the battles of life.

Every family has its dark and trying days, its experiences which rock one back on his heels in astonishment and fear—and in the Christian family God has always been the answer—the solution to every problem, the provider for every need. Keep such memories fresh in the thinking of boys and girls and they will be ready for the storms of life.

Help them to a great faith in a great Saviour and you have given them something more precious than all the riches of all the earth.

Household Hints

When the family tires of the usual breakfast food, serve big bowls of freshly popped corn with milk or cream, and sugar. It is a swell change.

Book shelves should be cleaned and painted, and books frequently dusted, to prevent the breeding of moths, silverfish, or other book devouring insects.

The dress you just bought will wear longer if you will take the trouble to secure dangling threads. Pull the thread ends to the inside and tie securely. Or, run them through a needle and fasten with a few over-and-over stitches.

To grow ivy in water, put in one teaspoon of liquid plant food to each part of water used and let it alone. No changing of water is required. From time to time, as the water evaporates, add more of the plant food in proportion to the water added.

Small cuts, cracks, or scratches in the surface of linoleum can be partly healed by occasionally rubbing with boiled linseed oil. Have the surface clean and dry before rubbing in the oil. Wipe off any oil left on the surface afterward with a soft cloth. Allow the area to dry 48 hours before washing again.

To Save Money, Mix Your Cough Relief at Home

So Easy! No Cooking. Quick Relief.

Even if you're not interested in saving good money, you surely want a really effective relief for coughs due to colds. So try mixing it yourself, in your kitchen, and be ready for a surprise.

It's so easy to mix, a child could do it. Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and 1 cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. No cooking is needed. Or use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (obtained from any druggist) into a pint bottle. Then fill up with your syrup. This makes a pint—about four times as much for your money. It tastes good—children really like it. It lasts a family a long time, and never spoils.

But what you'll like most is the way it takes right hold of a cough. It loosens the phlegm, soothes irritation, and helps clear the air passages. Eases soreness, and let's you sleep. You'll say you've never seen its superior.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well known for its quick action on throat and bronchial irritations. Try it, and if you're not really delighted, your money will be refunded. —Adv.

"C" Here, Private Orange Grove

"C" stands for an important vitamin found in citrus fruits, and now is the time for all good people to make sure they get enough citrus fruits in their diet. If the juice is preferred, the vitamin supply can be furnished by two-thirds of a cup of fresh or canned grapefruit or orange juice daily.

A cold or infection in the body seems to call for more than normal amounts of vitamin C Vitamin C will not cure a cold but it helps to bind and tie the tissues together Muscles, blood vessels, teeth and bones are particularly benefited by it.

Orange and grapefruit peels are particularly rich in Vitamin C These can be made palatable by cutting into thin strips and added to raw relishes Destruction of Vitamin C is hastened by air, enzymes and metals. In order to obtain the most vitamin serve citrus fruits soon after preparation.

BLACK JACK RABBIT

Donald Bendickson of Scarville recently struck a black animal with his car. Failing to be greeted with the familiar odor customarily associated with the striking of dark animals at night, he stopped to investigate. Instead of finding a "striped kitty," a black jack rabbit was lying dead in the road. The unusual specimen is a color phase of the common jack rabbit and is known as "melanism."

Volume 51. KLEMME, IOWA, FEBRUARY 27, 1946 Number 15

ed Cross Designates March Or Peacetime Fund Appeal

THREE MILLION PLAN RED CROSS DRIVE

ationwide Drive To Get Under Way Mar. 1

March 1 heralds the opening the first postwar fund cam- ign of the American Red oss. Upwards of 3,000,000 olunteer solicitors will begin eir canvass of every home d office in communities from st to coast for $100,000,000, e largest peacetime fund ever ed by the organization.

The month of March has been signated Red Cross Month by esident Truman, who, in his roclamation, called for the full- st support of the organization's mpaign. Simultaneously Red oss Chairman Basil O'Connor d civic leaders everywhere inted to the need for continu- g Red Cross services to able- odied troops abroad and in this ountry, and to veterans, as ell as to families and depen- nts of all who have worn the niform.

Three Battle Fronts

"The men in active service, e hospitalized, and the veter- s form three major Red Cross attle fronts which victory in e field merely served to in- ensify," Mr. O'Connor said in nnouncing opening of the cam- aign. "Since VE and VJ days ed Cross services to these men nd their dependents have in- reased materially. Added to his are rapidly growing re- ponsibilities to civilians. Every merican must support his Red ross to the utmost so that it ay continue to serve our men n uniform, whether able-bodi- d or hospitalized, our veterans, nd people, adequately."

Red Cross budget estimates re pared to a minimum con- istent with adequate service, Mr. O'Connor poinetd out. Ex- enditures for 1946 actually will xceed the campaign goal, the ifference being made up from unds previously collected in he belief war would continue into 1946.

"In keeping with its budget the Red Cross faces its biggest peace-time job," the Chairman said. "A well-developed Red Cross recreation and welfare program for our occupation for- ces must be maintained at an all-time peak in efficiency and individual attention. The hos- pitalized and wounded must continue to receive Red Cross aid in the form of constructive recreational activity, help in planning the future, and assist- ance in solving many a knotty, personal problem which may retard recovery and depress the spirit. The veteran, returning to civilian life, must receive guidance and advice when need- ed.

Red Cross Expands

"But men in uniform and their dependents are not the only Red Cross responsibility. The organization faces an ex- panding peacetime program more widespread in scope than in years prior to World War II. Having collected more than 13,- 000,000 pints of blood during the war, the Red Cross is putting its experience to use in building a vivilian blood donor service. Expanded programs of instruc- tion in first aid, water safety, accident prevention, home nur- sing, nutrition, and other sub- jects are being launched."

More widespread activity in the field of public health may also be looked for as a result of appointment last December of the Red Cross Advisory Board on Health Services composed of 100 eminent leaders in the med- ical, dental, nursing, sociologi- cal, and other fields.

Red Cross volunteer activi- ties which reach out to every hamlet in this nation, have also geared their programs to post- war conditions. Surveys of local needs have been or are being made and program adjustments are being determined from their findings."

This year, give liberally to the Red Cross.

March 1st Is Moving Day For Many In Community

MANY WILL BE IN NEW HOMES MAR. 1

Its Annual Moving Time For Iowa Farmers

March 1st is moving time in Iowa, and this year there seems to be about the usual amount of moving in this community.

Quite a few of the farmers who are moving have taken ad- vantage of the good weather the past week and moved as much of their property as was possible, and so have lessened the job of March 1.

Art Schlawin, who has been living on the home farm 3½ miles east of Klemme for sev- eral years, moved to the Jens Paulson farm 1 mile south and 3 miles east of Garner. Mr. Jensen retired and moved to town.

Werner Schlawin, brother of Art, purchased the home farm and moves there from north- east of Klemme. Paul Lau, who has been on the Fred Bachman farm southeast of Klemme, goes to the farm vacated by Werner Schlawin, which is located 2 miles east, 3 miles north and 1 mile east of Klemme.

Pete Lackore from the Good- ell neighborhood moves onto the Bachman farm vacated by Paul Lau.

Bob Marshall, who has farm- ed for many years northwest of Klemme about 3 miles, moves to the farm 4½ miles directly east of Klemme where Arn Ty- ler has resided the past year, and where Elmer Schneider lived for several years. We are sorry to lose the Tylers from our community. They are mov- ing to a farm on the south edge of Mason City.

John Kaduce, who purchased the farm vacated by Robt. Mar- shall, moves to that place. The Kaduce family have resided for many years on the first farm directly north of Klemme, on the east side of the road.

Everett Groth comes into our neighborhood to farm the place north of Klemme vacated by John Kaduce, Sr.

Mrs. Lewis Neuberger and brother, Wert Loger are mov- ing to Mrs. Neuberger's farm north and east of Klemme, va- cated by Francis Pearson, who moves to the Ewalt Josten farm in the Rockwell neighborhood.

Wm. Thiel, who has been liv- ing in town for a couple of years moves to his own farm, the old U. G. Smid place, va- cated by Mrs. Neuberger and Wert Loger.

Harry Pringnitz moves from 2 miles west of town to a farm south of Clear Lake, which he had purchased.

Art Polsdofer, who has been on the C. A. Larsen farm west and south of town, moves to the farm vacated by Harry Prin- nitz.

Eric Meyer and family will tenant the Larsen farm vacated by Polsdofer.

Louis Jurgameyer moves to the Alfred Jurameyer farm north and east of Klemme to begin farming. Mr. and Mrs. Jake Hess have been farming the place but are retiring and moving to one of their houses in Klemme.

Stuart Heivilin has quit farm- ing 2½ miles north of Klemme and the family will move to Se- attle, Washington. Mrs. Heivi- lin and children will live with her brother Art Johnson on his farm until school is out.

Paul Whitesell of Waterloo, has already moved to the farm vacated by Heivilin.

There is more moving going on southeast of town. Bernard Gruis, who has been on the Henry Nannenga farm for the past few years, moves a mile to the south to the farm where Harry Boelman has been living.

Henry Nannenga, who has been living in Meservey for a few years, moves back to his farm vacated by Gruis.

Verner Nelson moves off of the Tom Nelson farm to his own farm where Mr. and Mrs. Dan Green have been living. The Greens, who were not farming the land, moved to Corwith.

Harry Boelman moves to the T. C. Nelson farm vacated by Verner Nelson.

Leslie Braund, who has been farming the Albert Kehl place 1½ miles north of Klemme, moves to a farm in the Lake Mills neighborhood. Jake Nan- nenga from near Thornton will farm the Kehl farm vacated by the Braunds.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Lewis, who lived in the Hess house, moved just across the street to the house formerly tenanted by Mrs. W. Drake and family. Sea- man Drake moved his family to the west coast recently. Mrs. Herman Bridges, who lived with her daughter, Mrs. Drake, recently moved to an apart- ment in the Post Office build- ing.

Mrs. Anna Waddingham who has been living on her farm with her son, northeast of town moves to the Blank house in the southwest part of town. Ev- ert Barz and family, who have been living there, moved to Waterloo where Mr. Barz is employed and where they re- cently purchased a house.

Carl Finders sold his house in the north part of town to Mr. and Mrs. Herman Gast, who re- tire from the farm in Liberty township and moved to town. Their son, Loren and wife, will farm the place this year.

Mr. and Mrs. Finders pur- chased the Wm. Thiel house north of the Community Hall, to which they are moving.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Ruka who have resided in the Day house on the east side of the Park are moving to Des Moines soon. They purchased a house there. The Marvin Isvik family of Chi- cago will move into the Day house vacated by the Rukas.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Nettifee of Mason City have moved into the rooms above Bell's Produce Store. Mr. Nettifee was re- cently discharged from the ar- my and is going into business in Klemme.

There may be others who are moving whom we did not list. We will be glad to get this in- formation for publication next week. Please send in your "moving list" if you know of any we have missed.

Homes This Way, Please

This is la dizzy age. You can now buy a home in a department store!

—*—

And get the landscaping one flight up and the poultry house in the basement.

—*—

Alladin was a small time magician by comparison. He couldn't get any more staggering results using his wonderful lamp than a shopper can get using the elevators.

—*—

Even a man who thinks he has been everywhere and seen everything yells for an aspirin when he hears the elevator girl chirp "Sixth floor for bungalows, villas, duplexes, country estates and small farms!"

—*—

We joined the shopping rush at one of the big stores selling homes the other day. It was terrific. We lost a rib in the hall of a cottage for two, got a dislocated shoulder between the bath and the kitchenette of a country home and had our shins barked in the patio of a demi tasse residence marked down to $4,998 from $5,000 (only one to a customer).

—*—

You may think the women folks are tough when in search of nylons but you haven't seen unnecessary roughness until you see them with their boy friends determined to find out which department store is offering the hottest sale of bargain domiciles.

—*—

An embattled shopper in the Christmas rush trying to grab the last bottle of perfume is a mildly aggressive foe compared to a wife, mother or sister out to find the best buys in kitchenettes, guest rooms, sun porches and picket fences.

—*—

Some of the hardest looks we ever saw exchanged between human beings we saw exchanged between two recent brides claiming an inspection priority on the threshhold of a 10 by 12 living room.

—*—

Artificial trees, rocks, rills and grass gave such an effect of reality to the homes, that we sat on one porch and complained to the floorwalker that there was no sea breeze!

—*—

In the patio of the house in the next alley, we heard a woman ask a salesman. "Haven't you something with a better view?"

—*—

Be it ever so humble there is no place like home, wrapped to be taken out or sent parcels post.

—*—

Next elevator, please, for garages, cabanas, extra circular stairways, spare cellars and hanging gardens!

That is, she ought to add, unless
She puts it in her bag.

Those Old Buggies

Do you recall the one-cylinder Pierce-Arrow Motorette which had a surrey top and was steered by a lever which came out at right angles from the side?

Prior to that one, I rode as a kid in a one-cylinder Selden. This had wheels like a bicycle and the seats were back to back and it was steered with a tiller in the center.

The old model K-Winton (four-cylinder) was driven with planetary drive, which had a low and high speed, of course, and this was controlled on a side lever. There was a second side lever, which, when pushed forward, was supposed to be an emergency brake, but had no ratchet to hold it and if you relied on the braking power you were completely lost.

The Thomas Flyer, which was built in my home town in Buffalo, was a very good car and most expensive. I remember that one of them won a race around the world in competition with two or three others, one of which was a Flat.

Henpecked? Well, This Should Change His Mind!

The next time Dad complains about being henpecked, remind him that greater men than he have endured worse. Take Abe Lincoln, for instance, his wife often drove him out of the house with a broom for napping on the family sofa, and the tongue-lashings she administered in public were the talk of the country.

Xanthippe, wife of Socrates, was a shrew. Her husband's indifference to money matters sometimes drove her into a rage. When this happened, she gave vent to her feelings by dousing a bucket of water over her husband's head. He liked that, too, so the neighbors could see and be amused.

Some historian puts Disraeli's wife, Catherine of France, and Henrietta, wife of Charles I, in the same category. The latter went a bit far and in a fit of religious zeal had her husband's head cut off.

Blonde Aviatrix Arranged Suicide Plane Project for German Victory

Hanna Reitsch's Plan Still Incomplete When Nazi Defeat Ended World War II

Written Exclusively For WNU Features

By PAULINE FREDERICK
WNU Foreign Correspondent.

NUERNBERG, GERMANY. — Never before in history has so much of how a war began and how it was fought come to light so quickly after that war's end as is happening today in Germany. There is not alone the incredible tale that is unfolding in the green-curtained courtroom here in Nuernberg. But a thousand other chapters are being revealed all over this torn country that will eventually complete the piece.

One of these is the story of how the Germans toyed with the idea of developing suicide planes to repel an invasion fleet in 1943 when their dreams of world conquest had come to an end in Russia. This tale has just come to light in intelligence reports released at Frankfurt, and the star of the piece is a blonde aviatrix named Hanna Reitsch.

IT WAS HIS FAULT . . . Hanna Reitsch lays the failure of the suicide plane project to Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering. The ex-chief of the ex-luftwaffe is shown here as he talked to Allied war correspondents in a detention camp. His facial expressions were dubbed his "injured innocence" act.

Here is the Story:

By 1943 a lot of people in Germany, including Reitsch, had become convinced that only extraordinary measures could bring the war to a successful end for Germany. They decided that if any plan for invasion of the continent could be destroyed at the beginning, Germany could then be safe enough in its continental fortress so that the Allies would be ready to make peace. Therefore, a small group of men banded together — a "suicide squadron" who were willing to give their lives in some kind of a man-propelled flying bomb that would destroy and sink at a ratio of one vessel per flying bomb, all the larger naval craft that were so important in protecting and covering an invasion force. Reitsch, from the beginning, was to be the chief test pilot for such a craft.

In the death of a thousand of their number the squadron hoped to save the lives of many thousands.

But plans had not progressed very far when insuperable obstacles were encountered. First, Reitsch went to Luftwaffe authorities and there was met with the impression that the idea was fantastic and the result of hallucinations of people tired of life who were looking for a martyr's end in the pages of German history. She had no better success at the air ministry. Then she took the matter to the aeronautical research council. After the experts examined the idea, they decided it was feasible. The plan was to install a 2,000 pound bomb-torpedo in the nose of a plane, which would be steered into the water at a certain angle. The impact with the water would kill the pilot instantly and allow the bomb to tear loose from the plane and continue under the keel of the vessel where it would explode with a time fuse that would be set in motion upon impact with the water.

Hitler Lukewarm to Plan.

Then on February 28, 1944, Reitsch had a three-hour conference with Hitler at Berchtesgaden to convince him that he should accept the plan and name the proper leadership. The aviatrix had long been convinced, undoubtedly for personal as well as professional reasons, that Goering was not the man for his job, to say nothing of this one. Hitler didn't like the self-sacrificing idea of the project because he thought it was "un-German." Also, he refused to believe that Germany's situation was so precarious and demanded such unusual measures. Hitler finally did say that plans would be developed so that when he gave the order they could be put into operation — but until such time as he chose to speak he didn't want to be bothered with the idea any more.

Meanwhile, 70 or 80 men, carefully selected, had signed the pledge: "I hereby volunteer as a pilot of the manned glider-bomb. I am convinced that this action will end with my death."

Tests on a Messerschmitt 328, to be launched from the back of a Dornier 217 in flight were completed in April, 1944. When it became apparent, however, that production in any quantity could not begin for months, it was decided that the V-1 "buzz bomb" should be altered sufficiently to take care of the project.

Perilous Test Flights.

A pilot's compartment was installed in the V-1, and other small modifications made, and then it was tested. There was a high fatality rate among the test pilots, but Reitsch came through and was convinced that this was the weapon that could be used. The particular danger in testing these planes was in landing them, whether as gliders or with a power unit, because of the speed and angle at which they came in. Ship targets were simulated by colored smoke bombs on the ground and dives and approaches were made to test angles and necessary speeds. An intricate aiming device was developed. The most important thing that had to be done carefully and accurately was to determine the distance from the ship that the V-1 was supposed to enter the water. The size and weight of the ship had to be judged exactly. By a sliding scale on the apparatus before him, the pilot was able to select his proper angle and maintain it correctly until his plane entered the water. The dive toward the water at a speed probably greater than 528 miles an hour was to disintegrate the V-1 and give the necessary impetus to the torpedo to continue on through the water until it reached a certain position, when the time fuse would automatically set off.

But the Nazi suicide squad never got into action. Even the technical development was not fully complete when the war ended, to say nothing of production that would have put the weapon into action.

Reitsch lays the failure to get the project into operation, as well as all other failures of German air power, to Goering. She says "that the spirit with which Goering had infused the Luftwaffe was detrimental to our project was well known to all of us. We needed strong leadership, tempered with an idealism that matched our own. Most of all we needed a leader who saw the present military situation (March, 1944) in the same degree of precariousness as we ourselves saw it."

Hanna Reitsch

Hanna Reitsch describes herself as follows: Five feet, 4½ inches tall, weighs about 109 pounds, has blonde hair with a "permanent," blue eyes, white teeth and a small round face with a scar down the center of her nose, a well-proportioned figure, 33 years old, and not considered beautiful.

She was a test pilot of German military aircraft and flew the V-1 "buzz bomb" plane. She holds records for flying gliders and other types of planes. But more than that, she was in the bunker under the Reichschancellery with Hitler and his entourage during the last days of Berlin and was slated to be a participant in the mass suicide plan worked out by Hitler to be put into effect when the Russians reached the bunker. However, in the early morning hours of April 30, 1945, the Fuehrer ordered her and Lt. Gen. Ritter von Greim, who had succeeded Goering as head of the Luftwaffe, to leave to accomplish two missions. One was to get Luftwaffe help to Berlin. The other was to prevent Heinrich Himmler, whom Hitler had just heard had contacted the Allies to make peace terms, from succeeding him as Fuehrer. Reitsch was Von Greim's personal pilot.

As far as is known at this time, Hanna Reitsch flew the last plane out of Berlin before it capitulated. Because of the conditions of the besieged city at the time, she says it is fantastic for anyone to believe that another plane could have safely spirited Hitler out so that he might be living today.

DIDN'T LIKE IT . . . Adolf Hitler didn't like Hanna Reitsch's idea for "suicide planes." He thought it was "un-German" but finally consented to have the plans developed.

Himmler Plotted to Kill Hitler and Trade his Body To Allies for Personal Safety, Colonel Testifies

During the last days of the Nazi regime, when allied armies were closing in on Berlin from all sides, the terror-stricken members of the high command tried to save themselves by sacrificing their associates. Heinrich Himmler, grim chief of the dread gestapo, sought to murder Adolf Hitler and sell his body to the Allies as the price of peace and personal safety, according to new information disclosed by British intelligence experts.

The British stress that Colonel von Buelow's story remains unconfirmed from other sources.

According to Colonel von Buelow, Himmler and his SS officers in the Reichschancellery bunker during the last days before Berlin's fall plotted Hitler's murder, but it is not known whether any attempt was made to carry it out.

Colonel von Buelow said that Himmler's negotiations with the Allies had been discovered definitely on April 28, and that it had been then that Hitler had suspected Herr Fegelein was connected with the plot.

A faithful SS officer was sent out to search for him. He was found in his flat and brought back to the bunker by the SS officer. Finally, on Hitler's orders, he was taken out and probably executed, Colonel von Buelow said.

A PEOPLE FINDING A HOMELAND

LESSON TEXT: Joshua 1:1-4; 23:1-11.
MEMORY SELECTION: Thou shalt bless the Lord thy God for the good land which he hath given thee.—Deuteronomy 8:10.

God is the Lord of nations as well as of homes, and he is concerned that those who honor him in their homes have opportunity to serve him in their national life. This was true in a special way with Israel, but it is also true of us today.

Ready to enter the Promised Land, the people had to part with their great leader, Moses, who was not permitted to enter. The time comes when even the mightiest of men fall, but life must go on and new leadership must be found.

I. The Changed Leader (Josh. 1: 1-4).

1. Workers Die—God's Work Goes On (vv. 1, 2).

God buries his workmen at the end of their day of labor, but God's work goes on. The people had become attached to Moses and had learned to trust his leadership, even though they often murmured. With his death we might have assumed that there would be a letdown, but that was not in God's plan.

The Lord works through men. He gives them abilities and uses them for his glory, often in a way which astonishes them and others. But let them not become proud, for God has someone to take their place when they are gone. They are not indispensable.

2. The Need Is the Same, So Is the Blessing (vv. 3, 4).

The promise given to Moses was still good. God's promises are always good. They are the only really stable thing in a trembling universe. The question is, Are we ready to take him at his word?

They were to step out by faith. The land was promised to them only as the sole of their foot should tread upon it. Israel never took out the full promise of verse 4. They lacked faith.

God honors those who believe him and who move forward by faith to plant the foot of spiritual conquest in new territory. Some are doing it now. Are we?

The enemies of God's people were many and mighty, but they were not able to stand in the way of God's people when they were moving forward for him. Here again, Israel failed. They did not drive them out, because they did not take God at his word. The application of that truth to us is obvious.

II. The Unchanging God (Josh. 23: 1-11).

Between our first scripture and this selection will be found the history of the conquest of the land (at least, of the larger part of it), and the division of the territory between the tribes.

Years have passed quickly, and the new leader, Joshua, is now an old man, soon to go to his reward. He gathers the elders who represented the people, and gave them good counsel for the days ahead, even as he recalls the blessings of the past.

1. God Did Help (vv. 1-3).

Israel had been in many hard battles. They had gone through the trials of pioneer days in a new and unfamiliar land. Now they were established and at peace. Perhaps they were recalling their mighty exploits and their own sacrificial efforts.

Joshua reminds them that it was God who fought for them (v. 3). We need just such a reminder in our land today.

2. God Will Help (vv. 4, 5). Joshua had a word of encouragement for the days ahead. There was much yet to be done. The land had not been fully taken. He reminded them of God's help in the past, so that they would depend on it in the future.

It is one mark of a great man that he looks beyond the end of his own short existence and plans for the future.

What about the future? Joshua reminded them that every blessing they had received, every victory they had won, everything had come from the hand of God. There and there alone was their hope for the future. And it was enough!

3. Help Yourself (vv. 6-11). To keep true in the land where their neighbors engaged in idol worship and all manner of immorality required definite action on the part of Israel.

They were not to deviate in the slightest from God's way, "to the right hand or to the left" (v. 6), for a little beginning in the wrong direction winds up in awful departure from him.

They were not even to swear by the heathen gods, not even to mention them. Thy were to "cleave" to the Lord, a graphic presentation of the close relation between God and his people.

There are many thoughts here which can be profitably applied to our daily lives. Faith in God calls for stalwart action and separated living for him.

Japs Hiding Food And Arms, Charge

Danger of Starvation Does Not Now Exist.

TOKYO. — General MacArthur's officers came up the other day with two charges of deception against the Japanese.

Col. Crawford F. Sams, chief of the public health and welfare section, said Japanese government officials had misrepresented the country's food problems in an attempt to obtain American supplies.

Sams asserted the danger of starvation in Japan during this winter "does not now exist."

Meanwhile, U. S. 6th army headquarters said 24th division patrols on the southern island of Shikoku have "discovered further evidence that Japanese military equipment is being concealed in spite of repeated demands that it be reported."

Col. Kenwood Ross, Springfield, Mo., said he discovered several huge concrete pillboxes along the coast which had not been reported. Ross, 24th division ordnance chief, said the gun emplacements were concealed within artificial houses.

Stores of war material were located in hidden recesses in a warehouse, mixed with office supplies Quantities of rifles, knee mortars and other material were found in a schoolhouse at Niihama.

Sixth army headquarters said recently a 24th division guard had shot and fatally wounded a Japanese in halting 1,000 civilian men and women storming a bivouac area as American troops evacuated a campsite near Matsuyama.

The crowd, gathered to scrounge for scraps, failed to observe warning signs or several shots fired into the ground The wounded man, shot in the leg, fled and bled to death before medical aid could be given.

Division officials said Japanese civilians repeatedly had been warned against entering military areas and that Yanks "will continue to protect American lives and property."

Woman Outwits Robber; Feigns a Heart Attack

CHICAGO. — Miss Vera James, 5235 Greenwood avenue recently outwitted a Negro who tried to rob her after forcing his way into her automobile at 4915 Drexel boulevard. Threatening her with a knife, he demanded her money. She handed him only seven cents and he ordered her to drive on with him in the car. A short distance farther on she began gasping for air and told him she had suffered a heart attack. The Negro fled when she stopped the car Miss James is owner of a baby scale rental service and had made a delivery to the Drexel boulevard address.

Solitaire Addict Counts His 'Winnings' $146,649

COVINGTON, KY.—If C. L. Abbott of Covington fails of being the world champion solitaire player, at least there's little doubt he is the most persistent.

Abbott recently wrote the Kentucky Post that he had completed his 100,000th game and that he had won, on the average, about one out of every 36. Sixty-five decks of cards were worn out in the process, said Abbott, who added that had he been playing for money, he would have won $146,649.

Abbott told the Post that he had spent the equivalent of about 225 days on the game.

50,000 Death Toll in Traffic Is Seen in 1950

CHICAGO —A safety lighting executive predicted a yearly traffic toll of 50,000 deaths and 1,750,000 injuries by 1950 unless causes of accidents are removed.

A. F. Dickerson, chairman of a street lighting committee, said, "It has been estimated that by 1950, vehicle miles traveled will be increased from 50 to 100 per cent over those of 1941."

Dickerson said that installation of safety lighting at dangerous intersections would reduce the number of night accidents.

Vet of Many Campaigns Weds His Foster Sister

PITTSBURGH — Pretty Martha McGinty, 17, married to Raymond McGinty, 30-year-old veteran of Africa and Italy campaigns, foresaw nothing but marital peace—her "in-laws" are her foster parents.

The bridegroom is the bride's foster brother. He didn't know she loved him until she wrote him so while he was a lieutenant with the 34th division overseas.

The marriage license bureau refused them a license until three judges certified that there was no blood relationship.

Jap Children Given Military Training

WITH THE 6TH ARMY, SHIKOKU. — Reports that Japanese school children still are receiving military training have been confirmed by reconnaissance patrols of the 24th division. Large stores of wooden training rifles sabers, spears and bayonets were found in obscure corners of elementary school buildings.

French Survival Tied to U. S. Help

Serious Domestic Disorders Feared This Winter.

PARIS. — France will face the problem of quelling serious domestic disorders this winter if the United States does not step up food shipments substantially and shortly, Robert Tanguy-Prigent, dynamic 36-year-old socialist minister of food and agriculture, asserted.

M. Tanguy-Prigent said that bread would be rationed again unless increased shipments of wheat from the United States and Canada arrive in the near future. He warned that reintroduction of bread rationing would deal a serious blow to French morale, already low from six years of undernourishment.

He described the meat situation as equally bad and added that there was no prospect of any real relaxation of food rationing in France for at least another two years.

"This winter will be terrible if the United States doesn't make a huge effort to help us," he said. "To a great exttnt the secret of our economic recovery and very survival lies in American hands today."

M. Tanguy-Prigent, a short dark Breton, who, despite his youth, is regarded as one of the most able men in the de Gaulle cabinet, gave a factual review of the food situation. During Nazi occupation he was active in organizing resistance of Breton farmers.

"We did away with bread rationing because the United States and Canada promised to send us 25.6 million quintals of wheat," he said. "So far we have only received 250 thousand dollars. Argentina, which promised to send us 5 million quintals, has suddenly backed out entirely."

Potatoes will continue to be severely rationed and almost unobtainable, he said. He said the potato crop was the worst in decades.

Mr. Tanguy-Prigent said French agriculture suffered from a scarcity of fertilizer, labor, machinery and gasoline, while some land is still full of German mines which it may take years to remove.

British Railroads Hit Many Times by Bombs

NEW YORK.—The story of the bomb punishment British railroads took was told here recently by Sir William Stanier, F.R.S., of the London, Midland and Scottish Railway company. The railroad suffered nearly 14,000 bombing incidents, he said. When war broke out ultra high-speed trains were withdrawn and timetables were recast, with maximum speeds at 60 miles an hour, but with permission to run up to 75 miles an hour to make up time.

He said the American Transportation corps played "a magnificent part" in working side by side with British railroadmen handling vast stores of war supplies. Over 400 United States-built locomotives also rendered invaluable service, he said. Sir Stanier was guest of honor at the National Newcomen luncheon in the Hotel Pierre.

Versatile P-38 Fights At Night; Takes Photos

BURBANK, CALIF.—Two secret variations of the P-38 fighter plane —one of the world's fastest night fighters and a 425-mile-an-hour photo reconnaissance plane—were in combat during the last weeks of the Pacific war, the army air forces disclosed.

The all-black night Lightning, designated the P-38M, combines a speed in excess of 425 miles per hour with a radar-sighted battery of four .50-caliber machine guns and a .20-mm. cannon in the nose. Under-wing rockets equal the salvo of 10 five-inch naval guns. A radar operator's cockpit is situated directly behind the pilot.

NEW YORK. — All right, folks, get your dimes out and watch the fun.

General Electric, after a year of trying, has perfected an electronic hot dog machine—and it works.

You just walk up and plop in your coin. Out bounces a hot dog, roll and all. The "dog" is cooked from the inside out, and the roll is just as crisp as a bright December morning.

But you gotta bring your own mustard.

The machine, which looks something like a domesticated juke box, is expected to go into full production almost immediately.

Conversion of Liberty Ships Halted by Board

MANILA. — Conversion of Liberty ships to carry troops home has been halted as "the results were poor" and the men suffered hardships, B. Frank Young, war shipping administration official, has announced.

Only 30 ships were converted. Men aboard some failed to get hot food for five days in rough weather, Young said. Life rafts also presented a problem.

Ships Are Warned of Jap Mines in Pacific

PEARL HARBOR, HAWAII.—All ships in the Pacific have been warned against the danger of floating mines which the Japs dumped into the sea by thousands during the last days of the war, the navy said.

In time the mines will spring leaks and disappear but may remain a menace for months.

Navy Moves to Assist Housing

Releases Supply of Surplus Material and 5,000 Quonset Huts.

WASHINGTON.—To provide some relief for the housing shortage the navy has declared surplus 56 million dollars worth of building material and 5,000 Quonset huts located at four depots in the United States, the Associated Press reports.

If used as barracks, the huts could house 70,000 persons, or they could be converted to two family dwellings. Many have never been erected.

The building material includes nails, pipe, plumbing and electrical supplies. In addition, nearly 55 million board feet of lumber has been declared as surplus at naval establishment in the United States.

Location of Material.

The surplus announced is located as follows:

At Port Hueneme, Calif., 18 million dollars in building materials and 1,248 Quonset huts; at Tacoma, Wash., 12 million dollars in building materials and 1,540 Quonset huts; at Davisville, R. I., 16 million dollars in building materials and 2,012 Quonset huts and at Gulfport, Miss., 10 million dollars in building materials and 200 Quonset huts.

The navy said the Port Hueneme depot had been selected by the Reconstruction Finance corporation, the disposal agency for building materials, as the first station in the United States at which spot cleanup sales of all types of surplus building materials would be made. Disposal teams from the RFC, working with naval personnel, will make the actual sales. Procedure developed will be used as a pattern for the national program to be used in other army and navy depots which stock building materials in large quantities.

Handling of Huts.

Disposal of Quonset huts also will be made through the RFC. Government agencies, including the veterans administration, will have top priority on the used barrack type dwellings. The huts each measure 20 by 48 feet. The majority are of the tropical type, with roof ventilation and one end screened. They may, however, be converted for use in cold climates.

The Producers' Council, Inc., an organization of building material manufacturers, reported that materials shortages will not permit the construction of more than 425,000 privately built dwellings in 1946 unless the government encourages production. Its statement listed the scarce materials as "millwork, enameled plumbing fixtures, heating equipment and possibly cast iron soil pipe."

"Production of these items is being held down by pricing or manpower problems or raw material shortages," the report said.

Partially Paralyzed Man Drives Car 90,000 Miles

HARRIMAN, TENN.—Justice of the Peace Chester Hamby of Harriman has driven his car 90,000 miles although he is paralyzed from the hips down.

Hamby, a former state highway patrolman, had his back broken when his motorcycle collided with an automobile in 1939. Since then, he has not had the use of either leg.

Hamby installed a finger control air brake with booster tank and a hand control gas throttle attached to the steering post. The gadget can be used on any car by attaching a booster to the clutch, Hamby says.

Hamby passed the state automobile drivers' examination.

Suez Canal Blocked for 76 Days During the War

PARIS. — The Suez canal was blocked for 76 days in the war, stockholders of the waterway learned.

A report said two sunken hulks still narrow the canal channel. They are the last of 26 ships sunk in the canal in 64 German air attacks.

Directors said canal traffic had fallen to such an extent in 1940, 1941 and 1942 that the company could pay no interest or amortization on capital for those three years.

Bread Rationing Seen For Britain This Winter

LONDON.—Rationing of bread in Britain this winter was predicted by Ellen Wilkinson, minister of education, unless the nation's paralyzing dock strike ends quickly.

In a speech at Jarrow-on-Tyne she said rationing would be necessary "unless the grain ships can be turned around quickly enough to get to Canada and away again before the St. Lawrence freezes."

Develop Faster Malaria Cure

'Wonder Drug' Is Found by Scientists; It Proves Quicker, Easier.

WASHINGTON. — American scientists reported here development of a new synthetic drug called superior to atabrine or quinine for malaria, and existence in an early experimental stage of another new drug which is offering definite promise of being an actual cure for the relapsing type of malaria.

The board for the co-ordination of malarial studies made the announcement here through the Associated Press. It was disclosed that both drugs were developed through the co-operation of several hundred prison inmates and conscientious objectors who volunteered as "human guinea pigs."

The board listed the Illinois state penitentiary at Stateville as one of six institutions in which inmates allowed themselves to be infected with malaria and treated with untried drugs.

Used in 5,000 Cases.

The board said that the first of the new synthetic drugs has been termed SN-7618 and has been used successfully in 5,000 human cases of malaria, including more than 1,000 in military service.

This drug, the board said, relieves acute attacks of malaria three times faster than atabrine or quinine. It can be taken in weekly instead of daily doses and doesn't make the patient sick in the stomach as the other two drugs sometimes do, it was said. In addition, it doesn't stain the skin as does atabrine and doesn't cause buzzing in the ears as does quinine.

Like atabrine or quinine, SN-7618 actually can cure the form of malaria called "falciparum malaria," the board reported. This type often is fatal, but is nonrelapsing. Whereas the older drugs require four to six days to effect a cure, SN-7618 can do the job in about two days, it was said.

The board said SN-7618 can suppress and relieve acute attacks of the more common type of malaria called "vivax," which is not fatal in adults but causes frequent relapses, sometimes as many as 20 in three years. The new drug cannot cure "vivax," but gives relief more quickly than atabrine or quinine.

Cures Without Poisoning.

The second new drug described by the board is designed to cure "vivax," but the board members emphasized that it is still in an early experimental stage and did not identify the drug specifically. They said it is a chemical cousin of plasmochin, a drug known to have curative value against the disease, but unusable because it is poisonous in dosages required to effect a cure.

They said the new drug "appears to be definitely superior to plasmochin in that it effects cure without producing significant toxic (poisonous) symptoms."

The board said 100 persons suffering from "vivax" malaria were given the new drug more than three months ago and the attacks were relieved.

Neither drug is available to the public yet. The latter of the two is still in an early experimental stage.

Both developments resulted from a 5 million dollar wartime research program in which 14 thousand compounds were tested seeking improved weapons against the malady which strikes up to 300 million persons throughout the world annually.

The first drug has been employed successfully in 5,000 human cases of malaria, including more than 1,000 in the armed forces, the scientists said, but they would not recommend its release to civilians generally until still further trials are made.

Japanese Captives Study English at Their Camps

WASHINGTON.—Japanese prisoners of war at the Huntsville, Texas, camp are having an opportunity to study democracy, the war department has disclosed.

The program is in charge of Lt. Col. Boude C. Moore, former instructor in the school of military government at Charlottesville, Va., who lived in Japan for 17 years.

Details are being worked out largely by about 30 Japanese liberal captives "who engage in research evolving plans as to how American institutions and government would work in Japanese setting." The results will be printed and distributed among other prisoners, whose reactions will be noted.

Most of the prisoners will be returned to Japan, in the next six weeks and only a few hundred will be retained here for the experiment.

Arctic Air Defense Route Planned by Army Airmen

WASHINGTON. — The army air force already is at work on plans to protect this country from aerial attack via the "short-cut" route across the Arctic.

Plans are in the formative stage today for a new undertaking under which flights of B-29s will frequent the North Pole area to learn all possible of the weather, land, resources, ice formations, seas and sea currents there.

G.I.s in Japan to Buy 450,000 Yards of Silk

TOKYO. — The United States army has placed orders for 450,000 yards of white silk—for sale to G.I.s in Japan. A third of the supply will be sold by the yard; the remainder will be made into dressing gowns, mufflers, pajamas, ties and handkerchiefs. The average price of bolt silk: 33 cents a yard.

Food Chief of Hungary Fears Widespread Famine

BUDAPEST, HUNGARY.—Wholesale famine in Hungary this winter "seems unavoidable," Food Minister Karoly Baranyos said recently. Baranyos, member of the Small Holders party, said the chief medical officer in Budapest had presented "terrifying statistics, with mortality exceeding births over 50 per cent, and wholesale illnesses through malnutrition and starvation."

Use of New Ice Breaker On Great Lakes Approved

WASHINGTON. — The cost guard has agreed to leave the U.S.S. Aspen at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., this winter to serve as an ice-breaker, Representative Bradley (Rep., Mich.) said recently.

The U.S.S. Chaparral will be withdrawn, he said, but the coast guard has advised him it will furnish lighthouse tenders later to serve as ice-breakers if they are turned back by the navy.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Seek to Avert Mass Starvation In Europe; New Wage-Price Plan Seen as Spur to Production

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

WORLD RELIEF:
Need Great

In calling upon the American people to pull in their belts and get along on a smaller and less varied selection of meats, cheese, evaporated milk, ice cream, margarine, salad dressing and beverages, President Truman declared that the threat of starvation overseas was greater today than at any other time in history.

While Americans have been consuming about 3,300 calories per person, he said, more than 125 million people in Europe will have to subsist on less than 2,000 calories a day; 28 million will receive less than 1,500 calories a day, and large groups will get as little as 1,000 calories.

In shaping a nine-point program to enable this country to meet relief requirements overseas, the administration placed emphasis upon conservation of dwindling wheat supplies to assure fulfillment of export goals of 225 million bushels.

No less than 25 million bushels of wheat were expected to be saved during the first half of 1946 by raising the quantity of flour produced from a bushel of wheat to 80 per cent. As a result, more dark bread will be made. Another 20 million bushels of grain are to be conserved by discontinuing the use of wheat in the direct production of alcohol and beer and limiting the use of other grains for beverage alcohol to five days' consumption per month.

At the same time, the department of agriculture will seek to cut down on use of feed grains by encouraging the speeding of marketing of hogs and beef cattle and culling of poultry.

The other provisions of the administration's nine-point program include the acceleration of rail shipments of wheat, corn, meat and other foods; exportation of 375,000 tons of fats and oils, 1,600,000,000 pounds of meat, and increased supplies of canned milk and cheese; establishment of wheat and flour inventory controls on millers, bakers and distributors; and efforts to move more copra for cocoanut oil from the Philippines.

WAR CRIMINAL:
No Reprieve

Having been convicted by an American military commission for countenancing atrocities in the Philippines, Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita's life rested in the hands of President Truman after the Supreme court had validated his trial and Gen. Douglas MacArthur refused to mitigate the sentence.

General Yamashita

As the President considered clemency there was resentment in Japanese circles over MacArthur's orders that Yamashita be stripped of his uniform, decorations and other army accessories in being hanged. Declaring that Yamashita was an adherent of the ancient Samurai warrior tradition, Nipponese generals said he was entitled to a soldier's rather than a common criminal's death.

In ordering Yamashita's hanging in disgrace, MacArthur asserted that the Jap had dishonored the military profession by countenancing troop rapacities instead of insisting upon their protection of the weak, whether friend or foe. Scoring the Japanese sack of Manila, MacArthur compared the destruction with American respect for the city in 1942 despite its impending loss.

CONGRESS:
Labor Curb

Despite quick house action in passing the drastic Case bill with its restrictive labor legislation, the senate was expected to proceed more slowly in considering the measure.

Holding their lines solidly throughout the week-long debate on the bill, a coalition of Republicans and conservative Democrats beat down all efforts to take the teeth out of the legislation by modifying provisions or eliminating all enabling clauses to reduce the measure to a mere declaration of policy.

While liberals assailed the bill as one of the most vicious anti-strike laws to come before congress, proponents clung fast to provisions setting up a mediation board to consider disputes; requiring 30-day cooling off periods before strikes; making both management and labor liable for contract violations; outlawing violence and intimidation, and banning sympathy walkouts or boycotts.

WAGE-PRICE:
New Policy

Culmination of a long and strenuous tug-of-war between government and industry, and between administration officials themselves, a new wage-price formula loomed with the expectation that it would pave the way for labor peace and start up full-scale production.

Pushed by Reconversion Director Snyder, and at first vigorously opposed by OPAdministrator Bowles, the new program reportedly called for general wage increases approximating 17 per cent and corresponding price boosts to permit industry to absorb the added expense. Though admitting that a rise in living costs would result from the policy, administration leaders declared that the volume output following resumption of work would bring prices to normal, reasonable levels.

In developing the new formula, President Truman affirmed his belief in a previous plan he had proposed under which prices would have been raised only if industry had proven its inability to absorb wage increases. While the plan would have worked with full production, he said, obstructions to large-scale output necessitated a revision of policy.

UNO:
Save Face

At odds in the United Nations organization over the question of the presence of British troops in Greece, Russia and Britain patched up their differences with acceptance of a face-saving formula under which the security council dropped consideration of the issue without a formal pronouncement.

By dropping the question without further ado, UNO avoided the possibility of impairing the prestige of Russia by refuting its charges that the presence of Tommies in Greece threatened the peace of the world or of offending Britain by acknowledging the Red accusations.

Russia's charges that the Tommies' alleged protection of rightist interests in Greece against leftist elements would have international repercussions followed close upon what it believed were British inspired Iranian complaints against Red interference with orderly government in that country. Occupying a strategic position along the British life-line in the eastern Mediterranean, Greece, along with oil-rich Iran, ranks as a key spot in the Near East.

Debate Site

While residents of the Stamford-Greenwich, Conn., area recommended to UNO as a site for permanent headquarters, protested against the selection, a strong movement against approving the locality developed within UNO itself.

In leading opposition against the Stamford-Greenwich site, Australian Delegate W. R. Hodgson declared that purchase of the land for $20,000,000 was too costly, residents did not welcome UNO and no central facilities for interim operations were available in New York.

Despite proposals for purchasing the area recommended for from $600 to $800 per acre, residents of both Greenwich and Stamford voted against the inclusion of town areas in the site.

HONEY OUTPUT:
Up

Totaling 233,070,000 pounds, honey production in 1945 topped 1944 output by 23 per cent and was 19 per cent above the 1939-44 average.

While boosting production, beekeepers also enjoyed higher prices resulting from the sugar shortage, an increase in the packing of one-pound and five-pound containers to take advantage of higher ceilings, and a rise in retail sales.

Liquor Revenue Up

Federal revenue of 2.4 billion dollars—an all-time high—were collected for the government in 1945 by the alcoholic beverage industry, an analysis of Bureau of Internal Revenue data shows.

Comprising federal receipts from high wartime excise taxes and from occupational and other special taxes, the figure represents an advance of approximately 14 per cent over the previous peak figure.

FULL EMPLOYMENT:
Water Bill

With Democrats and Republicans alike expressing agreement, the house passed a diluted version of an administration-backed "full employment" bill that would have committed the government to providing jobless work at prevailing wages.

As finally framed by a house-senate conference committee and pushed through congress, the new bill sets up a council of three economic advisers delegated to prepare annual reports on levels of employment, production and purchasing power and draw up a program for correcting maladjustments. A congressional committee of seven will then act upon the recommendations.

In typical comment on the measure, Rep. Manasco (Dem., Ala.) declared that it was high time congress announced an unwillingness to continue deficit spending except in extreme emergencies, and Rep. Judd (Rep., Minn.) said the bill could do no harm and may do good.

LABOR:
Bloody Outbreak

Murder charges were filed against four armed guards of the Toledo, Peoria and Western railroad following an altercation between employees of the company and pickets near a siding at Gridley, Ill., in which two strikers were killed and three others wounded.

Climaxing the T.P.W.'s tempestuous labor relations with the railroad brotherhoods, the bloody affray developed after the company had run its first train over its eastern division since the union walkout last October. At that time, the government had returned the T P.W. to its owners following its wartime operation of the strategic 239 mile line after taking over the property in 1942. Seizure resulted from T.P.W. President G. P. McNear's refusal to arbitrate a dispute.

Having followed the train along a paralleling highway, about 25 pickets parked their cars close to a siding in Gridley and moved toward a nearby switch which the four armed guards approached to "throw." As the guards and pickets neared each other, shots were fired and the strikers fell. Though it was admitted that the pickets carried rocks, police sought to determine whether any had been armed.

NEAR EAST:
Russ Claims

Repeated communist demands for the return of Turkish-held Armenian lands to Russia focused increasing attention on the Near East.

Latest communist appeal for the return of Turkish provinces of Kars and Ardagan to Russia was made by Grigori Arutinov, secretary of the Communist party of Soviet Armenia. In an election speech at Yerevan, played up in Moscow, Arutinov declared that the Armenian people raised the question of regaining the territory ceded to Turkey in 1921 in a border dispute.

In the face of growing Russian pressure for the readjustment of Turkey's mountainous eastern border, and other demands for a strip of Turkey's northern Black sea coast, Istanbul has stood fast against territorial revisions. With the central government announcing its intentions to fight for every inch of ground, nationalists sentiment in the threatened provinces has been fanned to a patriotic pitch.

WORLD COURT:
Name American

Top legal body of the United Nations Organization, the new International Court of Justice will include one American among its 15 members, Green H. Hackworth of Chevy Chase, Md., being elected to the tribunal.

In supplanting the old world court the new tribunal ranks as the principal organ of UNO for resolving judicial disputes between nations. In addition, the court can be called upon to furnish legal advice to accredited UNO agencies.

A legal adviser to the state department since 1925, Hackworth has participated in many international conferences. Accompanying Secretary of State Hull to Moscow in 1943, he subsequently attended the Dumbarton Oaks and San Francisco conferences. With the U. S. delegation at the London sessions of UNO, Hackworth also is chairman of the United Nations committee of jurists. As a justice on the new court, he will draw $20,200 annually.

FARM LAND:
Sales Drop

A continued rise in farm land values and a moderate decline in the volume of sales were leading developments in the farm real estate market during the year 1944-45, the agriculture department said.

For the United States as a whole, land values during World War II (1939-45) increased 50 per cent as compared with a 25 per cent increase during World War I (1914-18).

Social Security Need Of Low-Income Farmers

Amazingly Small Cash Marketings of Large Group Leaves Little to Be Put Aside; State Units Carry Relief Burdens.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

(This is the first of two articles on "Social Security for the Farmers.")

When the navy announced its plan for the biggest postwar boom in history — its intention to blow a 97-ship fleet skyhigh with the atom bomb—I couldn't help recalling the answer which a little girl gave to a reporter before the war ended. He asked her: "What do you want to be when you grow up?" The youngster replied, "Alive."

In this atomic era, it's pleasant to note, then, that there are at least two groups of people in this country who not only assume that most of us will stay alive for a reasonable period, but who are making plans based on that assumption.

One group comprises the radar experts who earnestly promise we'll be rocketing to the moon and back by 1996—stopping to refuel along the lunar skyway at filler-up stations suspended in space and perhaps plucking moonflowers in a hanging garden.

The second group is the National Planning association — specifically its agriculture committee—which expects the farmer not only to grow up, but to live at least to the age of 65, at which time he will want to retire. Making that retirement possible is the subject of a new NPA bulletin by Murray R. Benedict, professor of agricultural economics at the University of California.

Why is the farmer so favored? Is he the only worker who wants to retire and live out his old age in reasonable financial security? What about the tired-out typist? Isn't the weary welder worthy?

Be that as it may, Mr. Benedict's retirement plan is based solely on bringing the farmer into the federal social security system. Most industrial and white collar workers like typists, welders and butchers, are already covered by social security. When the time comes for them to quit work for good, they can count on a small, but regular monthly income from social security benefits.

Not so the farmer. When he can work no longer, he has to live off what he's saved or by selling the south forty—and if he hasn't saved anything, that's his hard luck—or whoever has to take care of him.

Administration Proves Problem

The farmers were not included in the social security setup when it was inaugurated in 1935, because the lawmakers and administrators felt they couldn't cope with his peculiar problems at the time. For the same reason, they passed over the self-employed worker, the domestic employee, the government and railroad worker, the employee in non-profit organizations. Such workers posed too much of an administrative problem, the legislators felt, so they left them out, as far as social security was concerned.

Now, however, the system has been operating for more than 10 years, and it's high time, Mr. Benedict thinks, to ring farmers in on its benefits. He feels the other uninsured groups mentioned above should be included, too, but he concentrates on the case of the farmer.

The farmer, like everyone else, faces the grim prospect of dependency and want in old age. Like everyone else, he strives to guard against such contingency by working hard and trying to save money. But in 1939, more than half the farm owners of the country marketed less than $75 worth of products from their land. Deduct from that the products the farmer's wife used at the table, the farm equipment he has to buy, shoes for the children, and an occasional Saturday night trip to the big city—and it's plain there is going to be precious little money left to stow away under the mattress or in the sock.

Hired farm workers fare no better in this matter of saving money than does the man who owns the farm, The hired man may earn $27.30 a month if he eats "in." If he boards out, his monthly wage may be $35 32—when he works. It's quite possible he's a seasonal worker—shifting from job to job as crops mature and orchards blossom, which means his annual income is far from fixed or steady.

So the farmer and the hired farm worker, no matter how hard they work, may find it impossible to save money toward the time when they can no longer wield the scythe and hay fork. Nor is the farmer able, in many cases, to put by a little money to provide for his wife and family, should he die prematurely or be disabled.

Consequently there are more and more aged persons in rural areas who have to be cared for by county and state on a charity basis—a procedure which is not only expensive but unfair, since it treats thrifty and thriftless exactly alike. The charity or "old age assistance" as it's called, lumps together the persons who strove to take care of themselves during their working years but failed, with those who squandered their earnings.

Mr. Benedict guesses there'd be fewer such charity cases and fewer farmers haunted by the spectre of becoming such charity cases were workers in agriculture allowed to participate in the social security system. As everyone knows, the system is really a huge mutual insurance company. Each person makes a regular compulsory payment which is geared to his ability to pay.

Evolve Plan For Payments

If the farmers were covered by social security (and Mr. Benedict isn't the only one who thinks they should be, most of the important farm organizations have okayed the idea; both presidential candidates in the last election endorsed it, and the social security board on January 28 once again importuned congress to include farmers in), it would work something like this:

Farmer Jake Duncan adds up his year's sale of farm products and finds he has marketed less than $75 worth. That's his gross cash income. Under Mr. Benedict's plan, Jake would be brought into the social security system as a self-employed worker on an assumed net income of $400 a year.

Now Jake is "self-employed"—and at the present time there is no provision in the social security act for insuring the self - employed, either in agriculture or in private business. The way it works now, the employed worker who IS covered pays into the trust fund 1 per cent of his wages; his employer contributes 1 per cent in his behalf.

Since Jake has no employer, Mr. Benedict suggests that Jake contribute both the employer and employee share, in other words, 2 per cent of his net income.

And his net income, as stated earlier, is $400. So Jake would pay $8 a year. If he makes these payments continuously for 30 years, he will have paid into the social security fund $240. At retirement, he would be entitled to approximately $13 a month. Not a munificent sum by any means, but perhaps just the little bit extra which, added to whatever other assets he has, may keep him from going to the poorhouse in later years. And his social security contributions pay off rapidly. In a little more than two years after he has retired, Jake will have received back every cent he paid in, plus interest. Not only that but during the 30 years he will have had the protection of survivorship insurance. That is, if he should die prematurely, his widow would not be left completely penniless. She would get three-fourths of the monthly sum to which he was entitled at the time he died.

Suppose Jake finds it hard to scrape together eight dollars at one specific time? In that case he might use a stamp book. A book perhaps similar to war stamp books. Jake's social security stamp book would probably be issued by the post office or by the social security board. Whenever he had a little extra money, he could buy stamps to paste in it. When the time came for him to make his annual eight dollar payment, he would turn in the stamp book plus whatever cash was needed to make up the balance.

Jake would have a social security account number and he'd have to report his yearly earnings but the report would be very simple.. All he'd have to do would be to state how much gross cash income he received for the year, sign his name, and that's all there'd be to it.

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

AMERICA'S OIL TWINS

WASHINGTON. — Many senators believe that the confirmation row over charming Ed Pauley as under secretary of the navy has taken on new significance now that Sec. Harold Ickes has offered Ralph Davies the job of under secretary of the interior.

It happens that Davies and Ed Pauley are bosom friends. Both are oil men. Both have followed the policy of "scratch - my - back - I'll - scratch-yours." This is important.

Recently, Secretary Ickes, who has a crusading record for guarding the nation's resources, recommended to President Truman that naval oil reserves be transferred from the navy to the interior department. It was just such a transfer by Albert K. Fall in the Harding administration that resulted in the teapot dome oil scandal.

No motive is attributed to the Ickes proposal except that of safeguarding oil. In fact, some people consider it significant that his proposal happened to coincide, by luck or otherwise, with the nomination of Oil Man Pauley to be under secretary of the navy.

But what senators consider important is that, with Pauley's friend Ralph Davies offered the job of under secretary of the interior, the navy's oil lands, no matter where they are located — in interior or navy—will be partially under Pauley or a friend of his.

MEXICAN OIL DEAL

Relationship between Davies and Pauley has been extremely close. Davies was executive vice president of Standard Oil of California. Pauley sold him his own independent oil company. Later Pauley brought Davies to Washington, introduced him to Ickes, following which Davies became Ickes' deputy oil administrator. He did a good job.

However, state department officials say he continued to look out for Ed Pauley.

When Pauley was trying to lobby his high-octane Mexican gasoline plant through the government, it had to pass the hurdle of Secretary Ickes' petroleum administration. Davies okayed it — not only okayed it, but pushed it vigorously. At first Ickes also gave it his blessing. The state department, however, was vigorously opposed.

Showdown came in a secret session between Ickes, Davies, a Davies aid, and the Assistant Secretary of State Dean Acheson. The full story of this session was never really told at the senate hearing. Acheson opened by giving Ickes a very careful diagnosis of why the Mexican high-octane gasoline plant should not be built by Pauley. He took up point after point, his main argument being that the Mexican government would have to pay such a high price to Pauley that it would sour U. S.-Mexican relations.

After Acheson had finished, Ickes turned to Pauley's friend, Ralph Davies, and asked:

"Why didn't you tell me these things?"

"I didn't know them either," replied the red-faced Davies. Then, turning to his aid, he alibied: "Why didn't you tell me these things?"

Ickes immediately reversed himself, threw his weight against Pauley. That is the real inside of how the Pauley octane plant for Mexico was stopped. Davies, of course, is an able, intelligent operator, too intelligent not to have known the main points of the Pauley plan. Pauley is equally able. He would be a good executive almost anywhere. But some senators want to think twice before putting these oil twins near the head of two departments controlling the oil reserves of the nation.

PRESIDENTIAL HUMOR

President Truman has been taking recent criticism in excellent humor The other day he was talking with a group of friends and said:

"Apparently, no matter what I do I'm always in the middle. I say something about Palestine, and the Jews and the Arabs holler. Labor and capital get in a fight, and I am in the middle. The Russians and the British have an argument, and I am in the middle."

Suddenly the President paused, walked over to the door of his office, which connects with that of his secretary, Matthew Connelly, and called out:

"Hey, Matt, where can I buy a copy of Dale Carnegie's 'How to Win Friends and Influence People'?"

Many of you have eaten and enjoyed Fish Chowder, but have you ever tried it in pie form with a crusty topping? Any type of fish fillets may be used in the following recipe: You'll like the seasonings, too.

Fish Chowder Pie.
(Serves 9)

1½ pounds fish fillets
1 cup cooked, diced carrots
2 hard-cooked eggs
¼ cup fat
2 tablespoons chopped, green pepper
1 cup chopped onion
¼ cup flour
1 cup milk
2 tablespoons lemon juice
½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 recipe pastry

Poach or simmer fish for about 20 minutes in 1 quart boiling water to which 2 slices of onion, 2½ teaspoons peppercorns, 1 bay leaf and 1 teaspoon salt have been added. Drain fish and flake coarsely. Save liquid.

Arrange fish, carrots and sliced eggs in a greased casserole. Heat fat, add green pepper, onion and cook slowly over low heat for about 10 minutes. Blend in flour, add milk and 1 cup liquid left from fish. Cook slowly until thickened, stirring constantly. Add lemon juice, Worcestershire sauce and seasonings. Pour over ingredients in casserole. Top with pastry and bake in a hot oven (450 degrees) about 30 minutes or until crust is lightly browned.

Note: 1 pound of cooked or canned fish may also be used in the above recipe.

There's nothing new about stuffed peppers, but if the filling is nutritious and delectable shrimp, then there's definitely something new in this dish. Here's the way it's done:

Shrimp-Stuffed Peppers.
(Serves 6)

7 ounces canned shrimp
¼ cup diced celery
¼ cup chopped onion
½ cup sliced carrot rings
½ cup mayonnaise
¼ cup chili sauce
3 tablespoons lemon juice
Scallions, radishes and potato chips

Reserve six shrimps for garnish. Chop remaining shrimp and combine with celery, onion and carrots. Mix together mayonnaise, chili sauce and lemon juice. Combine with shrimp mixture. Use to fill pepper shells. Garnish each with a whole shrimp. To serve arrange stuffed peppers on a platter with scallions and radishes. Pile potato chips in center of platter.

Another stuffing which is certain to find favor is this one:

Shrimp and Cabbage Stuffing.

Combine 7 ounces of shrimp with ½ cup chopped cucumber, ¼ cup diced tomato and ½ teaspoon salt. Blend 6 tablespoons mayonnaise with 3 tablespoons grapefruit juice; add to shrimp mixture and toss lightly. Use to stuff peppers or tomatoes.

Veterans' SERVICE BUREAU

EDITOR'S NOTE: This newspaper, through special arrangement with the Washington Bureau of Western Newspaper Union at 1616 Eye Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., is able to bring readers this weekly column on problems of the veteran and serviceman and his family. Questions may be addressed to the above Bureau and they will be answered in a subsequent column. No replies can be made direct by mail, but only in the column which will appear in this newspaper regularly.

Guard Against Rackets

Veterans' administration officials are urging discharged veterans to "stop, look and listen" before they engage in business. There are scores of rackets being worked against veterans who get out of the army or navy with cash in their pockets and with the privilege of borrowing money under the G.I. bill for purchase of a farm, a home or a business.

"We won't tell the veteran what to do," says N. D. Hathaway, director of contact service for VA, "but we will advise him to the best of our ability.

"The best advice we can give him is, 'Use your head. Don't rush into an investment. Seek good advice. Investigate until you are satisfied yourself. It is better to be sure than sorry.' "

In the meantime the veterans' contact service refers veterans to banks, or to the Better Business bureau in the city or town where he plans to invest his money. They give him the address of the legal aid bureau where legal assistance is free to veterans, if they cannot afford to hire a lawyer. Contact advice always urges veterans to convert their national service life insurance. The VA does not tell the veteran where to invest or in what to invest his money. There are too many variable factors, so their only counsel is extreme caution.

Questions and Answers

Q. My brother is 21 and has been in the merchant marine since December 4, 1944. When can he quit the merchant marines and not be drafted in the army?—Reader, Elkmont, Ala.

A. Your brother has been deferred from the draft by reason of his service in the merchant marine and he will be eligible to be drafted until he is 26 unless he (1) has been in the merchant marines for not less than 32 months on or after May 1, 1940; (2) at least 75 per cent of his time has been in active service; and (3) he has applied for and received from the War Shipping administration a certificate certifying he has completed his wartime service and is eligible to be relieved from further consideration as a draftee under the selective service system.

Q. I am the widow of a World War I veteran and haven't been receiving a dime of pension since his death, seven years ago. I've tried getting a pension at that time, but was told that we, in Wisconsin, did not get any. Is this true? If I am entitled to a pension what must I do to get it?—S. W., Ellsworth, Wis.

A. If you are the legal widow of a veteran of World War I, you are entitled to a pension wherever you live. Take your husband's record, his discharge papers and all available information you have and file a claim with the nearest office of the Veterans' administration. Your local Red Cross chapter could help you file this claim.

Q. I would like to know if a boy is eligible for draft deferment who is the main tractor and truck man on a hundred-acre farm?—J. N., Fairhope, Pa.

A. That would be a question to be determined by the local selective service board. If the board determined that the boy was essential in raising food for the community or for the armed services, he could be given an agricultural deferment, as being of greater use on the farm than in the armed services.

Q. My husband enlisted in the Seabees and our son was born two months after he went overseas. I did not receive any allotment on our son until he was six months old. My husband is home and has his discharge now. Is there any way I could get the allotment now? —Wife, Glenwood Springs, Colo.

A. The navy says the most common reason for failure to receive allotments is that the serviceman failed to apply for an allotment when he became eligible for one. Yes, allotments are retroactive and may be obtained after discharge. Suggest you write to the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts, Allotment Division, Navy Department, Cleveland, Ohio.

Q. Is it true that a serviceman can take a trip around the world or across the ocean free and only pay half-fare for his family?—M. B., Superior, Wis.

A. The war department has no knowledge of any such plan.

Q. My brother was discharged from the army November 9, 1943. Will he be eligible for pensions or anything under the G.I. Bill of Rights?—Worried sister, Guntersville, Ala.

A. Yes, if he received an honorable discharge he is eligible for all benefits under the G.I. bill.

Kathleen Norris Says:

To Work or Not to Work

Bell Syndicate.—WNU Features.

"Cozy meals, over which you fuss, plan with him and Patsy for picnics and amusements, intimate talks about him, will do much to mitigate his dissatisfaction."

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

WHEN Billy Sears went to war, Patricia, his wife, went to work. Their daughter, Patsy, was 8 years old, there wasn't too much money, and the pay for women in canning plants was good.

Patricia didn't like work, and her letters to Billy were inclined to be a little grim. She got tired and dirty and she hated the long hours and the fatigue of it. She rented three of her rooms to a navy wife who paid part of her rent in care for Patsy; it wasn't an ideal arrangement, but it worked well enough.

But the pay was good, and Patricia was a good worker. She was promoted; she was raised. She was presently made a department superintendent on a salary of $60 a week. Then Bill came home. This is part of her letter:

"Through the hardest and the dullest days," writes Patricia, "I tried to send Bill cheerful letters. I didn't always like what he said in reply. He said more than once that he was glad I was working, it would keep me out of mischief and not give me any chance to waste money. Well, I wasn't ever in any danger of getting into mischief, and as for money — I make more now than Bill does. I like my work; I like my business associates. He never especially liked his job as salesman in a wholesale mattress company, and I don't think he likes my success—for in a modest way it is success.

"I want him to hold his job, and for me to hold mine with someone coming in in the afternoons to keep an eye on Patsy until we get home. It means we can save money, which we never have done. It means that I don't sink into the drudgery of dishes and dusting, but have something to say at the dinner table.

"It does, of course mean more careful managing and ordering; I have to spend every moment I have at home meeting the various demands of kitchen, bedrooms, laundry, Patsy's clothes, her school work. I like to do it, I'm strong and well; I've got everything organized. Beds aired at seven and breakfast started, beds and dishes finished, my bath and dressing for the day, Patsy and her lunch, off for school —it works like a charm. Or it would, if Bill would co-operate.

"But he simply and flatly won't," the letter finishes, "and the result is a very strained atmosphere in the house and an ugly feeling growing between us. He says he likes to come home and find his wife dainty and rested, waiting for him with his child and his tempting dinner, and I say that's sentimental nonsense. I say that we have to get ahead, and that I'm as capable of succeeding in business as any man; I have a real commercial value and mean to cash in on it. Sometimes I am a little later than he in getting home, sometimes I need the car for a short business trip — never overnight. So what? Has he any real right to make scenes about it, and threaten to divorce me? I very much want your opinion."

Patricia, my opinion is that you are right and Bill is wrong. I'm almost sorry to say so. I know so well the value of those domestic ideals that Bill has brought home from lonely years in the service.

"Better keep your job. . . ."

THAT EXTRA INCOME

During the war Patricia, like so many other wives of servicemen, got a job. It was in a canning plant. Patricia didn't like it at first, but she buckled down and eventually became a superintendent at $60 a week.

Now her husband, Billy, has returned. He has gone back to his work as a salesman, an occupation he does not particularly like. He doesn't earn as much as his wife, at present. Patricia has continued working. She has come to enjoy the freedom from domestic drudgery, for she can hire some help. The luxuries her added income brings, and the bank account that is piling up, all seem to Patricia valid reasons for her to keep on her job. They have one little girl, who is now in school. It is possible for Patricia to hire someone to look after the child from the time school is out until one parent comes home.

Billy doesn't like this arrangement at all. He wants his wife to stay home, to do the household chores, to care for their little daughter. Especially he wants his wife to look and act feminine when he comes home. The situation is getting tense, and a threat of divorce in the offing.

But times have changed, and we can't go back. You will never be satisfied with the lessened income, and the daily routine of pans and puddings and beds and school lunches again. You will never again be content to ask him for money and to do without personal luxuries. Nor is there any reason why you should. Marriage, by long custom, does mean dependence and household drudgery for women, but many an old custom has been split as many ways as the atom itself, and there is nothing essentially unwifely in mutual jobs and separate incomes.

I do advise you to strive, as good naturedly and affectionately as you can, to preserve what Bill loves in a home. I presume you have Saturday afternoons and Sundays, and you can do much in that free time to keep him happy. Cozy meals, over which you fuss enthusiastically, plan with him and Patsy for picnics and amusements, intimate talks about what you hope to do with your money, about your job, about him and everything that concerns him will do much to mitigate his dissatisfaction.

If the worst comes to the worst, suggest that he try living elsewhere for a while, try a club or boarding house, and see if he gets anything like the domestic comfort there that he has with you. Keep even-tempered, sympathetic, understanding. A part of this attitude of Bill's is, of course, inate jealousy — jealousy that he doesn't recognize himself. When his own disrupted business life builds up a little more, much of it will disappear. Wait for that time, and meanwhile keep as sweet and companionable as you can.

HOMEMADE POLISH

The simple mixture of two parts boiled linseed oil and one part turpentine makes an excellent polish for furniture. The oil "feeds" the wood, and the turpentine loosens dirt and helps the oil penetrate the wood. This polish removes the dull, foggy appearance that furniture often acquires, and helps conceal fine cracks or checks in the finish. Apply the mixture with a soft cloth. Then with a dry cloth rub off excess polish until the surface is entirely dry.

Chest of Drawers For Storage Space

A SIMPLE chest of drawers is useful in any room, but have you thought of grouping two or three chests to give a really dramatic effect? Try it in the living room, dining room, hall or bedroom and you will find that you have also solved the problem of what to do with extra linens, the belongings of overnight guests and many odds and ends.

The best part is that with a pattern that shows you a trick way to make drawers, these substantial little chests may be made at home from straight cuts of lumber, with no tools but a hammer, saw and screw driver. The pattern gives a list of materials required right down to the last screw and brad as well as the size of each piece of lumber and step-by-step directions, with diagrams.

NOTE—Order pattern 286 for this chest, and No. 287 for the Wooden Lamp Bases. The small chests are made from pattern No. 282. Each pattern is 15c postpaid and order should be addressed to:

Sugar Shortage Looms, Must Raise Sugar Beets

APPEAL MADE TO HANCOCK FARMERS

Asked By Government To Raise Sugar Beets

Hancock County farmers can render a real service to their country this year and probably make some extra money, by planting more sugar beets, said Alfred V. Josten, Chairman of the Hancock County AAA committee.

"The support price for sugar beets has been advanced $1.00 per ton over the 1945 price" he explained. "Sugar is a necessary food that must continue to be rationed in order that it may be distributed fairly among our people in the United States and to people in foreign countries, desperately in need of it in their daily diet. Our present ration content is five pounds to each person for four months."

"Only five counties in Iowa grow sugar beets," Mr. Josten said. "Hancock County is one of them, which gives farmers in this county a chance to answer an appeal from our government and take advantage of the support price on this crop."

"While total domestic supplies of sugar for 1945 were larger than that of 1944, the output was much smaller in Hawaii, the Philippines and Java, and also in Puerto Rico, Cuba and the Virgin Islands. Sugar beet production in Europe was far short of dietary needs.

"In order to have adequate supplies to fill military uses as well as to meet foreign commitments, the Department of Agriculture appeals to farmers to plant their full acreage, and has set the goals higher than last year.

"Hancock County has a goal of 1300 acres for 1946 as their share of a 3500 ace state goal. This is an increase of 65 per cent over 1945. If we meet the requirement, which we should try to do, we will need the cooperation of all our farmers."

Secretary of Agriculture Anderson has made the following statement in regard to sugar beets:

"Sugar is one of America's great food needs in 1946. Farmers having land adapted to sugar beet growing and so located that they have a market can do no greater service to their country this year than to plant a full acreage of sugar beets.

"The price support on sugar beets, which has been raised for 1946, makes them an attractive crop financially. The Department of Agriculture, cooperating with the industry, will make every effort to see that adequate labor is available to care for a full planting."

IOWA FARM BUREAU NUMBERS 91,000

Membership in the Iowa Farm Bureau had exceeded 91,000 late last week, it was revealed by state organization director, Wayne Tyler. This is above the figure for 1945 and is the highest on record since 1921, the peak year in Farm Bureau membership.

A total of 21 counties had reached or exceeded their quotas. Tyler predicted that the state quota of 100,000 would be reached early in April and that the total membership by the end of the year will approach 105,000.

Hancock County's Farm Bureau membership on Saturday, March 2nd, was 1265, according to County Organization Director, Chas. F. Jackson. The county quota is 1325 and the goal for 1946 is 1325.

Blue Goose Flight Is On

One of the most spectacular concentration of birds in the United States is the annual flight of blue and snow geese through Iowa along the Missouri River bottoms each year. The first flocks of these magnificent waterfowl reach Iowa about the 1st of March. However, this year the first birds were 10 days early.

The first large flocks are stopping in the bottoms near Hamburg where their numbers are continually increased by the arrival of new birds from the southern wintering grounds. The peak of the flight will be reached about the 15th of Mar. at which time more than 500,000 birds may be found in an area of a few miles. During the peak of the concentration, the single flocks often total more than 100,000 noisy individuals as they gradually move up the valley. The birds spend from three to four weeks in the broad flat fields of the Missouri River bottoms growing fat on waste corn before moving on to their nesting grounds immediately below the Arctic Circle.

The Blue goose is strictly a central North American bird and is extremely rare in the United States outside of the Missouri Valley. The blue goose until recently, has not been an important game bird because in the fall, during the open hunting season, they did not stop in Iowa, but flew non-stop directly to their southern wintering grounds. During the past few hunting seasons, however, numerous blue geese have been killed in the fall by Iowa hunters. Last year more than 2,000 of these birds were legally taken.

It is believed by game technicians that the blue goose is changing its age old habits and will stop in the fall in increasing numbers in the future. In the spring of 1945, for the first time in history, a major flock of blue geese migrated north up the Mississippi River; conservation officers observed more than 2,000 individuals resting resting for several days in the Green Bay bottoms.

LOIS RIEMER BRIDE OF GEORGE KERN

Ceremony Performed In Garner Church

The marriage of Miss Lois Riemer and George Kern took place Tuesday morning, February 26, at 9:0 o'clock at the St. Boniface rectory at Garner with the Rev. M. J. Manternach officiating at the double ring ceremony. The couple was attended by Miss Iola Riemer, cousin of the bride, and Joe Kern, brother of the groom.

The bride wore a floor-length dress with sweetheart neckline and three-quarter length sleeves with a finger-tip veil. Her shower bouquet was of pink roses and her only jewelry was a two-strand pearl necklace, a gift from the groom The bridesmaid wore a pink formal dress and her corsage was of cut flowers.

The bride is the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Riemer of Liberty township. She is a graduate of the Garner high school with the class of 1937 and for the past six years has been a rural school teacher, having taught school in Liberty and Erin townships.

The bridegroom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Kasper Kern. He entered the services in April, 1941 and served in the army 51 months, 42 of which were overseas. He received his honorable discharge in July, 1945.

A wedding dinner was served at the home of the bride's parents to the bridal party and members of their immediate families. The table was set with Fostoria glassware on a white linen table cloth which the groom sent his finance from Ireland. The table was centered with a two-tiered wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and groom.

Out of town guests who attended the ceremony were Miss Anna Kern, sister of the groom, of Austin, Minnesota; and the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Fred Gates of Clear Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. Kern left on a wedding trip the same day. The bride wore a navy blue dress trimmed with white as a going away gown.

HANCOCK REA TO BUILD 75 MILES

New Lines Will Add 180 More Families

Over 1,600 farm families are now serviced by the Hancock County R. E. A., according to H. L. Bush, superintendent.

The co-operative plans to build and energize 75 miles of line in 1946, which will add another 180 members and leave only 140 potential farm families without electricity. The growth of the local co-operative has been steady since its organization and last year it was necessary to build a booster station in the county, south of Klemme, at a cost of $125,000 to carry the load.

At the recent annual meeting over 600 members attended in spite of the inclement weather, to break all records for membership attending an annual meeting.

Three directors were elected for a 3-year term as follows: C. J. Eisemann was elected to succeed J. A. Huisinga of Woden who is retiring from the Board of Directors because of ill health. Victor Loebig of Wesley and Omar Maland of Kanawha were re-elected to succeed themselves.

Following the annual meeting the board met and re-elected the following officers: M. C. James, Goodell, president; Victor Loebig, Wesley, vice president; I. V. Rasmus, Garner, secretary; C. J. Wille, Klemme, treasurer.

Reports of officers were read and during the lunch hour Bert Wisdom, Des Moines attorney, conducted a "Dr. I. Q. program" among the members. The Garner Old Timer band played a concert during the noon intermission.

The board rehired the maintenance and office personnel.

Ideas for UNO

Elmer Twitchell, world famous architect, high-wheeled bicyclist and planner extraordinary, comes out with a blueprint for essential buildings at the proposed UNO vast international peace city.

Mr. Twitchell himself has contributed the funds for two of the most important buildings, a Hall for Nervous Breakdowns and a Hospital for Overworked Interpreters.

The Twitchell Plan follows:

Wishing Well:

Large and imposing, to be erected in the very center of UNO as a sort of key to the whole business. All delegates would be required to visit it before each session.

Special exercises for the small nations whenever the Big Four are in a private huddle.

Ice Hockey Center:

Must be especially spacious. When meetings in the regular auditoriums become too rough, adjournment to the hockey center can be taken at once.

Seismographic Building:

In no territory on earth will the prompt detection of disturbances within the earth be more essential. Building should have super type seismographs, and carry spares for use when main ones are broken by disturbances within the UNO itself.

Hall of the Alibis:

This building should be so designed as to face both ways at once and might even be put on a revolving platform. Special press galleries. Day and night lunch service for periods when the diplomats making the alibis and explanations are having stymie trouble.

Bull Ring:

(Mr. Twitchell wants this one designed especially for a few figures whose actions and words make such a place essential. More later.)

Most Embarrassing Moments Auditorium:

Pink marble with sunken floors and disappearing cabinets; with adjunct to be known as the False Whiskers Annex. Very handy for delegates caught in doubletalk. (Automatic blush controls.)

Voice Throwing Center:

Should be on outskirts of reservation where notably persistent orators of the filibuster species may keep in shape without disturbing the current sessions, which will be noisy enough.

World Amity Gymnasium:

Special running track (with trap doors) for any speed boys whose specialty is artful dodging, running in excessive circles, etc.

Pussyfoot Infirmary:

To provide treatments for building up tissues of the overcautious and the extra adroit. Feature of this building to be science's latest invention, the AM I A Mouse or Man-O-Graph.

UNO and the Bathing Beach

("Nearness to the mountains and seashore, because of summer heat, is emphasized as a consideration observed in selecting the permanent UNO site."—News item.)

When a fellow's solving problems
  Of a very global sort—
When he's striving for more concord
  And a peace that won't be short—
When he's busy on a blueprint
  And all-embracing plan,
He will want to go in swimming
  Just like any other man.

When a crisis in far Denmark
  And another one in Greece
And a third in Argentina
  Threatened unity in Greece—
When the muddles are perplexing
  And the outlook's very black,
Oh, how nice to find a beachside
  There to lie upon one's back!

If the day is hot and humid
  And there's talk of further wars
And there is no breeze for UNO
  Through the windows or the doors
And the Big Three's brows are dripping
  And their shirtfronts watery
Any cause of peace is bettered
  By a dive into the sea.

So let nothing interfere with
  UNO's closeness to a beach
(With a swimming-float, a surfboard
  And a coke or two in reach);
Let it never be the verdict
  Should war raise its face so grim
"That's what comes of keeping UNO
  From a handy place to swim."

Swiss Greet One Another With 10-Foot Alp-Horns

Peculiar horns, so long they must be rested on the ground when played, are used by natives of Switzerland in their exuberant folk festivals that celebrate the return of peace to the world.

Blowing the alp-horn is a form of greeting from one mountaineer to a neighbor on another mountain. The instrument, a tapering wooden horn about 10 feet long, produces a long, sonorous "hello!" Yodeling also plays a part in the Swiss celebrations. It is their way of expressing happiness and gratitude.

You Should Know Louisiana

By EDWARD EMERINE
WNU Features.

"A good place to visit—a better place to live."

That is Louisiana's boast. That is Louisiana's promise, backed by every square foot of land from the pine forests of the northern uplands to the marshes of the Mississippi delta.

Louisiana is a land of incredible natural richness, in its swamps and bayous, its cane and cotton fields, its lakes and streams, its farms and cities—and its people. Here the beauty and romance of an empire were formed by the alchemy of time. It was a miracle of chemical combinations that brought about the transmutation of these base metals into gold. Geologically, the chemist in nature, with pestle and mortar, mixed marine and alluvial sediments, added the acids of eons, and brought forth a wondrous combination to make the Louisiana of today. The extremely fertile top soils, producing agricultural products and valuable forests, are the state's basic resources. But beneath the surface are rich deposits of salt, sulphur, petroleum and natural gas. Over all hangs a favorable climate, with sun and rain proportioned and balanced to bless the land.

Racially too, Louisiana has had many minglings and infusions. The Creole is a descendant of the French or Spanish settlers. The Isleños, in spite of intermixture with other nationalities, retains much of the Spanish. The descendant of the German, almost completely absorbed by his Latin neighbors, still lives above New Orleans on the "German coast." The great-grandchild of English Royalists resides in the East and West Feliciana parishes. The Russian, as well as the Central and South American, now makes Louisiana his home. The Filipino has a Manila village, and there is a Chinese settlement at Bayou Defon. It is doubtful that a full-blooded negro can be found in the state.

Two centuries of linguistic intercourse have modified the French dialects of the Creole and Acadian, with words and inflections borrowed from the English, German, Negro and Indian neighbor. There are negroes who cannot speak English, whose early Anglo-Saxon idioms and expressions may be heard in their archaic purity in some sections of the state. Regardless of the dialect, words are soft-spoken in Louisiana and pleasant to the ear.

Under Many Flags.

Louisiana has known many governments and many flags. Discovered in 1528 by the Spanish explorer Narvaez, in 1682 LaSalle claimed the territory in the name of France. He later attempted colonization with 280 men, who perished with him. The colonial period comprises the French domination down to 1769; Spanish domination from 1769 to 1803, when there was a brief period of French rule again. The "Louisiana Purchase" in 1803 brought the region under the Stars and Stripes. Louisiana joined the Confederacy in 1861 with other southern states, and figured prominently in the Civil war.

Statehood was granted Louisiana before the War of 1812 began. Not the least picturesque of those who fought at the Battle of New Orleans was Jean Lafitte, the pirate, and his crew. Lafitte, upon whose head a price had been set by Louisiana authorities, spurned British gold and offered to guide warships within striking distance of New Orleans. Andrew Jackson, with the Tennesseans, Kentuckians, Creoles and pirates, won a great victory at Chalmette when they turned back the tide of Red Coats. Parkenham, the English general, fell fatally wounded on the battlefield.

Out of a colorful past emerges the Louisiana of today, tranquil, hospitable and progressive. The chemist is still busy there. The laboratory of the scientist and the factory of the industrialist are collaborating in a new field of development. Louisiana has within its borders the raw materials and facilities necessary for the successful operation of chemical industries. Its farms supply cotton, sugar cane, rice, corn and sweet potatoes. Its forests provide many kinds of timber. Its deposits of oil, gas, salt, sulphur, coastal shells, sand, gravel and other minerals are abundant.

Wealth from Waste.

Wallboard is made of once useless sugar cane pulp, rubber from petroleum and carbon black from natural gas. Chemical and scientific research has opened new fields for plastic and synthetic manufacture, using Louisiana's great resources. Seven paper mills manufacture newsprint from pulpwood, salt cake and other chemicals. Cooking oil, stock feed, rayon, film, cellophane, celluloid, felts, surgical dressings and glycerine are produced from cottonseed. Sugar is made from sorghum and countless by-products of rice are being utilized.

Starch, glue and industrial alcohol are manufactured from sweet potatoes. Oil from the tung tree is used in making paints, varnishes, linoleum and waterproof materials. Soy beans are converted into plastics. Collection of peat moss is simple and cheap. Lime, both hydrate and caustic, is made from oyster and clam shells. Rice hulls make an excellent insulant. There are fabulous resources in the state's Gulf coastal waters, yielding annual harvests of sea food.

Even with accelerated industrialization, the charm of Louisiana and its people remains unchanged. Magnolia trees in the moonlight, soft voices to speak of romance, gayety and color in recreations and celebrations, unparalleled beauty and serenity — that is Louisiana. And that it will remain: a good place to visit—a better place to live.

JAMES HOUSTON DAVIS
Governor of Louisiana

"Jimmie" Davis was born on a hill farm in the Beech Springs community of Jackson Parish. He is a graduate of Louisiana State university. Former school teacher, court clerk, Shreveport police commissioner and public service commissioner, he was elected governor in 1944. His hobbies are music, singing, fishing and hunting.

Louisiana's Famed Creole Cooking Is Gourmets' Delight

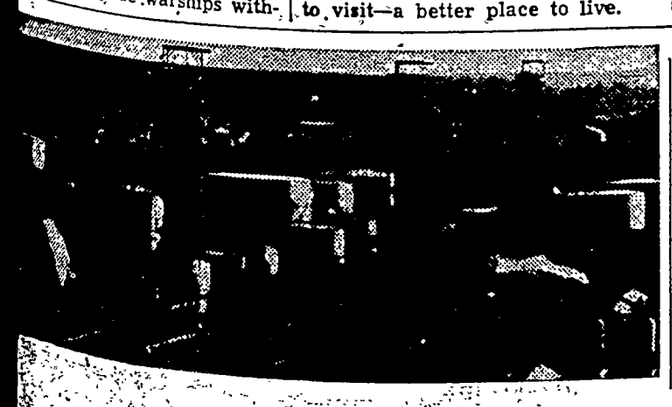
Mark Twain spoke of the pompano cooked in Louisiana as being "delicious as the less criminal forms of sin." William Makepeace Thackery found New Orleans "the city of the world where you can eat and drink the most and suffer the least." Irvin S. Cobb found New Orleans bouillabaisse, a fish chowder, unexcelled.

The people of Louisiana set tables of luscious Creole dishes that have evolved over a period of more than two centuries and present a triumphant synthesis of the French love for delicacies and the Spanish taste for pungent seasoning. While Creole cooking today is found at its best in the vicinity of New Orleans and in the Teche country, its excellencies may be enjoyed throughout Louisiana wherever the French influence has penetrated.

In the preparation of sea food Creole cuisine is at its best. Oysters, with crabs and shrimp, are cooked in gumbo and it is said that a Creole puts everything into gumbo except the Creole! In addition to sea food, game and domestic fowl, there are varieties of roasts and other elaborate dishes.

Rice is used by Louisianans as Irish potatoes are used elsewhere. Hominy grits is to breakfast what rice is to dinner. The perfect complement to a Creole meal is Creole dripped coffee—although a taste for it has to be acquired since it is blacker and stronger than that used in other states.

As one goes farther north in Louisiana the cooking more and more resembles that of the South in general, but there are few places where Creole methods have not had some influence. In the vicinity of Natchitoches, the Spanish influence is particularly noticeable. The Monroe area is famous for its barbecues. Usually 15 or more ingredients are used in preparing sauces for barbecued meats. A popular "country dish" of this section is pot liquor and corn pone.



INDUSTRIAL LOUISIANA

In sharp contrast to Louisiana's well-known agricultural importance is its extensive industrial development. This is a section of the huge refinery of the Standard Oil company at Baton Rouge.

At the beginning of the present century, Louisiana embarked upon an era of intensive industrial growth. Discovery and development of abundant raw material resulted in the establishment over the state of refineries, chemical plants and other large industrial units.

A PEOPLE IN CONFUSION

LESSON TEXT: Judges 2:7, 11, 16-23.
MEMORY SELECTION: The Lord is my helper, and I will not fear.—Hebrews 13:6.

Confusion is a word well suited to describe the world today. With the end of the war we had hoped for peace and goodwill, and what have we? We may learn from the experience of Israel the reasons for such confusion. They, too, had come into their land and should have had only peace and prosperity. Instead there were turmoil and disorder. Why?

The success or failure of both nations and individuals is ultimately determined by their attitude toward the law of God. He is always right and true. The constant factor in a world order that swings wildly from one extreme to another is his law, which is perfect and eternal.

God is no respecter of persons. Even Israel, his own chosen nation, found that observing God's law meant blessing, and failure to do so brought judgment and sorrow. No man is great and powerful enough to ignore this rule, and none is exempt from its operation.

I. The Cause—Forgetting God (vv. 7, 11).

The Lord had promised the land to them as they went in and possessed it by faith in him. He fully kept that promise in the measure that they believed him. They never did take the whole land, but that was because of their failure, not God's.

As the people of Israel took possession of the land, they went forward in the way of blessing as long as Joshua, and the elders who remembered God, kept them steady and true. We have here an excellent illustration of the power of a godly example. It is far stronger than we think.

The fact that a nation has been highly privileged and has been exalted to a place of power and honor will not save it in the day when God is forgotten. Israel no longer had God-fearing men to bring it back to the Lord, and so began its awful drifting.

We Americans are rightly proud of our great land, its mighty resources, its fine past and promising future. But what is the future to be? Oh, we say, the most glorious days are ahead! They may be, but only if we, like our forefathers who established this nation, recognize God. If we do not, America will go the way of the forgotten empires of centuries past, and that in spite of all its past achievements and its present promise.

It is a significant thing that our business and national leaders often come from Christian homes, but it is sad that they themselves are so frequently not Christians. Their lives are shaped by the teaching and influence of godly parents, but what will their children do if they are not brought up in the fear and admonition of the Lord?

II. The Condition—National and Spiritual Confusion (vv. 16-19).

The history of the period of the judges in Israel is incomplete, but what we have shows the awful condition of the nation. Not only were they in separate tribes, but the people as a whole were divided into three groups—north and south of Jerusalem, and east of the Jordan.

The moral and spiritual decay were evident in their turning to the immoral practices of Baal-worship.

One would have thought that God would give up a people so set on sinning, but he did not. He provided deliverance for Israel. That gives us courage, for we know that he has not given us up, but has provided in Christ a sure deliverance, if America will turn to him.

It is interesting to note that God works through men. Some of these judges were great men; others were just ordinary men. But each in his appointed place, at the appointed time, was God's man.

Confusion, sin and disobedience cannot be tolerated indefinitely. So Israel stubbornly went on to

III. The Conclusion—Judgment from God (vv. 20-23).

God not only will not hold a backsliding nation guiltless, but will bring judgment even if he has to turn over his people to a despoiling nation. He has instruments of individual and national chastisement, and he is ready to use them.

Notice that wherever they went the Lord's hand was against them. There is no place to flee from the presence of God. Anyone who thinks he can do it should read Psalm 139: 7-12. It can't be done. That is a comfort to the believer, but it is very disquieting to the unbeliever.

They compromised with evil, and lost not only their testimony but their very spiritual life. They forsook God and took into their friendship the enemies of God, only to find that they were their own enemies.

We are in danger now of compromise with evil, both in our personal and in our national lives. As we do—and if we do—we may expect only disaster and judgment.

Cabbage in Top Class Of Vitamin C Foods

Cabbage contains a wealth of vitamin C; in fact, raw cabbage is in the same top class of vitamin C foods as citrus fruits and tomatoes. One cup of raw cabbage can furnish nearly half of the day's vitamin C needs, provided the cabbage is prepared when fresh and is served promptly Cabbage at a meal also adds to the day's supply of B vitamins — thiamine, riboflavin and niacin—and calcium for the mineral score; and the greener leaves offer vitamin A.

Remember, the less you have to cook cabbage or expose cut cabbage to the air, the more vitamin C you hold. Cook it quickly; 5 to 10 minutes of boiling does the trick for shredded cabbage, and 10 to 15 minutes for quartered cabbage, Miss Cook suggests.

There are other good reasons for using cabbage too. In addition to its high vitamin and mineral content, it has a lot of flavor value that makes it a welcome menu item in salads and hot dishes. The homemaker who uses cabbage regularly during the abundant period is also doing her share to prevent waste The U. S. department of agriculture has started a purchase program to prevent the waste of some of the surplus vegetables, but it is intended only to take care of the excess above consumer demands.

Test Will Aid in the Softening of Water

Many farm women are confronted with "hard water" troubles each washday and are often asking how much water softener should be used in their washing machines. It will take only about 10 minutes to make a simple test as to how much water softener your washing machine requires.

Fill a pail or pan with a gallon of hot water, add one teaspoonful of water softener compound, mixing well. Add two tablespoons of soap and whip into suds. An egg beater is best for the whipping process. Then wait a minute or so to see if the suds last. If they do, enough water softener has been added. But if the suds die down quickly not enough softener has been used. Try again with fresh water and twice as much softener as before, until you find the right amount.

When you find the right proportions, multiply them by the number of gallons your washing machine holds. And you'll know how much water softener you need for your machine. Jot the figures down some place so you won't forget and next time washday comes around you'll know exactly how much softener to use.

Pruning Wounds

Every wound made in pruning is an opening through which disease organisms may enter the heart wood of the tree. Wounds are no longer a source of danger after they are healed over. It is essential, therefore, that pruning be done in such a way that wounds may heal and that the tree be kept in a vigorous condition in order that the growth which covers the wound may be made in a minimum of time. If the cut made in removing a broken or crowding limb is made close to the trunk of the tree, the wound is completely surrounded by live tissue and a plentiful supply of food traveling up and down through the tree. On the other hand, if the limb is cut in such a way as to leave a part of the branch still attached to the trunk, the end of the limb dies and it is impossible for the healing tissues to grow over it. Disease organisms enter the dead wood and eventually grow into the heart wood of the tree.

Bats' Flight

How a bat flies in the dark and does not collide with walls has been the subject of investigation for decades. It was established by Drs. R. Galambos and D. R. Griffin (Harvard) four years ago that a bat sends out a note of high pitch which is reflected by a wall and heard. Whereupon the bat knows what it has to do. We have, then, something like radar, with sound as the disturbance to be reflected instead of a radio wave. Prof. T. Hartridge (St. Bartholomew's hospital medical college, London) published in 1920 the theorty "that bats during flight emit a short wave-length note and that this sound is reflected from objects in the vicintiy." There is no doubt about this now In fact, bats can steer clear even of carpet threads or thin wires in complete darkness Injure the ear of a bat so that he cannot hear, and he plumps right into an obstacle.

Grass Waterways

The place of grass in protecting natural drainageways from serious erosion is pointed up. Grass waterways do not take the place of soil treatment and erosion control measures on adjoining slopes, even though surplus water can be carried off without gullies being formed. Silt in the waterway suggests that adjacent hillsides are eroding. Grass waterways are not hard to build but it does take perseverance to get them well established. A single seeding seldom takes hold well enough to withstand the wear and tear of running water or unfavorable weather. When one seeding fails, another should be made at the first opportunity.

Weed Elimination Aids Pollination

A farmer cannot, of course, harness a bee and drive her to do the job that needs doing. But there are practical ways of directing the proverbial industry of the bee. A mowing machine may be useful in getting work out of a colony of bees, according to recent experiments by federal entomologists working in Utah alfalfa fields. Seed production is important in areas of irrigated alfalfa near Delta, Utah. Growers have to depend on bees to "trip" the distinctive blossoms of the alfalfa plant, and so set free the pollen that causes a good set of seed.

Recent experiments show, however, that alfalfa is not, as a rule, the first choice of the bees as a source of pollen. At Delta Q. A. Hare and George H. Vansell, department of agriculture entomologists, used an ingeniously contrived pollen trap to strip returning bees of pollen they had collected. Next, an examination of these pollen pellets indicated the plants on which the bees had been working.

At Delta one of the plants blooming at the same time as alfalfa and competing with it, was greasewood, a weedy plant Corn and sweet clover were also rivals for bee attention, but they are not important crops in the Delta area, and so did not compete seriously with the blooming alfalfa. Alfalfa seed growers should learn to recognize the plants which compete with alfalfa for the visit of pollen-collecting bees. By this means it is possible to evaluate the alfalfa seed-producing possibilities of a locality and to plan crop rotation more intelligently so that the alfalfa will receive full benefit of the bee population.

Lack of Boron Leads To Freak Plant Growth

It has long been known that when boron, contained in borax and boric acid, is lacking in soil, it causes abnormal development of plants, affecting all structures of the plant including the economically valuable parts. But research is still being conducted to solve the mystery of the exact way in which boron functions.

Boron deficiency can be remedied by adding 5 to 20 pounds of borax per acre to soil. More than that is dangerous, since too much boron has a toxic effect upon plants.

Acid, highly leached, gray sandy-loam soils are often low in boron, since it has been removed by leaching as well as cropping. Addition of excessive amounts of lime, especially to an acid soil, already low in boron, often results in a marked boron deficiency.

Feed Waste

Four million tons of vegetable leaves, rich in vitamins, now mostly go to waste every year around vining stations and vegetable packing plants That is the estimate of chemists of the eastern regional research laboratory of the department of agriculture. What is more, the department men find those waste vegetable leaves can make high-quality feed for chickens, comparable to alfalfa leaf meal. They prepared meal from these leaves which was fed experimentally by the Delaware experiment station to chicks and older chickens. Giving the birds 8 per cent of their ration in leaf meal, they found the meal made from broccoli leaves better than alfalfa. Lima bean, turnip and carrot leaf meals were about equal to alfalfa leaf meal. Leaves from pea vines proved almost as good as alfalfa. The leaf blades of these vegetable crops are high in protein, carotene and riboflavin, the most costly constituents of feed.

Earthquake Area

India's earthquake area facing southward on the Arabian sea is part of a 6,500-mile shock belt which begins in southern Spain, skirts the northern shores of the Mediterranean sea, dips down the east side of the Persian gulf, and then turns northeastward to follow the Himalayan and related ranged into China. The vast peninsula of India jutting into the Indian ocean between the Arabian sea and the Bay of Bengal is more stable than the mountainous mainland areas in the north. Assam and Punjab provinces have figured repeatedly in violent quakes. In June, 1897, Assam was shaken by a shock centering in a disturbance zone of 10,000 square miles. In April, 1904, the Kangra valley in the Punjab was rocked by a quake that cost 20,000 lives.

Soap Suds

Home management specialists say it takes about two inches of standing suds to get a load of clothes clean in the washing machine A bit of experimenting with the measuring cup will show you how much soap it takes to make two inches of suds. Every home laundress knows that soap makes suds more quickly if it is shaved, grated or pulverized. If your retail store is out of soap flakes or powders, you can make your own from bars of laundry soap, which is generally easier to find Be sure the soap is well dried, cut it into pieces and run it through the meat grinder Let it dry well, then pulverize. You may wish to use a grater or slaw cutter to make flakes or chips. This may also serve as a thrifty way to use up small left-over bits of bar soap.

An Editorial

HOMES . . . but HOW?

We have been hearing a lot recently about the housing shortage and mass production of homes by new government subsidized industries.

Let's look into what is proposed for us in this new government program and think straight on this matter to make sure we are really doctoring the CAUSE of our trouble and not merely taking pain-killer for the symptoms.

Mr. Wilson Wyatt, former mayor of Louisville, Kentucky, and now National Housing Administrator, wants to spend $600,000,000 subsidizing a big new privately owned prefabricated housing industry . . . at taxpayer's expense. This industry yould place house building in the hands of a few gigantic firms or a few individuals. In effect, this would create a monopoly to the detriment of local labor and business, and strikes us as a strange procedure in view of the fight for years AGAINST concentration of industrial power in the hands of a few people.

Obviously we want homes . . a lot of them . . and good ones; but let's try to find a horse sense solution and not knock ourselves out looking for magic formulas.

The facts are this scheme is on paper only. It will take 8 months to a year to get going, cost hundreds of millions at a time when the public debt is already too big, and is bound to have a bad effect on our own local carpenters, bricklayers, suppliers and business men. Even so, it might be worth the sacrifice if there were no other solution.

We think there IS another solution In all this hubbub over getting new homes, someone seems to have overlooked our own great building trades and industry . . the second largest business in the country, employing 6,000,000 people.

This great industry is manned, experienced and ready to build homes RIGHT NOW in every local area, including our own.

Why aren't they at work right now?

Because they lack materials.

That's a hard cold fact and we must quit kidding ourselves and get at the TRUTH about the situation If materials were available, the building trades could start your houses TOMORROW. Ask your own carpenter or contractor and he'll tell you.

What this country needs is not a fancy way of building homes (at taxpayers' expense) but THE MATERIALS to build them with Break the bottleneck in MATERIALS and you'll see homes going up all over this town And it's our opinion that they would be BETTER homes, better constructed and more to the individual's taste

The actual process of constructing houses, except during wartime labor shortage, has never been too much of a problem As far back as 1925, the building industry of this country built 937,000 good homes in addition to $5,000,000 industrial construction, which was the equivalent of 900,000 more homes It's our guess that they could go well past the million mark with today's improved techniques, if they were given the materials so desperately needed And they would do this without new Government subsidies at taxpayers' expense.

We have no bones to pick with prefabricated houses as such. That's a matter of individual taste, altho we sometimes wonder whether women will give up very easily their dreams of a personalized home for a factory planned model that looks about the same as seven dozen others down the street. Our contention is that the prefabricating industry ought to stand on its own feet and not be supported by taxpayers' money to the detriment of our own local trades and industry depending on home building for their livelihood.

How can we get materials flowing? There are several direct and important things to do . . . the sooner the better

1 Make a fair adjustment on strikes. Get them settled so we can start making pipes, wire, wallboard and bathroom equipmen. The longer men sit around doing nothing, the more aggravated the situation becomes.

2. Make what adjustments are necessary on prices of house lumber to get production going. It is a fact that in some cases the present schedule is actually preventing production of materials.

EXAMPLE: The present OPA prices offer a premium to mills who will cut heavy timbers for EXPORT out of this country but PENALIZE mills who cut siding, sheathing and flooring for the homes we need in this country. This doesn't make sense. Hundreds of mills who could be producing lumber for homes are closed down tight because present price ceilings would run them into bankruptcy.

We believe in holding the price line to prevent inflation, but we never get very far if production continues to be strangled. If a small adjustment will break the log jam . . . let's do it. (The building industry says the increase necessary to get production of lumber going would not add more than $35.00 to the cost of an average house.)

3 Cut out red tape and endless regulations. The more "the planners" try to plan our lives for us, the farther we seem to get into trouble. It's about time we gave the good American virtues of independence, initiative and hard work a chance to make ourselves felt.

Cut us MATERIALS, and our local trades and industries will take care of the housing shortage . . . beginning immediately, and give us the personalized homes we want.

FINDS OLD PAPER

A. J. Sitzmann, of LeMars, found in his desk recently an old copy of the Sioux City Tribune, dated July 13, 1904. In the issue was a story about the drawing of government land known as The Rosebud Farms, near Chamberlain, S. D. The name of Mr Sitzmann is listed as one of the winners of the government lottery which entitled him to rush to Chamberlain and file on a quarter section provided that one of the 100 other winners chosen at the time didn't get there first and prove up a homestead. Mr. Sitzmann proved up his quarter section which he later sold for $300. Headlines in the paper were quite similar to those in recent days. One of them: "Strikers Propose to Appeal to Roosevelt." AROUND IOWA

WILD CAT

Ralph Williams, Jr., of near Max, found a 9 pound wild cat and captured it recently. It is the first wild cat seen in this part of the state for several years. The animal was black and grey in color, and much larger than an ordinary house cat. The cat was found in a steel trap and was "taken care of" with a shot gun.

STRANGE HAY

George Findlay of Blanchard, considers himself very lucky. He had a fall while home on a furlough he was helping his father Dave, bale hay. At the time he lost his billfold containing $71, a return ticket to the west coast and other valuable papers. Recently, Herbert Murphy, of Coin, who had purchased some baled hay from Dave Finlay, found a $20 bill in the barnyard. Murhphy continued to search in the yard and found the billfold intact with the remainder of the money and the return ticket.

REMODELED

Several months ago, the St. Paul's American Luth. church building in Rockwell City was sold to A. J. Schlechter. The building has now been made into a modern apartment house, helping to solve the housing shortage in Rockwell City.

TRIPLETS

Max Ruble, of near Keosauqua, reports that in his flock of ewes, recent additions have been two sets of triplets. The two mothers and six children are doing nicely.

Returns After 75 Years

The first public school building was erected in Grinnell in 1854. Prior to moving to the new building a school bell was purchased in the east and taken to Grinnell by ox cart. The bell was first placed on the school yard and later taken to the belfry of the new building. Feb. 24, 1871, the building burned and the bell was lost. Martin Rickard, going through the ruins the following day, discovered the clapper, twisted like a fish hook, and took it home. For 75 years it was a handy anvil on the farm, and was taken with the Richard family to Illinois, Missouri and in 1918, it came back to Grinnell. Lacking just one week of being 75 years, Henry M. Richard presented the clapper to Superintendent Rupert A Hawk, and is once again the property of the public school.

Handy To Have Around

Kenneth Larsen, student at Iowa State College, Ames, discovered that his tuxedo was at his home in Harlan, as he prepared to get ready for a party in Ames. He was an Army Air Corps pilot in England during the war and made use of a red monoplane to fly to Harlan, get his tux and returned to Ames in time for the party!

No "Nays"

All 330 residents in South Fork Township, Jackson county, who voted for erection of the Jackson County Memorial hospital, voted "yes." Tete des Morts township, in the same county, voted 161 "noes" against one "yes."

Jinxed by "D"

The Reinbeck high school basketball team, beter known as the "Reinbeck Rams," have had a very successful season. However, it seems that teams from towns beginning with the letter "D": Dike, Dinsdale and Dysart, have proven to be their downfall. All 3 teams have defeated the Rams in basketball games.

EARLY CHORES!

Daryl Goode of near Blakesburg is in the habit of arising early, but not as early as he did one morning recently. Daryl woke about 1:00 a. m. and decided it must be time to get up and do the chores. He fed the cows and started milking them when other members of the Goode family returned home after attending a basket-ball game and seeing the light in the barn thought someone had forgotten to turn it off. The entire family went out to catch the "culprit" and when they discovered who it was, Daryl had already milked 17 of the 20 cows.

LET'S TAKE STOCK NOW

Everybody wants goods.

Manufacturers want to make them for you.

Yet months after the war's end, you still find it difficult to get many of the things you want and should have.

So, isn't this the time for all of us to take stock . . . to learn a lesson . . . to find out, if we can, what will cure the troubles we are having and prevent their recurrence?

Let's look ahead and agree on a program that will insure the full production everybody agrees is the real answer to most of our problems.

Suppose we begin by taking a good look at three roadblocks to prosperity...

STRIKES

Whatever their justice or injustice, strikes paralyze production, force people to use up their savings, and result in losses that can never be made up.

PRICE CEILINGS

Full production isn't possible when industry suffers losses because of rising costs and frozen prices. Price ceilings limit production — goods just don't get made.

GOVERNMENT SPENDING

Continued huge government spending means continued high taxes. High taxes discourage production, hinder the creation of jobs, and leave you less to spend.

ISN'T THIS THE WAY?

The people, through Congress, can remove these roadblocks in the long-range interests of all . . .

By establishing a labor policy that will treat labor and management exactly alike, and above all be fair to the public;

By removing the shackles of price control on manufactured goods;

By cutting down on government spending now and balancing the Federal budget by the 1947 fiscal year at a level of income and outgo that taxpayers can stand.

Do you believe this program is in the public interest?

Your Representatives in Congress are the only ones that can put it into effect. Tell them how you feel about it.

Inner Mongolia Part Of Vast Desert Waste

Inner Mongolia, says the National Geographic society, is the southeastern third of a vast region once known simply as Mongolia. The southern border of the famed Gobi (a desert wasteland) became the boundary between Inner and Outer Mongolia when the latter proclaimed its independence from China in 1924. Composed of the provinces of Chahar, Suiyuan and Ningsia, Inner Mongolia is five times as large as New England, but by recent estimates supports only 60 per cent as many people.

Part of the great desert blotch which sears the face of Asia from Afghanistan to Manchuria, Inner Mongolia has a meager rainfall which varies from a yearly average of 15 inches in the south to 8 inches along the Gobi frontier. A continental, low-humidity type of climate produces there some of the world's greatest climatic extremes —summer temperatures as high as 100 degrees and winter cold as low as 50 degrees below zero. A thin blanket of snow covers the winter ground, and provides added moisture for spring grass.

The land itself is rolling steppe with occasional wind-swept flatter areas which merge northward into desert annexes of the Gobi. Average elevation is about a mile above sea level. High winds have carved grotesque cliffs and swept countless tons of loess, the yellowish-brown topsoil of the area, southward across the Great Wall into China. Important discoveries by archeologists before the recent war have labeled these plains as among the earliest inhabited places on the earth.

List Requisites for Food Storage Place

It takes just three words to describe a good storage place for home-canned foods: Cool—dry—and dark.

Heat helps bacteria in the jars to multiply, so keep home-canned food away from stoves, furnaces, radiators or heating pipes. By the way, heating pipes often hide behind walls, so watch out for that when you're picking your storage place. Unheated storage may freeze canned food, and if the jars crack, the food is lost. If you must use a cold storage place, protect the jars with old carpets or blankets, or several layers of newspaper.

Dampness will rust tin cans and it may cause metal jar lids to rust. Rusted lids are often hard to open and besides you can't use them again.

Canned food will fade and lose vitamins when exposed to light, so blackout your jars, either by wrapping each jar, or by covering windows in the storage place. The boxes your jars come in are handy for dark storage.

DDT Mixture

A 5 per cent DDT oil spray will do a very good job controlling household pests, such as moths, carpet beetles and silverfish. However, until we know more about the insecticide, it should not be used where there is any likelihood that children will get it on their hands.

Spray it freely on rugs or the mat under the rug, on upholstered furniture and on woolen garments. A light spraying of garments before they are put into storage will aid considerably in preventing moth damage. However, the old method of having the garments dry-cleaned and then stored in a sealed place is probably better.

As an insecticide, DDT is not any more effective for the control of roaches than is sodium fluoride, nor is it any more dangerous to use. DDT has not stood the trial of time as has sodium fluoride, which is peculiarly adapted to the killing of roaches.

Fruit Storage

Oranges, grapefruit, lemons and limes all need a moist atmosphere in storage to prevent drying out. For oranges the best storage temperature is just above freezing, 32 to 35 degrees Fahrenheit. At this temperature they may be held in commercial storage 8 to 10 weeks. Limes keep best in a slightly warmer temperature, 45 to 48 degrees, and may keep 6 to 8 weeks. Lemons like it even warmer, 55 to 58 degrees, and may keep 1 to 4 months. The temperature for grapefruit depends on its source and condition. Sound fruit, not overmature and not likely to suffer from stem rot, can be held at 45 to 55 degrees Fahrenheit for 6 weeks in commercial storage. If there is danger of stem rot, 32 to 34 degrees is best.

Assure Vitamin C

If fruits and vegetables are not included in the diet there is a possibility of vitamin C deficiency. Also high in vitamin C is liver, the only commonly-used animal product which contains this vitamin. None of the cereal foods such as whole wheat or rye bread, corn meal or rolled oats are a source of this vitamin. Some evidences of lack of vitamin C in the diet are: restlessness, headaches, weakness, susceptibility to infections, defective teeth, swollen gums and anemia. The danger of this deficiency may be especially great in the winter when heavier starchy meals are eaten, with fewer fresh fruits and vegetables included on the table.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Stabilization Policy Designed To Spur Production; Argentine Military Junta Under U. S. Fire

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

WAGE-PRICES:
Go Sign

Formulation of the administration's new stabilization policy setting a pattern for wage increases of from 15 to 17 per cent and permitting price boosts wherever necessary to assure prewar profit margins, represented a victory for the conservative advisers of President Truman.

Spearheaded by John Snyder, St. Louis banker and director of war mobilization and reconversion, the conservatives held that price as well as wage readjustment was necessary to spur postwar production. With goods flowing to market in volume, they held, prices would automatically find their right level in a competitive economy.

In announcing the new wage-price policy, which was designed to settle the major steel, auto and electrical strikes, Mr. Truman hoped that it would result in an early resumption of mass production that alone could head off an inflationary spiral. In the meantime, he asked for extension of price control, subsidies and allocations and priorities to temporarily hold living costs in line and break industrial bottlenecks.

In winning his point of view, Snyder was permitted to retain his over-all control over the stabilization policy, with former OPA chieftain Chester Bowles put in charge of administering the new formula. Bowles had stood firmly for a more rigid wage-price program, believing lower costs would lead to greater purchasing power and volume, but agreed to co-operate in making the new policy work.

GOOD NEIGHBOR:
Not So Good

In issuing its historic "blue book" condemning the Argentine military regime and its strong-man leadership of Juan Peron, the U. S. state department raised the whole question of continued U. S. and Allied relationship with the South American country.

At the same time, the state department's indictment against the army junta, charging collaboration during the war and in establishing a fascist economy in peace, came on the eve of the Argentine presidential election, lending possibilities to a nationwide swing against Peron's candidacy. Taking cognizance of the U. S. action, Peron laid blame for the strained relations between the two countries on Assistant Secretary of State Spruille Braden, whom he accused of undermining previous accords.

"Strong Man" Juan Peron, whose military junta was under state department fire.

In charging Argentina with collaboration with the axis in war, the state department's "blue book" declared that the military regime engaged in espionage against the allies, sought to undermine governments in neighboring countries friendly to the united nations, and protected German economic interests.

Asserting that the military junta had permitted the establishment of a fascist economy in Argentina to serve as a base for reviving Germany's imperial ambitions, the "blue book" stated that Germans now controlled such key industries as chemicals and pharmaceuticals, construction, electrical equipment, metallurgy and agriculture.

FOOD SUPPLIES:
World Outlook

While per capita food consumption in the U. S. in 1946 is expected to reach a new peak, a survey of 65 foreign countries conducted by the department of agriculture showed that the average person will have about 12 per cent less to eat than in prewar years.

In reporting its findings, however, the department pointed out that striking of an "average" balance did not truly reflect conditions abroad, what with near starvation levels persisting in Italy, Germany, French North Africa, France, Spain, India and China.

Itemizing individual supplies, the department said that the world supply of bread will remain tight, with reduced rations in some countries. Demand for wheat will exceed supplies by 200 million bushels and stocks of other grains will be limited. From 15 to 20 per cent less rice will be available than in prewar years.

A shortage of meat will persist in Europe and Russia, the department said, with increased production retarded by use of feed grains for human consumption. While 1946 supplies of fish will be higher than last year, cheese and egg stocks will not meet demands.

The total of fats and oils will approximate only two-thirds of import needs while sugar consumption will fall to the lowest level in a decade. Only half as much butter will be available for world trade as in prewar years.

In contrast to the tight world food situation, the American larder will stay well stocked, barring poor crops. Only butter and sugar supplies are expected to show no appreciable improvement, and while fewer eggs are predicted, availability of more meat should cut demand for the product.

Butcher Old Dobbin

From the steadily declining horse population of the U. S., 77,887 equines went to the slaughter houses in 1945 to provide meat for American tables. Lowest on record, the number of horses in this country stands at less than half that of a quarter century ago.

Reflecting the steady increase in horse slaughter during the war, when overall meat supplies failed to meet popular demand, the butchering of equines in 1945 showed a 49 per cent rise over the 1944 figure of 52,063.

Along with the horse, the old goat has been sent to the stockyards with increasing frequency, the slaughter of 13,150 by federally inspected packers in 1945 representing a 98 per cent boost over the figure for the previous year.

TIRES:
Good Prospects

With the manpower situation improving with the return of many veterans and new facilities scheduled to get into production soon, the tire outlook for 1946 has grown increasingly promising, though stocks adequate to meet record demand will not be forthcoming before late in the year.

With 24 million cars in operation, with many running on tires five or more years old, the government set a goal of 66 million passenger cords for 1946. Under present favorable conditions, manufacturers hope to even exceed the mark. Because of the continued scarcity of natural rubber, substantial proportions of both tires and tubes will be made of synthetics.

Since 90 per cent of all tires produced go to the market and only 10 per cent are retained for new automobiles, not many more additional cords have been made available during the closedown of auto plants by the General Motors strike, trade circles pointed out.

NATIONAL GUARD:
Postwar Increase

In accordance with plans to keep America strong in the postwar world, the national guard will be increased to 622,500 officers and men, more than double the total of 300,034 in the prewar period.

Of the 622,500 men and officers, 571,000 will be included in the ground forces, 47,600 in the air wings and 4,000 in miscellaneous services. This compares with the prewar establishment of 295,000 on the ground and 5,000 in the air.

Twenty-two infantry divisions will constitute the bulk of the ground forces, with two armored divisions and 18 regimental combat teams making up the remainder. The 12 air wings will be composed of 27 groups, 84 squadrons and 12 control and warning units.

With 47,777 men and officers, New York's national guard will be the largest in the country, followed by Pennsylvania with 39,580; California, 39,568, and Illinois, 32,908.

Boundary Problems Plague Peace Makers

Indicative of the complex problems facing the Big Five committee drafting the postwar European peace treaty are the rival claims of Italy and Austria to the southern Tyrol, ceded to the former after the first World War.

Italy has opposed the transfer partly because of her investment in several hydro-electric plants along the Adige river, a turbulent stream about 225 miles long. Italian opposition has persisted even though Austria has agreed to waive control of the plants and co-operate in further hydro-electric developments.

Meanwhile, one of Austria's chief interests in the region lies in its output of vegetables and fruits, including potatoes, cabbage, apples and pears.

CAPITOL HILL:
Dems Row

With Harold L. Ickes having quit the department of the interior after President Truman had questioned the accuracy of his testimony before a senatorial committee probing Edwin W. Pauley's nomination as undersecretary of navy, political sages pondered what effect the self-styled "Old Curmudgeon's" action would have on Democratic chances in the 1946 congressional and 1948 presidential elections.

Harold Ickes

In resigning from the cabinet after 13 years of service as one of the liberal New Deal stalwarts, "Honest Harold," as Ickes is sometimes known, warned Mr. Truman that political pressure for retention of state control over underwater oil reserves could result in a scandal similar to Teapot Dome. He also said that pressure to assess administrative personnel for campaign purposes might create a major scandal.

Although it was long rumored that Ickes might leave the President's cabinet, his dramatic departure grew out of his charges that Pauley had suggested to him that $300,000 could be raised for the 1944 presidential race if the government dropped a suit the interior secretary instituted to place underwater oil reserves under federal rather than state control. When Pauley denied the allegation and Mr. Truman dclared that Ickes' testimony might be inaccurate, the "Old Curmudgeon" stated that the President's lack of confidence in him left him no alternative but to submit his resignation.

Ill feelings between Ickes and Mr. Truman were further pointed up by the President's order making the resignation immediately effective rather than on March 31 as the interior secretary had requested so that he might push through the Anglo-American oil treaty "which (he) had nurtured and raised by bottle from the beginning."

While the liberal Ickes, long a prominent figure in reform politics, said he would not oppose the President's re-election in 1948, he qualified his statement by pointing out that he had cast his ballot as a delegate to the 1944 convention for Henry A. Wallace for vice president.

GRAIN MOVEMENTS:
Co-Op Proposals

Holding an emergency meeting in Chicago, Ill., the National Federation of Grain Co-operatives urged President Truman to speed up movement of box cars and clarify the price and tax situation to spur lagging shipment of grain to market.

Representing member groups, which handle approximately 400 million bushels of grain annually, the federation said that the acute shortage of box cars has been further aggravated by delays in movement. Runs that normally required four or five days from the northwest to Minneapolis-St. Paul, now take 30 days or more, officials said.

As long as uncertainty exists over extension of federal price controls, the federation declared, farmers will keep substantial quantities of grain off the market in the hope of higher returns. Further, farmers may be adverse to selling both their carryover and the ripened 1946 crop in the same year unless tax laws are revised or loans of actual grain to the government are arranged and operators are permitted to elect the time for collection.

AIR PACT:
U. S., Britain Agree

Resolving differences over the question of regulating international air travel, the U. S. and Britain reached agreement after month-long discussions in Hamilton, Bermuda, on a postwar pattern inclining toward the American concept of freest possible flight.

At the same time, the U. S. agreed to open American military bases on leased British islands in the Atlantic to commercial planes. Obtained by the U. S. for 99 years in the famous over-age destroyer deal of 1940, the islands stretch from Newfoundland to British Guiana in the Caribbean.

Under the U. S.-British pact, planes will be permitted to pick up passengers in either country; equitable rates will be determined; routes will be marked out for travel by American and British craft over the two countries; consultations will be held for resolving civil air problems; the provisional international aviation organization will be asked to settle disputes upon which the U. S. and Britain cannot reach agreement, and no limitation will be placed upon the number of flights air lines may make.

REA:

Complete rural electrification is nearer a reality in the northeastern states than any other section of the country, the Rural Electrification administration has reported. Seventy-seven per cent of the farms in the area already are receiving central station electric service.

Electricity has proved adaptabl to all types of farming in this section, including the maple sugar and syrup industry of the northernmost states.

Kaw River Has Stolen 145 of 175-Acre Farm

ST. MARYS, KANS.—When Ferdinand Wild renewed his subscrition recently to the St. Marys Star, he remarked wistfully that he would be a lucky fellow if he could renew his land so easily. A retired farmer, now in his mid-seventies, Mr. Wild is certain he stands first in the business of surrendering high-priced soil to the Kaw river.

Back in 1918, when he bought the farm where he lives south of the river, Mr. Wild held title to 175 acres of fertile bottom land on the Wabaunsee county side of the river south of St. Marys. Since that time, however, the cave-ins and erosion have frisked him of all but 25 acres of the farm.

Up and down the ungovernable stream he has neighbors who can recall losing 20 acres here and 40 acres over yonder as the swollen Kaw has taken its toll each spring and fall. But Ferdinand believes he is in a class by himself. His finest land has vanished during the last quarter of a century—land that observers valued at more than $20,000.

Across the river on this side, he still has a hundred acres of good soil that has rarely been clipped by cave-ins. But the record was almost as disastrous in 1945. Overflows that came often during the high water last spring played another trick on philosophical Ferdinand. From the hundred good acres on the northside he raised a crop that looked like the fag-end of a drouth season in the mid-thirties—600 bushels of corn.

Ferdinanad has heard that the war years were great years for the farmer.

"Maybe so, maybe so," he mutters, "but which year and which farmer?"

May Name 'Bald' Peak for General

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Sen... Edwin F. Johnson of Colorado told Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, army chief of staff, that the state hoped to name a mountain in the general's honor.

"You have Pike's Peak now and you want Ike's Peak?" the general shot back quickly.

The senator agreed.

"I have only two conditions," General Eisenhower explained. "First, you want to be certain it is a bald-headed peak, and then I want to be certain there is good fishing nearby where I can get a priority."

Cattle Rustlers Busy in Illinois

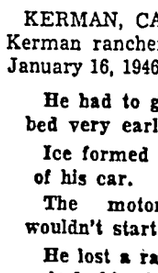
MANTENO, ILL.—Shades of the Wild West! Farmers in the Manteno area may organize a vigilante committee to hunt cattle rustlers, according to the Manteno News.

In the meantime, there has been no trace of the thieves who recently stole nine head of cattle from the Sylvester Thilmony farm, nor of those who took four head from the Roy D. Piper farm.

Farm Advisor George Tupper has stated that the directors of the farm bureau in five townships around Manteno may organize a vigilantes committee to combat cattle stealing.

Air Force Vets Are Organized

WASHINGTON.—A new national veterans' organization, for members of the air forces of World Wars I and II, has been set up, with former Lt. Gen. James H. Doolittle as temporary president.



Doolittle

The organization is designed to perpetuate AAF traditions. Doolittle told reporters here that the organization is non-profit and "has no ax to grind of a commercial nature." It will be known as the AFA, the Air Force association.

Key figures of the organization called on President Truman to inform him of the AFA and its aims. The organizers include such former air force men as Col. Willis S. Fitch, its executive director; Sgt. Forest Vossler, Syracuse university, holder of the Congressional Medal of honor; Lt. Col. Thomas G. Lanphier, who shot down the plane carrying Admiral Yamamoto, now of Boise, Idaho; Sgt. Merryl Forst, captain of the 1945 Dartmouth football team, and Col. James M. Stewart, former 8th air force squadron commander and now back in Hollywood.

Whew! What a Day for Rancher In California!

KERMAN, CALIF.—Roy Bowers, Kerman rancher, will never forget January 16, 1946, for on that day:

He had to get out of a warm bed very early.

Ice formed on the windshield of his car.

The motor stopped and wouldn't start again.

He lost a race with the stork.

And his house caught fire while he was away.

"It all started when Bowers was forced to get up from a warm bed because the stork couldn't wait," the Kerman News reported. "He had to rush his daughter, Mrs. Lola Stewart, to a Fresno hospital.

"All went well until ice formed on the windshield of the car and Bowers had to get out and start scraping. Then the motor refused to run. After a few grinds from the starter Bowers went to a nearby farm house to seek assistance. When he returned to his car Bowers found that the stork had proven too much of a match and he was now a proud grandfather; the baby had arrived."

While in Kerman that day his ranch house caught fire, with no one at home to fight it. Fortunately, Bowers knew nothing about that part of the day until he returned home—to find that his good neighbors had formed a bucket brigade and extinguished the blaze with little damage done.

KNITTING . . . While the Pearl Harbor investigation went on, Pfc. Annette Hatcher of Gaffney, S. C., chauffeur assigned to Gen. Walter C. Short, sat on the sidelines deeply engrossed in her knit one, purl one.

Plan to Withhold Food to End Strikes

EDGAR, NEB. — A nation-wide farmers' "strike against strikes" is the object of Clay county farmers.

They voted to withhold their products from market until industrial disputes are settled.

V. Hubert Johnson, who helped organize a meeting at which 271 farmers voted the action, explained the objective.

"You might say we've got our Irish up," the 48-year-old farmer declared. "We need farm tools and machinery, bathtubs and refrigerators."

Although a resolution adopted at the meeting said "we are not taking sides in the industrial battles," Johnson said that most farmers here blame labor rather than management.

"When we shut off sources of food," he declared, "strikers will work or starve."

Similar action was taken by farmers at Chickasha, Okla.

STEEL CARTEL FILES

WASHINGTON.—Dozens of G.I. investigators have been working since the shooting war stopped to help win another war. This is a war against international big business, which recognized no national boundaries, which used countries only as market divisions for its products, and which at one time aided Hitler, Mussolini and Hirohito just as much as it did France and England.

What the G.I. investigators have uncovered in Germany is a tribute to Nazi thoroughness and to the gullibility of American big business. For what it amounts to is a world plan by which Germany expanded its industrial capacity for war while simultaneously curbing the industrial capacity of this country and other potential enemies.

And the names of the same men who have been dickering with Truman over steel—Ben Fairless, Eugene Grace, et al.—have turned up in European files as part of the cartel which unwittingly played into the hands of the Nazis. It is a story which the leaders of the steel industry would like to forget. But the justice department hasn't forgotten it.

American participation in the steel cartel was decided upon as late as 1937—when there was no longer any doubt regarding Hitler's warlike intentions. By that time he had already invaded the Rhineland, showed his hand by sending arms to Franco, and boasted openly in speech after speech that Germany would dominate Europe.

The steel cartel files, seized in Luxembourg, reveal that S. M. Bash of Bethlehem Steel and A. G. Mundle of U. S. Steel took the initiative in binding their companies to the cartel. Four months later an agreement to divide up world markets was reached.

ANTITRUST ACT

The steel barons were careful about the Sherman antitrust act, however, and the minutes of the June, 1937, meeting reveal that no written agreement regarding U. S. markets was concluded.

In February, 1938, a delegation of European steel men came to the United States.

"Our representatives," the Luxembourg files showed, "obtained a very clear declaration of responsibility for the agreements from" Messrs. Eugene Grace of Bethlehem Steel, Ben Fairless of U. S. Steel, Rufus Wysor of Republic Steel, Frank Purnell of Youngstown Sheet and Tube, M. Hackett of Jones and Laughlin Steel, Charles Hook of Armco International, William Holloway of Wheeling Steel, Robert Wolcott of Lukens Steel, and Ernest Weir of the National Steel corporation (Weirton and Great Lakes steel).

Also included in the American group were Inland Steel, Newport Rolling Mills, Pittsburgh Steel, Otis, and the Allan Wood company.

RACE FOR WAR

What the steel barons agreed to was not only a division of markets but arrangements for price-maintenance. Quotas were set regarding the total production of each participating company, with fines levied against the firm if it exceeded its quota.

However, here is the pay-off. The Germans always exceeded their quotas, after which they politely paid their fines and then kept on speeding their output of steel in the rac for war. Meanwhile, American and British firms stayed within their quotas and kept down their war machine.

In contrast with the Germans, American firms, when they exceeded their quotas, were contrite and apologetic. For instance, here is an item from the steel cartel minutes of pril 18, 1939, which read:

"In regard to a recent shipment by the American group to Belgium, i.e., a home market, the American representative stated that he was taking this matter up with his group in order to avoid a recurrence."

How the cartel worked is also illustrated by a cable sent by Eugene Grace of Bethlehem Steel to Sir Charles Wright in London, dated January 12, 1938, which read:

"Glad to have your message and talk with Elliot. I feel sure there will be no question about performance of member companies. Our only difficulty will come from outside and uncontrolled interests. It will be our hope to protect prices and bring all influence possible on uncontrolled interests.

CAPITAL CHAFF

Bob Hannegan will soon launch an all-out drive to get the President's legislation program passed on Capitol Hill. Hannegan's first target will be the minimum wage bill increasing minimum wages to 65 cents an hour. . . . President Truman has begun a major shake-up of the White House staff. The first to go was George Allen who becomes an RFC director. Next will be another Mississippian, the President's naval aid, Capt. James Vardamann Jr., who will become a member of the Federal Reserve board.

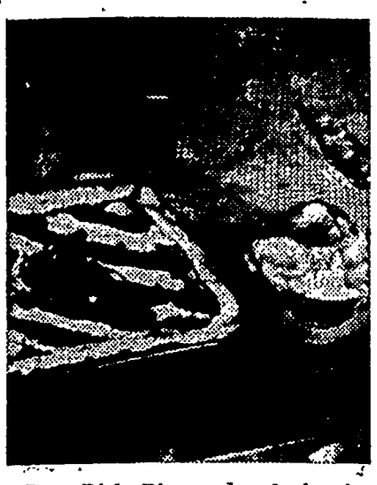
Careful Mixing, Accurate Measure Make Fine Pie Crust



Deep-Dish Pie made of cherries or rhubarb is a colorful treat for any supper. Time can be saved by mixing the crust ahead of time and using canned fruit put up last summer.

Everyone who has ever bit into a piece of pie knows the value of good pie crust. No matter how good the filling, the pie will not be up to standard if the pie crust falls down on flakiness or crispness or taste.

However, it is a very simple matter to make a good pie crust, even if one is a beginner, provided accurate measurements are used and the cook does not become too ambitious. Good pie crust requires only enough mixing to cut the shortening into small pieces, the size of green peas, and to coat them with flour. Then, just enough water is added to make the mix hold together. Some women are so afraid to use water in pie crust, that they have a crumbly instead of a flaky crust. The ideal way is to use just enough, and to work that in thoroughly.

It is not necessary to use more than one-third cup of fat to one cup of flour. Salt and water are the only other ingredients. If desired, the fat can be worked into the flour which has been salted, and the mixture allowed to stand in the refrigerator until it's time to make the pie.

To blend fat and flour together, a pastry blender is a great help. This should not be attempted by hand as the hands are always warm, and this will cause the shortening to melt and give a less flaky result.

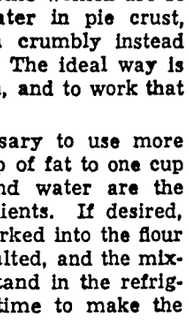
No definite guide can be given as to the water which must be added. Most recipes say from five to six tablespoons of cold water for 2 cups of flour, but this may be a little more or less since flours vary in their rate of absorbency. An all-purpose flour is more suitable for pastry than cake flour, because it has more gluten and will give a flaky in place of a crumbly crust.

Apples are generally available throughout the year and form the basis for one of our most delicious pies. Here is an open-faced apple pie which you will enjoy:

Apple Pie.

8 cups fresh apples
1 cup sugar
4 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 tablespoon butter or substitute
Cinnamon or nutmeg

Peel the apples, core and cut into eighths. The pieces of apple should be at least ½ inch thick. Apples should not be too thinly sliced as this will prevent the pie from being juicy. Combine sugar with flour. Add the apples, lemon juice and pour into crust. Add the butter or margarine in small bits and sprinkle with lemon juice. Dust cinnamon or nutmeg on top of pie and cover top with strips of pastry, if desired.



A custard pie is a delicate dessert for a hearty meal. It is nourishing because of the eggs and milk, yet it requires little sugar.

Custard Pie.

3 eggs
5 tablespoons sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
2½ cups milk, scalded
⅛ teaspoon nutmeg

Beat eggs slightly, add sugar, salt and scalded milk. Mix thoroughly and pour into an unbaked pie shell. Sprinkle with nutmeg. Bake 5 minutes at 450 degrees, then decrease to 325 degrees and continue baking for 30 minutes.

Cherries or rhubarb are responsible for the bright cheerful color in this deep-dish pie:

Rhubarb or Cherry Pie.
(Deep-dish type)

4 cups rhubarb (cut into 1-inch pieces) or 4 cups canned or fresh cherries
3 tablespoons tapioca or
6 tablespoons flour
⅛ cup sugar and ¾ cup honey or
1¼ cups sugar
2 tablespoons butter or substitute

Mix fruit, sweetening and tapioca or flour together. Pour into a 9-inch pie plate lined with unbaked pastry. Dot with butter and cover with pastry which has opening cut in it. Bake in a pre-heated (375-degree) oven for 45 minutes.

Pie crust can be flaky if ingredients are measured every time. It is important to mix the flour and fat only until it resembles coarse corn meal or green peas.

For fish dinners, there's no more perfect dessert than a tart lemon pie:

Lemon Pie.

1½ cups sugar
4 tablespoons cornstarch
4 tablespoons flour
1¾ cups boiling water
4 egg yolks
½ teaspoon salt
Grated rind of 2 lemons
½ cup lemon juice

Mix sugar, cornstarch, flour and salt together. Add the boiling water, stirring constantly. Use high heat until mixture begins to thicken then cook slowly over a low flame until thick. Add beaten egg yolks, cook 2 minutes longer on low heat. Add lemon juice and rind. Cool. Pour into a baked pie shell (9-inch) and cover with meringue.

This above filling may also be used for lemon tarts. The shells for these may be baked in muffin tins or small-sized pie plates. These, too, may be topped with meringue, if desired.

Most cream pies take a meringue topping which is made from whites that were not used for the filling. It is important to beat the egg whites until stiff but not dry, and to fold the sugar in gradually, beating all the while.

The best proportion of sugar to use for the meringue is one tablespoon to each egg white. If too much sugar is used, the meringue will have little drops of brown syrup.

The meringue should be baked rather than browned. Use a 350-degree oven and bake until browned. Be sure to anchor the meringue on the crust so that it does not shrink too much.

It's easy to extract lemon juice, if the fruit has been warmed for a few minutes.

Woodwork should be dusted often so that the dirt does not become imbedded in it. When washing it use soap jelly with warm water and apply with a soft clean cloth or sponge. Rinse with clear, warm water and dry thoroughly.

Wipe varnished floors once a week with a mop wrung dry after dipping in warm, soapy water. Polish lightly with an oiled cloth or mop. Do not leave excess oil on varnished surfaces.

C., is able to bring readers this weekly column on problems of the veteran and serviceman and his family. Administration Problems

While the Veterans' administration is still several weeks behind on various phases of its work, it has made tremendous headway during the past two months towards keeping its business current, according to Gen. Omar N. Bradley, director.

This tremendous agency is now handling the insurance, job training, farm, home and business loans, pensions and other features of veterans' benefits for more than 13 million veterans and a potential business of 20 million veterans.

To do this job it is short of office help, in medical help and in staffing its hospitals. Here are a few statistics as of February 1 showing how far behind schedule the administration is on handling its business—out of 500,000 applications for training under servicemen's readjustment act, 91,176 are in training, 258,781 have been declared eligible and the balance are pending; on insurance, the department is about 20 days behind and is now handling direct premium payments on 1,073,712 policies with 10,357,788 policies being paid by allotment; there are more than 2,000,000 disability claims on file with 1,567,000 adjudicated, 1,038,000 allowed and 458,000 pending.

This office has received scores of letters asking when they will receive pensions, when they will receive subsistence checks. To all such inquiries we can only advise patience, since we believe the VA is doing all it can under the circumstances.

Questions and Answers

Q. I have a brother in the army in Italy. He has been overseas 13 months. His parents are 65 years of age and have no one at home with them. Would it be possible to get him discharged because of his parents' age and health? If so, where would I write for particulars?—A reader, East Lake, Minn.

A. Application for a "hardship" discharge must be filed by the soldier with his commanding officer. It might help if the parents also filed all particulars with their local Red Cross, since the army asks the Red Cross to investigate the case eventually.

Q. Where would a person find out the details as to where wives of servicemen overseas are able to make application for transportation to Japan when they are permitted to join their husbands?—Mrs. L. W., Omaha, Neb.

A. The war department says all such applications must originate with the soldier who files his application with his commanding officer.

Q. I would appreciate receiving information concerning civilian occupations which may be comparable to assignments held by officers while in service, particularly that of adjutant.—C. R. F., Long Branch, N. J.

A. Your nearest office of the United States Employment service will have a list of occupations available.

Q. My husband was a World War I veteran. I filled out a blank for pension December 14, 1945. Do you know how long before I will get it? Will I get $45? How much will my two boys get, one 16, the other 14 years old?—Mrs. P. S., Lilburn, Mo.

A. You do not give sufficient information. If your husband's death was service-connected, you might get $50, plus $15 for the first child and $13 for each additional minor child; if not service-connected, $35 plus $10 for the first and $5 for each additional child. If you have filed your claim and given all particulars, the Veterans' administration will determine the correct amount in due time.

Q. I am a disabled veteran of World War I with a 15 per cent disability rating. Due to this disability and heart ailment, am unable to work. How can I get this rating raised? It was granted in 1928.—W. J. E., Columbia City, Ind.

A. The VA says you should make application to the regional office where your original rating was granted for a re-examination. If the rating board says you are entitled to an increased disability rating, it will be granted.

Q. I have a son who has been in the army signal corps almost 33 months and my wife and I are all alone on a large farm. We would like to know if there is a possible chance of him getting home this spring, or if we could try to get him home?—H. S. B., Carlton, Minn.

A. I would say there is a good chance for him to be home this spring, since General Eisenhower has said all men with 30 months' service as of April 20, or with 45 points, will be home or on their way home by April 30 this year.

PRACTICAL FARM BUILDINGS

Modern Dairy Barn

By W. J. Dryden, WNU Farm Editor.

This modern design is extremely popular with dairy farmers who measure barn economy by years of efficient service and who must consider labor costs of dairy flock management. It meets the requirements for utility and good design and withstands heavy wind loads.

Typical of all modern gothic roof types, this dairy barn provides comparatively large mow space, free from obstructions.

In considering the foundation and floors of a dairy barn, the instructions issued by the U. S. Public Health service milk ordinance should be followed.

"The floors and gutters of such parts of all dairy barns in which cows are milked shall be constructed of concrete or other approved impervious and easily cleaned material, provided that if the milk is to be pasteurized tight wood may be used, shall be graded to drain properly and shall be kept clean and in good repair. No horses, pigs, fowl, calves, etc., shall be permitted in parts of the barn used for milking."

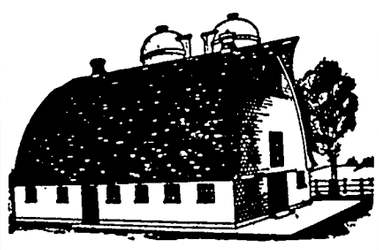
Concrete, ranging in thickness from 6 to 12 inches for the various-sized structures, is the ideal material for footings and foundation walls. The broadened base of the foundation or the footing should be from 12 to 20 inches wide.

The barn should be located about 150 feet from the rear of the house. The adjoining yards should be well drained.

In determining the size of the barn, special attention should be given to the number of animals that can be sheltered and cared for comfortably as well as to provide space for their feed. The width of the barn will average from 30 to 36 feet. Its length will depend upon size of herd as well as the slope of ground, etc.

Whether the animals should face out or in is a personal question.



Southern Pine Type Dairy Barn.

When facing out, only one cleaning alley is required. When facing in, only one feeding alley is required. Sufficient and convenient equipment must be provided. Stairs, ladders, chutes, lights, drinking cups, litter and feed carriers and milking machines have much to do with the saving in manpower and efficient operation of the barn.

Ventilation is most important. It furnishes fresh air, regulates temperature, and removes odors and moisture. The barn should be built to maintain a temperature of 50 degrees F. even with the windows or ventilators opened during the coldest of weather.

It is much easier to keep a dairy barn sanitary, and also improve the appearance, if it is completely ceiled inside. Shiplap or plywood may be used for this purpose.

Four square feet of window glass per cow is desirable in the dairy barn. Except in cold climates, even more window space can be provided. The windows should be longer than they are wide in order that the sun's light will cover a greater floor area.

Before starting construction on a dairy barn, or any other farm structure, the advice of local building supply firm should be invited. They are in a position to advise on availability of different types of material as well as the current prices. The best dairy barn need not be the most expensive. Improper buying of building material may make a cheap and poor barn costly.

Household Hints

Screw a hook into the end of your broom handle. You'll find it handy for reaching objects on high shelves, also the window shade pull that springs to the top. And naturally you hang the broom up by its hook in order to preserve the bristles.

Should the loud ticking of a clock in the sick room bother the patient, place a glass bowl over the timepiece.

If salt fish are soaked and cooked in milk they become much sweeter than when soaked in water.

A little salt in the bottom of the skillet will keep the fat from popping.

For cleaning tiles in the bathroom and kitchen, use a soft cloth moistened with kerosene.

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Shamrocks Near State State Tournament Now

The Klemme Shamrocks won the right to compete in the sub-state basketball tournament at Mason City Saturday night by eliminating Fertile in the final round of district play 34-32 in an air tight class B struggle.

Other teams to go to the sub-state from district play at Mason City are Ventura (B), Mason City and Charles City (A). Class identification will be retained in the sub-state tourneys with four teams from each meet scheduled to move into state finals at Iowa City March 20-23 where the 16 team field will lose its classification.

In Klemme's final game the winner was in doubt until the final whistle and Coach A. L. Kingery's crew had to cling desperately to a 5 point lead which they held at the beginning of the fourth quarter and which Fertile whittled down to within 2 points of a tie with a minute and a half to go, but the Shamrocks were sucessful in stalling out the precious seconds.

During the game the score was tied 5 times and the lead changed hands 6 times.

Grosshuesch and Brinkman set the pace for the Shamrocks with 11 and 8 points respectively, while Thomas and Baack played a bang up game at the guard post and Jacobs was doing a great job under the bang board and holding down Fertile's star, Sheimo.

Everybody on the Shamrock team contributed to the score with Thomas getting 7, Jacobs 6 and Baack 2.

Klemme Meets Lansing At Cedar Falls Tonight

The Shamrocks embark on the way to the state tournament tonight at 7:00 o'clock at Cedar Falls where they meet Lansing. If they down Lansing they will then play the winner of the Geneseo-Dunkerton game and a win over them would put them into the state tournament at Iowa City.

First Team To Win District

The President and the Crisis

("This is one place where there is always a crisis just around the corner. I think every week will be less hectic, but the next week is always a little more so."—President Truman.)

When I arise each morning
I heave a sigh and say,
"Things cannot be so hectic
As they were yesterday."
I think the worst is over—
To trouble I say, "Scram!"
But very, very quickly
I see how wrong I am.

I sip my glass of fruit juice
And hope I may relax—
But when I reach my coffee
My optimism cracks:
The telephone starts ringing—
Complaints begin to pour
And there stands Old Man Trouble
Directly in the door!

'Til noon I keep my chin up,
And to each issue say,
"Now be a nice, good crisis
And take yourself away!"
But lunchtime finds me reeling,
And when the clock strikes one
It's clear to me my troubles
Have only just begun.

By three o'clock I'm groggy,
But still I sort of hope
My burdens soon will lighten,
But hear a cry "No soap!"
A brand new P.M. crisis
Comes roaring round the block
And soon is in the White House—
It never stops to knock!

But I am philosophic,
My poise I must not drop;
If I'm to keep my balance
And never blow my top;
So welcome, hourly crisis,

The Clam as a Pet

A Boys Club annual pet show is featured this year by something never encountered at such a show before. It is a round clam, entered by a seven-year-old lad, and it has caused considerable eyebrow lifting. However, we stand firmly behind the kid. A clam makes a pretty wonderful pet. It is untemperamental, its habits are never annoying, it never climbs onto the de luxe sofas and nobody has to get up at 6:30 to let it out.

You know right away that clam will never bring any man his slippers or sit up and beg. You realize at once that it will not chase a ball across the living room. So you don't bother. All a clam asks is to be let alone.

We are a clam breeder and fancier. Our clam kennels are the home of such outstanding clams as Muddy Bank Boy, by Indian River Princess—Charles Island King. We also own the blue ribbon winner Pull-In-Your-Neck by Savin Rock Charmer—Fire Island Roustabout. This summer, we are going in for prize oysters, starting our kennel with the famous Clampdown Belle, Queen of Welch's Point, Duke of Grand Central Oyster Bar and Housatonic Gus.

Household Hints

To make a good wire splice, lay the ends side by side, pointing in opposite directions until the doubled portion is about two inches long. Grasp firmly right in the middle with the jaws of a pair of pliers. Wrap one free end firmly about the splice at the left, and the other in reverse about the splice at the right. The result is neat, easily taped, and won't pull apart. Such joints should be soldered, particularly if the wire is part of an electrical unit.

led to the undertaking of an ambitious scientific research project of what happens to migratory birds when they reach Mexico and other Central American countries where they winter.

So for two years this study has been going on, largely financed by American Wildlife Institute, but conducted by the Pan American Union, an international organization composed of representatives of the Central and South American Republics.

In its zeal to train young men in scientific knowledge in all phases of conservation, the Wildlife Institute has fostered and helped finance schools for this purpose at the land grant state universities in Alabama, Iowa, Maine, Missouri, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Texas, Utah and Virginia, while, through the influence of the institute, schools also have been established at Purdue university in Indiana and in New York.

Quarter Million to Schools.

The institute has expended approximately $250,000 in the establishment and maintenance of these schools. In so doing, it operates through the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service, the State Departments of Conservation of Wildlife and the universities. Approximately 500 trained men are now engaged in various phases of wildlife conservation and land use. Many are holding important government and state jobs in forestry, wildlife management, with zoological and biological gardens and organizations.

Another instance of conservation fostered and largely financed by the institute was the restoration of the salmon fishing industry on the Atlantic coast. Fifty years or so ago, Atlantic salmon disappeared from Maine due to the destruction of spawning grounds in the Maine fresh water rivers by the lumber industry. Sawdust coated the bottoms of streams and tannic acid from the sawdust polluted the water to such an extent the salmon were killed off and a flourishing industry died.

In 1940 a fellowship was established in the University of Maine for the purpose of studying the possibilities of restoring the Atlantic salmon to the important streams in the Northeast. Through these studies and co-operation with the institute, a method so easy and inexpensive was devised, that the sponsors are amazed at the results. Huge "egg beaters" were attached to small boats sent into the Machias, the Dennys, the Narraguagus and the Penobscot rivers. These egg beaters, operating in the spring of the year at high water, churned up the beds of these rivers so thoroughly that the sawdust caking was washed out and into the sea. Then millions of salmon eggs were brought down from New Brunswick and installed in troughs for hatching in the rivers. This spring saw the first return of the Atlantic salmon for spawning and they swarmed back into these four Maine rivers by the millions.

The American Wildlife Institute is particularly interested in land use on the theory that if land and water are utilized properly we will automatically have wildlife. Clinton R. Gutermuth, executive secretary of the institute, who occupies a modest office in a downtown Washington building, declares, "we can't have wildlife without the co-operation of farmers."

"Most certainly," the Hoosier-trained secretary said, "we can't take good farm land, and by the same token, farmers should not attempt to farm land fit only for reforestation or as cover for wildlife."

Thousands of acres of land in this country have been stolen from its natural state and thousands upon thousands of dollars of public money has been spent in the vain attempt to make farm land out of submarginal and other land fit only for its natural state.

One such area, it is pointed out, was the Kankakee marshes in northern Indiana and Illinois. The two states and the federal government spent many thousands of dollars in the attempt to convert these thousands of acres of marshes into farmland. When it was found the land would not raise crops, after decades of frustration, the land is now being allowed to return to its natural state. And during the past few years, the financial return from the recreational and other features of this natural wildlife habitat each year has been more than was realized by farmers in all the years cultivation was attempted.

Another such area is the so-called grand flats in Wisconsin, an area thousands of acres in extent where a few years ago nothing but abandoned homes were seen for miles, and much of which is now being allowed to return to its natural state.

Grow Cover Where Possible.

Mr. Gutermuth believes that every farmer can correlate his land into the two schools, natural and agricultural. For instance, along the woods lot on almost every farm there is 50 or more feet which will barely raise a crop. This land could be permitted to grow into cover. The banks of ditches and streams would, within a few years, become a natural habitat for wildlife if permitted to grow into a natural state. And reforestation of some land, suitable for that purpose, will not only reap a rich harvest for farmers in the way of lumber and wood, but will also provide natural cover for wildlife.

The American Wildlife Institute is also vitally interested in proper land use of rolling land, in erosion and in contour plowing and cultivation to retain the rich top soil and the natural wealth of farm land. It has aided in much research in this phase of conservation.

The North American Wildlife conference staged each year by the institute is the forum where technical men in all branches of conservation meet and exchange information and where results of the year's research are made public to teachers, professors, laboratory technicians, administrators and supervisors and to the general public.

Approximately 1,000 delegates from every state, Mexico, Canada, England and France are expected to attend this year's conference at the Hotel Pennsylvania in New York. The general theme will be "The Place of Wildlife in a Changing World."

C., is able to bring readers this weekly column on problems of the veteran and serviceman and his family. Widows' War Pensions

There have been so many inquiries concerning pensions for widows of veterans of both World Wars I and II that we are giving here the general provisions for the various types of pensions:

Pensions for widows, children and dependent parents of veterans whose death resulted from service in both World Wars I and II: widow, but no child, $50; widow with one child $65 and $13 for each additional child; no widow, but one child, $25; no widow, but two children, $38 equally divided, and $10 for each additional child; dependent father or mother, $45, or both $25 each.

A widow means she must have been married to the veteran prior to December 14, 1944, lived continuously with him until date of death, except where there was a separation due to misconduct of or procured by the veteran, without fault of the widow—and must not have remarried.

Pensions for widows and children of World War I for death not connected with service: widow, but no child, $35; widow and one child, $45 and $5 for each additional child; no widow, but one child, $18; no widow but two children, $27 equally divided; no widow but three children, $36, and $4 for each additional child. The same definition of widow applies as above. This pension is not payable to any widow without child, or to a child, whose annual income exceeds $1,000, or to a widow with child or children where annual income exceeds $2,500.

There is no provision for pensions to widows of World War II for death not connected with service.

Questions and Answers

Q. What type of dependents must a hospitalized veteran who is rated 100 per cent or more disabled have in order to draw more than the $20 monthly institutional award? — E. G. R., Milwaukee, Wis.

A. The Veterans' administration says that if you have one dependent, you may draw a pension of $115 per month or more, depending on nature of your disability, if you are 100 per cent disabled. The amount in excess of your $20 may be sent to the dependent.

Q. I have been trying to get readjustment compensation of $20 per week, but have been unable to do so. I am a veteran of this war with 26 months and have a disability discharge, but have not got a pension yet. So I would like to know how to get the $20 a week.—R. F. S., Wolf Island, Mo.

A. The fact that you have a disability discharge, or even drawing a pension should not interfere with receiving readjustment compensation under the G.I. bill. Requirements for this compensation are (1) you reside in the U. S.; (2) you are completely unemployed or if partially employed, at wages less than $23 per week; (3) that you are registered with and reporting to a public employment office, USES; and 4) that you are able to work and available for suitable work. Have your discharge or separation papers with you when you register for employment.

Q. I was reading where they are still counting points since V-J Day. The Red Cross said they froze them V-J Day. Please answer which is correct and also how many points and how many years of service do you have to have to be discharged? —Mrs. E. D., Louisville, Ky.

A. The war department says that for the record, men in the service are still earning points for each month of service, but for the purposes of discharge, points earned as of September 2, 1945, are counted. For the army, according to General Eisenhower, men with 40 points as of September 2, except volunteers, or with two years service will be home by June 30; men with 45 points or 30 months' service will be home by April 30.

Q.—To a lonely wife and mother of Vienna, Mo., and Mrs. J. C., of Carterton, Va., each of whom have three children.

A.—Your husbands are eligible to apply for discharge immediately because you each have three children. The same answer holds true for Mrs. H. R., New Boston, Texas.

Q. A few weeks ago, I began a correspondence course with a New York school at a cost of $80 for the entire course. A down payment of $20 was made, and five monthly payments must be made to clear up the balance. Would the government pay the entire bill, or must I, because of its low cost, pay the expense?—J. A. V., Webster, Mass.

A. If you are a veteran of this war with an honorable discharge, the government will pay tuition for correspondence courses up to $500. Make application at your nearest Veterans' administration office.

THE EVERYDAY LIFE OF A PEOPLE

LESSON TEXT: Ruth 1:8-17.
MEMORY SELECTION: Intreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee; for whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge; thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God.—Ruth 1:16.

A good life in the midst of a corrupt and confused age—such is the life of Ruth in the awful chaos of the time of the judges. One is reminded of the poet's words:

"How far that little candle throws its beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

It is refreshing to have a glimpse into the home life of God-fearing people who live right in spite of the low standards around them.

Ruth knew life's sorrows and its bitter disappointments. She was a widow, destitute of all she held most dear. Yet she, because of the sweet purity of her life and her devotion to God and those she loved, became an example for others.

As we read our lesson we first hear how logic speaks, then love replies, and finally a life says the final word.

I. Logic (vv. 8-13).

Tragic misfortune had visited Naomi, who with her husband and two sons had gone from Bethlehem to Moab in a time of famine. Not only had her husband died but also her two sons, who had married Gentile women, leaving three widows in one family to mourn together. Naomi craved the fellowship of her own people in her hour of trial, and she arose to return to her own land.

Her departure brought out in the two daughters-in-law the expression of kindness and loyalty which should exist in every family, but which is all too often lacking. Her own testimony concerning these girls of Moab is that they dealt kindly with her and with the dead. That word speaks volumes. There is so little genuine kindness in the world.

Both Orpah and Ruth went with her on the way, protesting their loyal purpose to go with her all the way.

Naomi met their kind offer with the only sensible answer. There was no point in leaving their homes and loved ones and going with her to another country.

Logic is so conclusive and so final. Yes, and sometimes it reaches the wrong conclusion. Love has something to say about the matter. Let us listen to its voice.

II. Love (v. 14).

Orpah loved her mother-in-law. That is evident. She wept at the thought of parting, and was affectionate in her final farewell. We must not be too quick to censure her. She did what Naomi told her to do. She responded to her love for home and kinfolk. She gave up reluctantly, but she did give up and turn back.

How glad we are that Ruth showed a deeper love. "Orpah kissed her mother-in-law, but Ruth clave unto her." There is a difference. Such love cannot be denied. It is the most precious possession that a man can have, apart from his fellowship with God. The love of a devoted father or mother, of a noble helpmate, or of a little boy or girl, these are the things that really make life worth while.

Life has put into the hands of many of us the opportunity of showing just that kind of love in these postwar days. A boy comes home crippled and disabled and a loyal sweetheart shows her undiminished love for him, even though he can never again be what he had expected to be. That is love. A mother and a father take to their hearts a promising young son who returns from overseas with a shattered nervous system, and give their lives anew to him. One could go on and on with such illustrations, but what we are saying is that it takes more than a kiss and some tears to express real love. "Ruth clave unto her." Such love expresses itself in a

III. Life (vv. 15-17).

Literature knows no more beautiful declaration of faith and devotion than these words, and nothing could improve on it. Lord Tennyson said of the book of Ruth that "no art can improve on it." And of these verses another said, "We cannot hope to contribute to literature a sentence so exquisite and thrilling as that into which Ruth poured the full measure of a noble heart, but we can imitate her devotion" (William Jennings Bryan).

The conclusion of the story finds Ruth married to Boaz, her kinsman-redeemer, and "living happily ever after," as a true romance should end. God gives happy endings.

Here we find the right attitude toward marriage, something which needs emphasis in our day. Above all, as we remember that Ruth was an ancestress of Jesus, we see anew the importance of clean, noble, godly living. What will the generations to come be able to say about our lives?

Lumber Company

Lloyd Sherwood, Mgr. Klemme, Iowa

You aren't getting machinery, Mr. Farmer, because...

PICKET LINES

have taken the place of

PRODUCTION LINES

...so don't blame your Implement Dealer!

YOUR implement dealer had planned and expected to have his display floor filled with new implements and tractors weeks ago. And we had planned to make them—had told our dealers and our farmer customers they would have new equipment and plenty of service parts for the 1946 spring work. And we had hoped to sell these machines at no advance in price.

Real Production Had Started

When the war ended, our organization bent every effort to increase production, with the result that in the last months of 1945 machinery was being built in very substantial quantities. Here are a few figures:

ITEM	PRODUCTION NOV. 1945	DEC. 1945
Tractors	7,271	7,432
Combines	2,245	2,526
Cultivators	3,482	3,309
Hay Loaders	209	982
Plows	6,185	6,702*

*Plows are made in our Canton and Chattanooga Works, which are not on strike. January production was 7,747 plows.

Both your dealer and we were encouraged by this production picture at the turn of the year. But the strike changed all that. As you know, the CIO United Farm Equipment & Metal Workers of America called a strike in ten of our plants, on January 21, 1946.

What Is The Strike About?

Wages are a basic issue. At the time of the strike, Harvester employes were among the highest paid workers in American industry. When the strike began, the average hourly earnings in the ten plants, not including overtime, were $1.15½. If present wage proposals are adopted, this figure will become $1.33½ per hour.

When the strike began, negotiations were broken off by the Union on the issue of compulsory union membership. The Company has no desire to weaken the Union. It recognizes certain reasonable needs of the Union. But the Company does oppose compulsory unionism. It feels strongly that an employe's membership should be a matter of his own choice.

Material Costs and Price Relief

Wages and materials are the great costs of operating our business—together they consume all but a few cents of every dollar the Company takes in. Wages are obviously going to be high—and nobody knows just how high material costs will go.

In the face of rising costs of materials, the Company does not see how it can pay the wage increases recommended by a Government fact finding board until it has definite and satisfactory assurance from the Government that reasonable price relief will be granted to the Company within a reasonable period of time. This matter is of such importance that it will not be discussed here but will be covered by future advertisements devoted to both prices and profits.

Speaking for our dealers and ourselves, we can assure you that no customer is more eager than we are to resume production. We are doing and shall continue to do everything in our power to bring about a fair settlement as soon as possible.

We proceed with sympathetic understanding and tender assistance. Our professional knowledge is your assurance of positive

ON THE JOB

"The diet and nutrition of every worker and the conditions under which he eats have a profound influence upon his mental and bodily health and upon his morale," states Dr. Robert S. Goodhart of the Industrial Feeding Programs Division, U. S. Department of Agriculture.

"Weakness, irritability, difficulty in concentrating, and a 'lazy' feeling toward work are ymptoms common to both fatigue and hunger. These are also some of the earliest signs of deficiencies of the B-Vitamins, thiamine and niacin, and also of Vitamin C, ascorbic acid. Malnutrition, not yet severe enough to be a real deficiency disease, still may be responsible for mental depression, indigestion, easy fatigue, loss of weight, slow learning ability, interference with vision, and clumsiness at jobs requiring skill with hands."

Let's Tackle Inflation While We Can

You don't want your dollars to buy less and less and less!

You don't want your savings to melt away! Or the value of your life insurance to dwindle!

Yet that is what inflation can do to all of us. Therefore, thoughtful people everywhere are concerned with ways to smother it before it gets out of hand.

One major cause of inflation is a shortage of goods when people have money to spend for things they want.

That cause can be eliminated by the production of goods — fast — in quantity.

BUT THERE'S A BOTTLENECK

During the war there wasn't enough labor and materials to meet the needs of war and still produce all the civilian goods people wanted and could buy.

Therefore price controls on civilian goods were substituted for competition to keep prices down.

Today this country has all the labor and materials necessary to turn out the things people want.

Yet goods are still scarce. Store shelves are still bare. The national pocketbook continues to bulge. Inflation grows.

Why? Because price controls in peacetime hinder the production of goods. Business cannot live by producing at a loss. And so, goods that can't be made to sell at the prices fixed by the government just don't get made.

Nor will the raising of price ceilings solve the problem. When costs and selling prices are subject to change at any moment by government action, production has to be on a day-to-day basis.

That means uncertainty . . . reduced output . . . more inflation.

ISN'T THIS THE ANSWER?

Remove price controls on manufactured goods and production will step up fast.

Goods will then pour into the market and, within a reasonable time, prices will adjust themselves naturally — as they always have — in line with the real worth of things.

Competition has never failed to produce this result.

This is the way you can get the goods you want at prices you can afford to pay.

Please think this over. Then tell your representatives in Congress what you believe should be done. You owe it to yourself . . . and to your country's welfare.

[LET'S SMOTHER INFLATION... A postcard addressed to the National Association of Manufacturers, 14 West 49th Street, New York 20, N. Y.; will bring your copy of a booklet explaining in detail why price controls cause inflation.]

Reds Charge Canada With Bad Faith in Atom Row; Strive to Hold New Stabilization Line

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Pointing up army warnings of short food supply in reich, Germans are shown scouring rubbish pile behind Allied barracks in Berlin for edibles.

ATOM SPIES:
Russ Reply

Canada's disclosure of an atom spy ring had ticklish diplomatic ramifications with Russia's angry protest against the dominion's announcement of the news without prior consultation with Moscow with a view toward correcting the situation.

Though admitting that the soviet military attache had received atomic information from Canadians, Moscow said the data was of a minor nature and the recipient official had been recalled when it learned of his activities It was hinted that dominion's action was calculated to impair Russian prestige at a time when the Reds were advancing the cause of independence for subject people in the United Nations organization.

In discussing the atomic information its military attache received, Moscow declared that it consisted of data already compiled by Russian scientists or included in a book by Dr. Henry Dewolfe Smyth of America. A consultant to the army on manufacture of the A-bomb, Smyth detailed atomic developments from the 1920s through the war, but omitted vital figures in the formula for producing the necessary materials.

As the Canadian case developed, pressure in this country increased for added safeguards for protecting America's secret of manufacturing the A-bomb. Declaring that more atomic information had been divulged since the introduction of the A-bomb than during actual work on the project, army men were said to have charged some of the leaks to scientists' discussions.

STABILIZATION:
New Rules

In determining wage adjustments under the new stabilization program formulated by the administration to clear the hurdle for postwar production, the stabilization board will permit pay increases within a pattern set for an industry, as in the case of oil, steel and automobiles where the figure of approximately 18 cents an hour was established.

To speed settlement of current disputes, the new order also permitted employers to grant wage increases without prior government approval in industries where pay patterns have been formed, or where only so-called "fringe" adjustments involving vacation and holiday pay and shift premiums are involved. Wherever any advances are made the basis for applications of higher ceilings, however, they must be submitted to the stabilization board for an o.k.

Reflecting increased provision against a rainy day and potential purchasing power, national savings jumped 20 billion dollars in 1944 for a total of 142 billion, the Institute of Life Insurance reported. Holdings included U.S. bonds, insurance, bank deposits, postal savings and accounts in savings and loan associations. The 142 billion dollars total exceeded record consumer purchases in 1945 by 40 per cent.

While only firms employing eight or less persons were exempted from the new stabilization regulations, government officials revealed that other companies may also be excluded if their wage adjustments do not have an inflationary effect.

While Stabilization Director Bowles admitted that the new wage-price policy constituted a "bulge" in the line against inflation, he declared that there would be no big break and ceilings would only be increased in cases where pay adjustments necessitated such action.

Because labor outlays make up a relatively smaller item in such goods and services as food, clothing and rent, Bowles said, major living costs should remain comparatively stable. In the metal industries where labor expenses are higher, however, prices can be expected to show appreciable increases.

Congressional reaction to the new policy in congress was mixed. House Speaker Rayburn (Dem., Texas) declared it was a step in the right direction but could not be expected to solve all our economic problems. Rep. Case (Rep., S. D.) said it was regrettable President Truman had been "backed against a wall where he thought it was necessary to toss collective bargaining and freedom out of the window and resort to totalitarian methods again."

EMPIRE:
Diplomatic Test

Continued, costly political rioting in Egypt and India pointed up the pressing problems facing postwar British diplomacy in the preservation of important military and economic outposts in the far-flung empire.

Led by student agitators, crying for retirement of British troops from strategic coastal bases and the rejoining of Sudan with the Egyptian government, mobs stormed through Cairo smashing windows, desecrating Christian churches and attacking military barracks. Known for his strong inclination to order, new Premier Sidky Pasha, while professing sympathy with national aspirations, threatened to use an iron hand in restoring calm.

In India, mobs took the mutiny of native imperial seamen as an occasion of wild rioting, looting shops, burning busses and street cars and destructive stoning. In rebelling in a number of royal naval installations, the Indian sailors charged discrimination in demobilization and pay allowances and fought pitched battles with British forces seeking to regain seized positions.

Meanwhile, Foreign Minister Bevin told commons in a review of the international situation: "I am not prepared to sacrifice the British empire because I know that if the British empire fell the greatest collection of free nations would go into the limbo of the past. . . ."

ROME:
Church Program

Calling for international spiritual unity, Pope Pius XII presented the Catholic church's program for peace during ceremonies creating 32 new cardinals, including Francis J. Spellman of New York, John J. Glennon of St. Louis, Samuel A. Stritch of Chicago and Edward Mooney of Detroit.

Stating that only through spiritual unity tying men together in mutual respect could mankind be expected to resolve its common problems, the Holy Father decried political imperialism which aimed toward the seizure of material riches and human oppression.

Vigorously denying that the Catholic church sought temporal sovereignty, the pope said that its program called for spiritual unity, with dignification of the individual the basis for preserving his liberty and advancing the welfare of state and family. Pointing to the world-wide representation in the college of cardinals, the pontiff declared it reflected the aspirations of all peoples.

MEAT:

World meat ouput in 1945, excluding Asia and relatively unimportant countries in Africa and Latin America, totaled about 59 billion pounds, according to the department of agriculture. This is a drop of 6.8 billion pounds from 1944.

The reduced output in 1945 reflects the war losses of livestock in European areas; declining feed supplies in many countries and unfavorable pasture conditions.

War Plants for Sale

Over 500 of a total of 628 government-owned industrial plants employed by the war department have been declared surplus and have been or are in the process of being disposed of, it was revealed.

Of the 504 plants, 439, representing an investment of approximately $3,815,000,000, have been formally released to the War Assets corporation for sale, lease, or other disposition.

GERMANY:
Private Relief

As a result of President Truman's approval of the establishment of a private relief council composed of religious, labor and social agencies, needy Germans may receive up to 2,000 tons of supplies each month if shipping and port facilities allow.

Set up after heavy pressure had been exerted for the alleviation of starvation and privation in the conquered Reich out of humanitarian considerations, the new council, known as CRALOG, will include the American Friends Service committee, Brethren Service committee, Christian Science War Relief committee, Church Committee on Overseas Relief and Reconstruction, International Rescue and Relief committee, Labor League for Human Rights (AFL), Lutheran World Relief, Inc., Mennonite Central committee, National CIO Community Service committee, Unitarian Service committee, and the National Catholic Welfare conference.

With the U. S. army in over-all control, and a CRALOG representative checking on distribution and surveying needs shipments will include evaporated and powdered milk, sugar, fats, clothing and shoes and medical supplies.

Relief Racket

With the shipment of private relief packages to European countries outside of Germany growing into a big business, the OPA moved against fraudulent operators in New York City accused of overcharging clients for food deliveries to Europe.

Begun four months ago when government officials noticed the discrepancies between the prices and contents of packages, investigations reportedly disclosed that cheaper foods were being substituted, items listed were not enclosed, excess postage was charged and insurance fees were asked on uninsured parcels.

With several hundred companies already engaged in the business, firms are now shipping packages at the rate of 3,500,000 a year.

Connie Still Bosses A's

As the major league baseball teams, strengthened once again by return of their stars from the service, opened spring training in the sunny southern and western climes, 83-year-old Connie Mack was on hand to greet his Philadelphia Athletics at West Palm Beach, Fla.

Manager of the A's since 1901 and winner of nine American League pennants and five World Series, the soft-spoken, balding diamond wizard gathered a group of hustling youngsters about him in another effort to develop a championship club from promising raw material. So had he built up his great teams of 1910-'14 and 1929-'31 and so he would try again, leaving the other clubs to build around expensive stars purchased around the circuit.

Connie Mack greets A's.

As the A's settled down to work, interest centered on 6-foot 4-inch Dick Fowler, who pitched a no-hitter against the Browns last year, and Eddie Collins Jr., a Yale graduate and son of the former great second baseman who paced Mack's famed 1910-'14 aggregation.

VETS:
Unemployment High

Speaking at a meeting of the American Legion's national employment committee, designed to spur community services for vet hiring, Gen. Omar Bradley declared that 13 per cent of the G.I.s in the labor force remained jobless, with 1,035,000 receiving unemployment compensation in the early part of February.

The relatively high percentage of unemployed vets contrasted with the general rate, Bradley said, stating that only 5 per cent of males in the labor force were out of work, and the total jobless approximated 4 per cent.

Employment of disabled vets has similarly lagged, Bradley said, with the hiring of handicapped G.I.s three times behind applications in September and even lower in December and January.

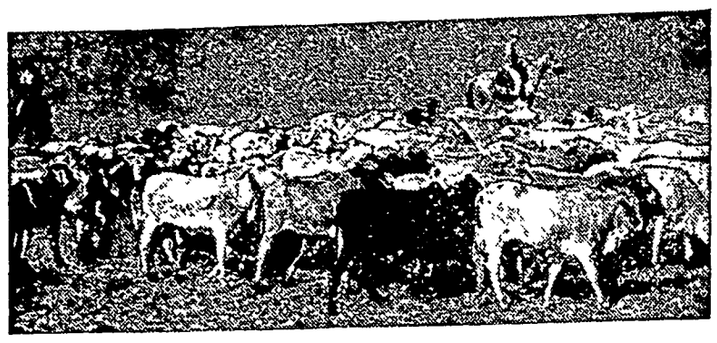
WHEAT:

When flour mills, under new wheat conservation measures, begin milling flour containing 80 per cent of the wheat, this country still will have a lower milling percentage than most of the rest of the world, the department of agriculture reported.

In practically all of Europe and Russia, wheat flour extraction rates for bread are 85 to 90 per cent, according to reports received by the Office of Foreign Agricultural Relations.

Cattle Of The Future?

Ike and Mike, "they look alike," winning pair of Brahman steers at recent Brahman show at Ocala, Fla., owned by Norris Cattle company. Below: Florida cowpunchers and a herd of Brahmans, the big, humped cattle that are so well adapted to warm climates.



Claim Brahman Cattle Best for Southern States

OCALA, FLA. — Brahman cattle graze in the heat, are healthier and more resistant to disease and insect pests, their calves weigh 91 pounds per head more than Herefords and Shorthorns as they come from the pasture at seven months old, they draw 28.44 per cent more money on the packer market, their meat shrinks less and has a higher dressing per cent, and the meat scores highest in texture, flavor and tenderness.

That, at least, is the claim of the Florida Brahman Breeders' association in describing "Florida's cattle of the future."

Likewise, J. M. Frost of Houston, Texas, president of the American Brahma Breeders' association, praises the quality of the breed. Edgar Hudgins of Hungerford, Texas, owner of the largest Brahma herd in that state, declares these hardy cattle are exceptionally adaptable to all of the South. All of them say, "Buy Brahmans."

More than $50,000 of these cattle were sold at auction when the second annual registered Brahman show was held here recently.

Distinguished by a "hump"above the shoulders, Brahman cattle are seen in most places only in rodeos or zoos. Taller and heavier-boned than the average domestic cow, they are rugged and show great endurance.

One of Florida's best known Brahman breeders is James Norris, a Chicago grain man, owner of Norris Cattle company of Ocala. He owns two farms known as Anthony Farms, near here. He also has a 25,000-acre ranch in Florida and his combined operations are the largest in this section.

"Twenty-five years ago Florida was a wild forest beyond the city limits," J. M. Lee, state comptroller, said recently. "Now Florida's fields and soil are producing. The state is almost out in the lead as a stock-producing region."

VETS PILOT TRAINING

What are the chances for veterans receiving pilot training under the G.I. Bill of Rights? Not too bright, but they have improved slightly. The Veterans' administration has granted educational institutions the right to judge what elective courses may come within college study under the G.I. Bill of Rights. Therefore, if a student wants to take flying lessons along with his other studies, he may do so if he works out an agreement with the school in which he's enrolled. Of course, the veteran will have to find a school near an aircraft training service, and the $500 limit won't go far in flight training, especially when it's an elective taken in addition to other studies. Congress will have to amend the B. of R. before the veteran can have any real assurance that his government-paid education can consist of pilot training.

War department officials have promised Sen. Pat McCarran of Nevada that his state will be given an opportunity to form a national guard air fighter squadron, according to the Reese River Reveille, published at Austin, Nevada. Flying Tigers Freight Line

The National Skyway Freight corporation is doing a coast-to-coast business out of the Long Beach municipal airport. The new freight line is known as the "Flying Tiger Line," because it is headed by Bob Prescott, formerly of Fort Worth, Texas, and Duke Hedman, former South Dakota farm boy, both of whom served with General Claire Chennault's Flying Tigers in China, Burma and India. These "hump" flyers know what freight hauling is all about.

EDITOR FINDS NEW ERCOUPE HANDLES LIKE AUTOMOBILE

CHATSWORTH, ILL.—Readers of the Chatsworth Plaindealer found this interesting comment by Editor S. J. Porterfield on the front page recently:

"Flying the new Ercoupe, the editor of this paper made his first attempt at flying recently, and it was conclusively demonstrated to him that flying can be made almost as easy as driving a car.

S. J. Porterfield

"First came a few minutes of ground instruction while in the cockpit of the Ercoupe which gave the passenger a chance to look over the instruments. Then the engine was started and allowed to warm up. A few taxiing runs were made up and down the field with the editor handling the controls. The Ercoupe steered just like an automobile. Next we made the take off run and in a few minutes we were in the air. During all the time of the flight until just before the landing run, your editor did all the flying with the exception of handling the throttle."

How Vets Buy Planes

After state, federal and local governments get a crack at surplus planes and aviation supplies, the veteran then has first priority. To buy surplus equipment, the veteran must make an application to the Smaller War Plants corporation which checks his situation and certifies him, if he is eligible, to the appropriate disposal agency. He will be given the same terms allowed anyone else, regardless of the size of his purchase. Improvements are being made in the sales setup.

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

WALLGREN AND LUMBER

WASHINGTON. — Lumber price ceilings topped the agenda of the President's conference the other day with his old friend Gov. Mon Wallgren at Washington.

However, Wallgren also took occasion to invite Truman to spend a vacation this summer in the northwest aboard the presidential yacht.

"The people of my state would be delighted to have you as a guest, and you can also take a trip up to Alaska on the Williamsburg," Wallgren told him.

Truman accepted tentatively, saying he would go if he could possibly make it.

Wallgren's main business, however, was to strongly urge an increase in the price ceilings on lumber. He maintained that this was necessary in order to increase lumber output for the housing program.

"We are facing a serious job crisis in our lumber mills, Harry," said the Washington governor. "We have a model unemployment compensation law in my state, but many unemployed workmen are swiftly using up the 26 weeks they are entitled to draw as compensation. Both from the labor standpoint and the housing shortage, inventories in our mills must be built up as quickly as possible."

IDLE WAR PLANTS

Governor Wallgren also urged the sale of government-owned light metal plants, now idle in his area, to private operators as another means of increasing employment. Two idle plants in question are the Aluminum Rolling mill and the Aluminum Ingot companies at Spokane, operated by Alcoa during the war. Henry Kaiser wants to buy the former for the production of aluminum-built automobiles and prefabricated housing.

Wallgren told Truman that the lumber situation has been aggravated by a neat little device of certain big timber outfits, including the Weyerhauser interests, which, calculatedly or otherwise, has been stifling competition. Under the Washington constitution, the state government must sell timber to the highest bidder, but some big outfits have been bidding over the price ceilings. This causes all bids to be thrown out.

The President said he would talk to the RFC about the plants, but suggested that Wallgren thrash out his lumber price problems with price control boss Chester Bowles.

BUTTER BLACK MARKET

The office of international trade, now under the commerce department, is planning to ask U. S. customs officials to investigate some strange shenanigans in the re-sale of butter this country has been exporting to Mexico.

Despite the serious butter shortage, which has caused the American housewife to turn to substitutes and jam for her table, we sent 5,500 pounds of butter to Mexico in the last quarter of 1945.

Some of this is now winding up at Tiajuana, the Mexican resort town across the border from San Diego, where the butter is being sold to American tourists for the fabulous price of $1.25 a pound.

Under export price ceilings, enforced by the OPA and the department of commerce, this same butter was sold to Mexican dealers at from 47 to 49 cents a pound. The price varies a couple of cents a pound, depending on the type of packaging.

In other words, we are now buying back American-made butter from Mexico for triple the price Mexican dairy dealers are paying us for it. Commerce department officials can only guess how much smuggled butter may be involved in this cross-border black market, but the customs office will be asked to make a thorough probe.

NOTE—Mexico is also one of our biggest purchasers of exported nylon stockings. Out of a total of 9,110 dozen pairs of nylons exported in November—the last monthly figures available—Mexico bought 5,010 dozen pairs. Cuba received 2,603 dozen pairs.

CAPITAL CHAFF

One reason for the current international food shortage is that Leo Crowley, when FEA boss, refused to heed the warning of Secretary of Agriculture Anderson last summer, when Anderson argued that FEA should help increase plantings of winter wheat, cereals and proteins in South America. The South American crop was hit by drouth, or it might have been larger.

Sen. Tommy Hart, the only admiral on the senate military affairs committee, recently asked committee members if there were a dictaphone in the walls. He complained that the Washington Merry-Go-Round had quoted him all too accurately when, at a secret session, he defended the war department regarding demobilization. . . . Rep. Clare Hoffman of Michigan, who considers himself an expert at anti-labor legislation, was miffed because he was not consulted in the writing of the harsh Case bill passed by the house recently.

have shown that the air under a single wooden floor must be maintained at an average of 7½ degrees warmer than the air of the house in order to produce dry litter.

Poultry can stand and need plenty of fresh air, but must be free from drafts. An open-front house with ventilators at the rear provides a sufficiency of ventilation and protection. The ventilators at the rear of the house, near the top, may be hinged at either top or bottom and open out. Drafts directly on the birds are conducive to roup and colds. A house that is poorly ventilated is damp, close and unhealthy.

Locate the poultry house on well-drained soil with a southern or southeastern slope. Consideration should also be given to its location in relation with central feed, water supply and location of other farm buildings. The future expansion of poultry flock should be borne in mind. Make a complete plan of the poultry section as you expect to have it eventually, so that all buildings are located conveniently.

There are several types of roofs which will prove satisfactory for the poultry house. The uneven span roof looks better on a single story house. However, cost must again be the main consideration.

Before actual construction is started it will be well to consult building supply dealers in order that costs of various types of material may be considered. Whether the laying house be constructed of lumber, building blocks or concrete should be largely determined by price, considering durability.

The construction of proper nests, roosts and feed equipment should be well planned. This work can be done ahead, as rain and show day chores.

All equipment in the poultry laying house should be built off the floor, not only as an aid to cleaning, but as it will provide more floor space for the fowls. By raising the drinking fountains and food hoppers at least 18 inches from the floor, exercise is encouraged by forcing the birds to jump or fly up.

Whether or not dropping boards are provided will depend upon the individual farmer. When dropping boards are provided, chicken wire should be placed under the roosts to keep the hens off the droppings. When a pit is provided instead of the dropping boards, it must be built so that the chickens are kept out.

Whenever possible the house should be constructed with the idea that considerable expansion will take place and that it can be added to.

Nevada's 'Lost' Turquoise Mine May Yield Finder Huge Fortune

GOLDFIELD, NEV.—A "lost" turquoise mine within 12 or 14 miles of Goldfield, if found, may bring riches to someone, according to a story published in the Tonopah Times-Bonzana recently, which quotes the experience of Harry Polin.

About 1908, when Polin was in business in Goldfield, he received an inquiry from Tiffany's, New York City, asking who could ship that firm about 100 pounds of turquoise. Polin later asked an old prospector if he could locate some turquoise.

"Sure, sure," the prospector replied. "I got a lot of that stuff—ain't worth anything, is it?"

In time the prospector appeared with two or three ore sacks of material he claimed was turquoise. The stuff was in large chunks, and Harry took it to be copper ore. Doubtful of its value, he boxed it and shipped it to Tiffany. Imagine his surprise two weeks later when he received a check from Tiffany for $500!

And a request for another shipment!

It was some time before the prospector showed up at the store again. When Polin handed him $250 in currency the old fellow almost collapsed. He lost no time in bringing in more of the turquoise, and this time delivered some four sacks of the gemstone. Harry asked him where he was getting it.

The prospector did his best to describe the location of the mine. He explained it was in the Cuprite district, some 12 to 14 miles south of Goldfield.

The next check from Tiffany's was for $1,000, and Polin waited for the old fellow to come back for his share. The prospector never returned, and no one else has ever been able to locate that fabulous turquoise mine, said to be within a dozen miles of this town.

PRETTY . . . But can she ski? Anyway, Georgia Veal of the Bronx is apparently enjoying the winter sports at the Mountain Top Club on Mount Tronso near Chittenden, Vermont.

General, Admiral Agree U. S. Will Be Attacked First

WASHINGTON. — If there is a World War III, the aggressor's first move will be an attack on the United States, Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz declared here.

"Two world wars have shown beyond dispute that the United States is the real barrier to anyone dreaming of conquest," he said in an address prepared for the Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense.

A few days later, in Chicago, a similar statement was made by Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright, hero of Bataan.

"If war comes again, I firmly believe we will be the first nation attacked," Wainwright said. "Our oceans will be less of a barrier than was the Delaware river to George Washington's little army in 1777."

Both urged universal military training and preparedness against attack. General Wainwright also called for a merger of the armed forces.

Will 1946 Bring Worst Drouth In 100 Years?

BOWLING GREEN, OHIO. — Parts of the United States will suffer one of the most severe drouths in a hundred years, if the weather forecast worked out by Dr. Edwin L. Moseley, professor emeritus at Bowling Green State university, comes true.

His predictions, however, are not for all of the United States, but for those regions in the northeast portion of the nation. Dr. Moseley, who has been making predictions for the past 10 years, bases his opinions on sunspots and tree rings.

Until June, rainfall will be normal, and then will follow a drouth of several months.

"The drouth will be less severe in Illinois and Iowa than farther east," he said. "It will be one of the driest years for a century in New York, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Ohio and Kentucky.

"Lake Erie, however, will make the drouth less severe in the northern part of Ohio than any other part," he added. "We have few crop failures here, for there are neither drouths nor floods."

Living Cheap in Kentucky in 1853

CYNTHIANA, KY. — Those were the good old days! The cost of living in Kentucky a century ago was revealed here recently when Sam W. Arnold found an old receipted store bill while remodeling a house, according to a story published in the Cynthiana Democrat.

The bill, dated in 1853, was made out to "Sam'l Erwalt, in account with T. D. Urmston." Among the items charged to Erwalt were:

"Pair fine boots, $6.50; bed cord, 35c; hog skin collar, $1.25; 25 cigars, 25c; halfsole and repair of boots, 75c; 8 lbs. nails, 56c; pair coarse shoes, $1.75; wagon whip, 75c; 8 lbs. coffee, $1.13, and ½ lb. pepper, 13c."

Credits to Erwalt included four hides at $2.17, $2.66, $1.99 and $2.22 respectively, and a calfskin at 25 cents.

Well, He Could Have Rented His Apartment—

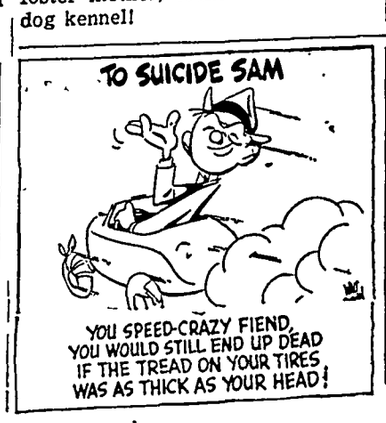
ATLANTA, GA. — Jackson P. Dick has his telephone connected again, and hopes his friends who love practical jokes will let him alone for a while.

He was forced to have his telephone disconnected recently when someone ran a "for rent" advertisement and listed Dick's number to call.

The advertisement offered a four-room house for rent and Dick received more than 500 calls before he gave up and asked the telephone company to disconnect the instrument.

Jackson is still pretty mad at his screwball friends.

JASCHA HEIFETZ . . . Noted violinist made three trips overseas to play for servicemen during the war, gave hundreds of concerts, and played several times when he had a fever of 102. "My face swelled up like a balloon and my hands were a couple of hams," he admitted recently. "Hives, my boy, hives!"



Boucher Praises 4-H

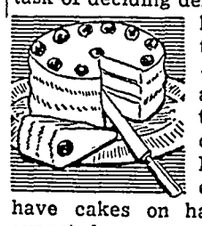
LINCOLN, NEB.—Chancellor C. S. Boucher of the University of Nebraska described 4-H clubs as one of the nation's chief bulwarks against all forms of government which seek to undermine American democracy, in an address before Nebraska 4-H club leaders.

"The condition and life expectancy of a democracy can be ascertained by observation of the character and quality of its youth movement," Boucher said.

Serve Cake for Your Sunday Best

(See Recipes Below)

Distinctive Cakes



Homemakers will approach the task of deciding desserts more lightheartedly when there's a luscious cake stored away in the mysterious recesses of the cupboard. Besides, it's an elegant idea to have cakes on hand in case unexpected guests drop in.

Then, too, those of you who want to raise money for your church or club group might want to have a sale of home-baked goods. Cakes, of course, will bring handsome profits if the cakes are light and feathery, and frosted beautifully.

When making a cake, try using a cake or pastry flour. These flours, made of soft wheat, contain less gluten than all-purpose flour, and will give cake a better, softer texture. Follow the methods given, either that of creaming the shortening and sugar, or using the one-bowl method. Recipes must be tested for each type of method, and it is best to use the directions as they are given here.

All the cake recipes have been tested for freshness. You'll find they keep exceedingly well when covered or kept in a cake tin.

From the south comes this yummy cake with the unusual flavor of pecans in its base:

Pecan Cake.

3 cups pecans, finely ground
6 eggs
1 cup sugar
1 tablespoon flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon vanilla

Beat the egg yolks until light, add sugar gradually. Add nuts to the flour which has been sifted with salt and baking powder. Stir in stiffly-beaten egg whites and flavoring. Pour into two eight-inch pans which have been well greased and lined with greased waxed paper. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for 35 to 40 minutes. Top lightly with sweetened whipped cream and fresh fruit. Bananas, pineapple, raspberries and strawberries are a treat!

If you want a cake with a melt-in-your-mouth quality try a spice cake made with sour cream and a fine combination of spices. There's interesting texture and flavor given from the mashed bananas that go into the cake itself.

Spice Cake.

½ cup butter or shortening
1½ cups brown sugar
4 eggs
3 bananas, mashed fine

LYNN SAYS

When You Buy, Take Care: If you are selecting poultry, see that the bird is plump, firm and well-rounded. The skin should be smooth and without discoloration. Clear, even yellow-white color is best. Avoid birds that look extremely blue or gray. Look for a flexible breast bone, smooth feet and claws for roasting, broiling or frying purposes.

In buying fish, be sure that the flesh is firmly attached to the backbone. This flesh should show no mark when pressed with the thumb. There will be little fishy smell if the fish is really fresh. The eyes should be clear and bulging, not sunken.

Vegetables should be firm, full-bodied and fresh appearing. Guard against wilted, shriveled tops, and bruises. Any vegetables which are in the pod should be moist, not dry.

Look for fruits that are as fresh as possible—firm and full-bodied. It is best to buy by weight rather than by bunches or the dozen.

LYNN CHAMBERS' MENU IDEAS

Macaroni-Cheese Loaf
Tossed Carrot Salad Green Peas
Whole Wheat Bread
Jam or Jelly
Ice Cream with Butterscotch Sauce
Beverage

1 cup sour milk
2 teaspoons cinnamon
½ teaspoon each, nutmeg, allspice, cloves
2½ cups cake flour
3 teaspoons baking powder

Cream together the butter and sugar, add beaten egg yolks and bananas. Sift dry ingredients and add alternately with the milk. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake in layer cake pans or large oblong pan.

Marshmallow Icing.

Combine 2 unbeaten egg whites with 1½ cups granulated sugar. Add 1½ teaspoons corn syrup and 5 tablespoons water. Cook rapidly over boiling water for seven minutes, beating constantly with a rotary beater. Then add 8 marshmallows which have been softened over hot water. Add 1 teaspoon vanilla extract and beat until icing stands in peaks. Spread on cooled cake and dot primly with bits of maraschino or candied cherries.

If you want to save time and energy, you will want to use this frosty lemon cake right away. It's made in one bowl and requires only accurate measurements and a specified amount of beating time.

Frosty Lemon Cake.

2 cups sifted cake flour
1¼ cups sugar
3½ teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
⅓ cup shortening
1 cup milk
1¾ teaspoons vanilla
3 egg whites, unbeaten

Put dry ingredients—flour, sugar, baking powder, salt and shortening—in one large bowl. Add about ⅔ of the milk, then vanilla and beat until smooth. Add remaining milk and egg whites before 100 strokes have been completed. Scrape bowl and spoon often during mixing. The batter will be quite thin, but very smooth. Bake in two greased 8-inch cake tins in a moderate oven (350 degrees) 30 to 35 minutes. Spread lemon filling between the layers and dust with powdered sugar.

Lemon Filling.

¾ cup sugar
3 tablespoons flour
⅛ teaspoon salt
¼ cup lemon juice
Grated rind of 1 lemon
½ cup water
3 egg yolks, slightly beaten

Mix sugar, flour, salt together. Add lemon juice and rind and mix well. Add water and egg yolks. Blend carefully. Place over hot water and cook until smooth and thick, stirring constantly (about 15 minutes). Cool and spread between cake layers.

Chocolate Cake Filling.

1 square unsweetened chocolate
¾ cup milk
6 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons flour
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon butter
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ cup cream, whipped

Add chocolate to milk in double boiler. When chocolate is melted, beat with a rotary egg beater until well blended. Combine sugar, flour and salt and add gradually to chocolate mixture. Cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Then cook five minutes, stirring occasionally. Add butter and vanilla. Chill thoroughly, then fold in whipped cream.

Note: ½ cup chopped walnut meats may be added to the above filling.

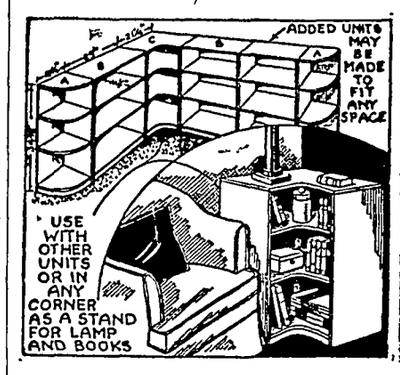
Add Shelf Units With One for the Corner

IF YOU want shelves on one side of the room only, one or more of the B units shown here with an A unit at each end is a smart combination. If you wish to run the shelves around two sides of the room, a corner unit, shown at C, will also be needed.

* * *

All of the units in the sketch are well proportioned with deep shelves and are especially designed to be made by the man who is handy with hammer and saw. Patterns are available with actual-size cutting guides for the curved shelves. Stock widths of lumber are used and the pattern lists all materials needed. Only the simplest hand tools are required.



The A and B units are made with pattern 270; the C unit for the corner with 271. Patterns are 15 cents each or 25 cents for both patterns mailed to one address. Send requests for patterns direct to Mrs. Spears.

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

WILL REFUND USO SURPLUS IN COUNTY

Klemme Will Receive Refund Of $80.62

A special committee has completed a report on the Hancock County War Chest, local unit of the National War Fund, which shows that a total of $2,-249.52 will be refunded to the various towns and townships because of oversubscriptions in the 3 War Chest drives in this county. The amount of refund is based on the oversubscription of quota in each case.

Amounts for individual towns and townships are as follows, the first figure being the total collected in the 3 drives and the second figure being the amount of the refund:

Collected	Refund
Britt $3,852.70	$235.34
Corwith $990.50	74.54
Crystal Lake $580.00	35.80

Goodell $398.75	22.97
Kanawha $1,659.85	135.12

Liberty $1,398.25	87.83
Madison $1,386.05	84.45
Magor $1,512.00	119.13
Orthel $1,605.35	145.03
Twin Lake $1,374.25	81.07

Britt township was the only one not getting a refund because it did not make its total quota in the 3 drives.

The community chairman and his workers will decide how to use this refunded money, and if they will notify Dr. C. V. Hamilton, Garner, chairman of the Hancock County War Chest, a check will be wirtten for the refund allotted to each community. Charitable organizations wishing to share in this money should contact the War Chest chairman in the respective towns and townships.

There will be a U. S. O. drive alone next fall and any town or township wishing to give this refunded money to the U. S. O. may do so. The U. S. O. received a portion of the money donated to the National War Fund in previous years, but there will be no further National War Chest drive.

Returned Home From 3,500 Trip Through South

Mr. and Mrs. Art Schoenwetter and Mrs. Fred Schlichting returned home last Wednesday from a 3,500 mile trip.

They went to Jennings, La., where they visited with the Carl Suckow family, whom they found well and happy. Warren and Dean Suckow are both home from the service and have gone into the oil business with their father.

On the homeward trip the Iowa party drove into Colorado and visited with the Ray Yeagers near Denver, whom they also found in good health and getting along fine.

The Schoenwetters and Mrs. Schlichting drove through the scenic Ozarks through Missouri and Arkansas on the way to the southland, and also enjoyed the trip through beautiful Colorado.

MRS. HAROLD SWALVE

Crystal Lake—In the Methodist church at Crystal Lake, Miss Lois Sorenson, the foster daughter of Mrs. Carrie Sorenson, was given in marriage by her father, Edmund Sorenson, to Harold Swalve, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Swalve of Klemme, March 11, the Rev. G. Hjelmaas officiating.

Attending the bride was Lorraine Knoll of Garner as bridesmaid. Wilbur Sorenson, cousin of the bride, acted as bestman. Flower girls were Joan Sorenson, niece of the bride, and Dorothy Sorenson, half sister of the bride. Roland Schubert, nephew of the bride, acted as ringbearer.

The "Lohrengrin" processional and Mendelssohn's recessional were played by Miss Gwendolyn Dueland at the piano, and Mrs. Jeff Rensink, at the organ. Preceding the ceremony Miss Betty Kirkpartick sang.

Ushers were Kenneth Sorenson, brother of the bride, and Walt Greiman.

A wedding luncheon was served at the church parlors for 70 guests. During the reception Miss Jean Ingebretson sang, accompanied by Gwendolyn Dueland. The Misses Doris Volding, Sylvia Jensen, Vera Lonning, Mrs. Dean Crone, Mrs. Elmer Jensen, Mrs. Art Lonning, Mrs. Rhiner Hartman and Mrs. Gerald Volding assisted in serving.

Among those who came from a distance to attend the wedding were Miss Wilma Swalve, sister of the groom, and Seaman Howard Whitescarver, both of Omaha, Nebraska.

The bride, who has made her home with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Sorenson, since infancy, was graduated from the Crystal Lake high school. For the past year she has been employed in the L. A. Nelson store in Crystal Lake.

The bridegroom who was graduafed from the Klemme high school has since been engaged in farming with his father.

After a week's trip they will make their home on a farm near Klemme.

SHAMROCKS LOST IN FIRST ROUND

North Iowa Clubs Were All Eliminated

All of North Iowa's contenders for berths in the state basketball tournament, Mason City, and Charles City in class A and Klemme and Ventura in class B were eliminated in the Sub-State tournament at Cedar Falls the past week.

Ventura went down on the second round to Montour after winning their first round decisively over Lawler. Klemme was defeated by Lansing. Mason City fell before Newton and Charles City lost to Cedar Falls.

Lansing had little trouble eliminating the Shamrocks on Wednesday evening. Three free throws by Dean Jacobs and a field goal each by Ronald Brinkman and Ed Grosshuesch put Klemme ahead 7-4 at the end of the first quarter but Klemme failed to get another field goal until the 4th period when Jim Thomas looped in one. Klemme 18 points consisted of 3 field goals and 12 free throws: 4 by Brinkman, 2 by Grosshuesch, and 6 by Jacobs.

The Lansing teom specialized in long passes and they clicked to near perfection defensively which prevented the Shamrocks from working the ball in close and most of the Klemme shots were mostly hurried.

Brinkman, Grosshuesch, Jacobs, Thomas, Baack and Carolus all saw service on the team.

Klemme was well represented at the tournament the night the Shamrocks played and over 100 fans made the trip to support the Shamrocks. Friday night another bus load from Klemme, including Coach A. L. Kingery and the Shamrock squad took in the games at Cedar Falls.

The 1945-46 Shamrocks have set up a record, being the only Shamrock team to win both a section and district and compete in a sub-state tournament.

IOWA BEATS ALASKA IN VALUE OF FURS

Iowa Trappers Had One Of Best Seasons

Iowa trappers harvested the second most valuable fur crop in the history of the state during the 1945-'46 trapping season, according to F. T. Schwob director of the State Conservation Commission. During the 30 day muskrat and mink, and the 60 day open season on other protected fur bearing animals, a total of 624,565 furs valued at $2,630,644.71 were taken.

There were 13,537 licensed trappers during the season, plus approximately an equall number who trapped on their own land, where no license is required.

Mink, for the first time, exceeded in total value the muskrat, which in the past has been the number one fur bearing animal. Mink commanded the highest average prive ever recorded, $28.16, with individual pelts reaching the almost unbelievable maximum of $40.00 each. Only two fur bearers, red fox and coyote, decreased in value in 1946, the rest increased. Except for beaver which increased from $16.15 to $28.16, the price raises were slight. The total number of animals trapped decreased during the current season some 30,477 individuals. Decreases were recorded for opossum, muskrat, skunk and badger; increases for racoon, mink, civet, red fox, weasel, coyote and beaver.

Iowa's annual fur crop exceeded Alaska's in value this year by more than one million dollars. Proving once again that our great "corn and hog state," can, and does grow game.

It takes about 10 pounds of soft corn to provide the same amount of nutrients as 8 lbs. of dry corn.

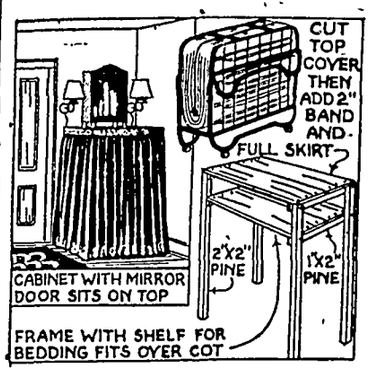
Practical Covering for Folding Cot Facilitating Over-Night Hospi

By Ruth Wyeth Spears



CUT TOP COVER THEN ADD 2" BAND AND FULL SKIRT CABINET WITH MIRROR DOOR SITS ON TOP
2"X2" PINE
1"X2" PINE
FRAME WITH SHELF FOR BEDDING FITS OVER COT

SOME people have a talent for making guests comfortable without a big house or even a spare room. Here is how one clever homemaker solved this problem by making an attractive and practical cover for a folding cot.

A wooden frame with a bedding shelf at the top was made to fit over the cot. This was covered with a full skirt of blue denim trimmed in bands of blue and red chintz. The mirror-door medicine cabinet on top had feet made of spools glued in place. It was painted blue outside and red inside. Another thoughtful touch was the good lighting for the mirror with wall brackets connected with a floor outlet.

This homemaking idea is from BOOK 7 which also contains many useful suggestions for the modern homemaker. Copies are 15 cents each. Requests for booklets direct to:

Post-Civil-War Industrial Development Made Many Millionaires

So tremendous was the industrial development in this country for two decades after the Civil War that it produced several hundred millionaires, says Collier's.

Between 1890 and 1910 more than 500 daughters of such millionaires were married to titled Europeans. As the majority of the husbands were poor, the total cost of these international alliances to the families of the girls has been estimated at 220 million dollars.

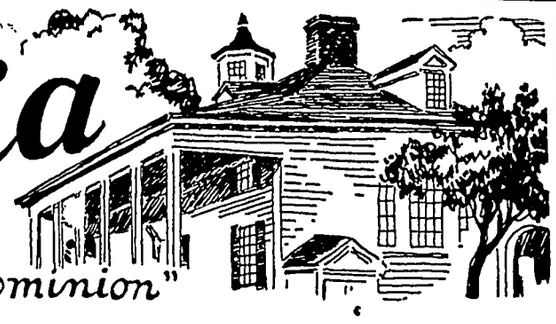
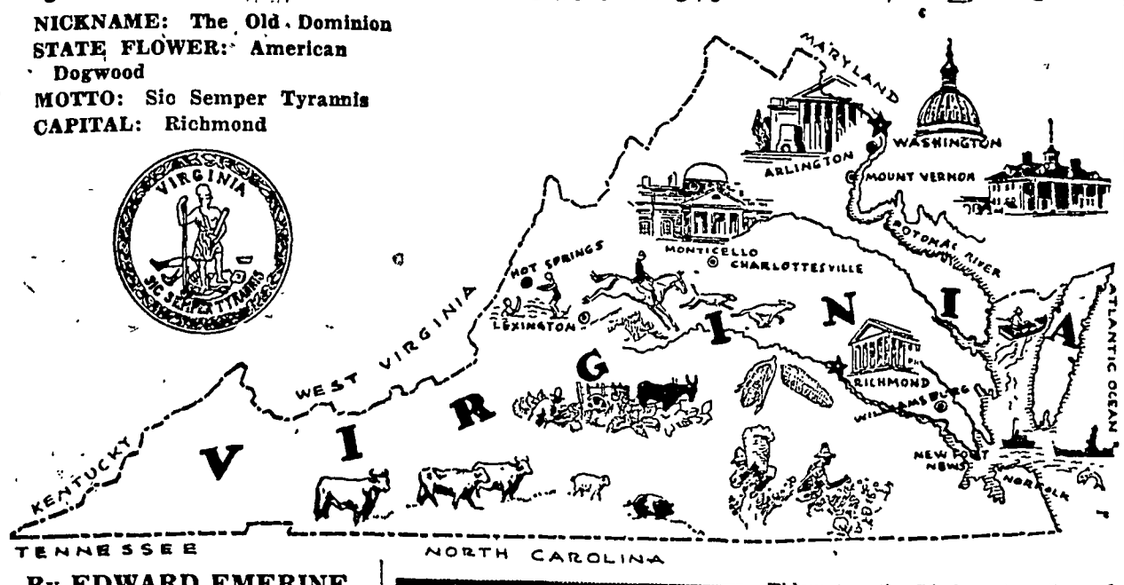
Carry Me Back To Old Virginia

"The Old Dominion"



NICKNAME: The Old Dominion
STATE FLOWER: American Dogwood
MOTTO: Sic Semper Tyrannis
CAPITAL: Richmond



By EDWARD EMERINE
WNU Features

The roses nowhere
Bloom so white,
As in Virginia;
The sunshine nowhere
Seems so bright,
As in Virginia.

WITH traditional leisure, charm and graciousness, Virginia proudly upholds its titles of "Old Dominion," "Cradle of a Nation," and "Birthplace of Presidents." Rich in historical associations, the romance of Virginia is interwoven in warp and woof of a nation, its traditions and lore deep in the fibre of its people.

A part of old England was transplanted across the wide Atlantic, its laws and standards set up in a rich, new land. Through hardships, wars and trials, those principles took on new growth, the virgin soil added new strength and new meaning. They blossomed in George Washington's wisdom and talent, in the magic of Thomas Jefferson's pen, in the rousing voice of Patrick Henry, and in the genius and understanding of Robert E. Lee.

At Jamestown, the first permanent English settlement in America was made in 1607. At Yorktown in 1781 the American Revolution ended with the surrender of Cornwallis and the British army. Williamsburg, settled in 1632, is said to be the oldest incorporated town in America, and was the capital of Virginia from 1699 to 1760. The Commonwealth was the scene of many campaigns in the Civil war which closed with the surrender of Lee's army, April, 1865, at Appomattox court house near Lynchburg.

The Commonwealth of Virginia was named for Elizabeth, England's virgin queen. "Heaven and earth never agreed better to frame a place for a man's habitation," Capt. John Smith declared. It was he who claimed this new land for his queen. Virginia's territory once included Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and West Virginia. When Charles II was crowned he wore a robe of Virginia silk, and had engraved on coins that the English kingdom should consist of "England, Scotland, Ireland and Virginia."

Virginia has been the birthplace of eight Presidents, including Harrison, Taylor and Wilson, who were elected from other states. George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, James Monroe and John Tyler were residents of Virginia when they took office. The names of other Virginians, however, sprinkle the pages of history, literature, art and science. Included among them are Princess Pocahontas, George Rogers Clark, Meriwether Lewis, John Randolph, John Marshall, Stonewall Jackson, Henry Clay. But the list of Virginia's great is too long to name here!

The topography of Virginia is a varied one. The coastal plain, known as the Tidewater, was the first settled. The colonists planted tobacco there and watched its green leaves turn to gold. Cornfields were resplendent in the sun, and gardens gave generously of food for the table. The Tidewater consists of low-lying lands intersected by numerous tidal estuaries and rivers.

The central part of the state is known as the Piedmont, which rises to the Blue Ridge mountains. The Piedmont is noted for thoroughbred horses, and is the fox-hunting and horse-racing country which perpetuates the sporting tradition of Old Virginia. It was Lord Fairfax who introduced fox-hunting to Virginia.

Between the Blue Ridge and the Alleghenies lies the Shenandoah valley, once known as the "granary of the Confederacy." Its climate is varied, and so are its crops. It presents a picture of wooded mountain slopes, well-kept farms and cattle, fields of corn and wheat, and fruit-laden trees.

Shenandoah valley, unlike the Tidewater and Piedmont, was not settled by English colonists, but by sturdy Germans from Pennsylvania and pioneering Scotch-Irish. They knew the long rifle, the coonskin cap, the log cabin and all the adventures of the frontier.

It was the northern part of Shenandoah valley that felt the ravages of war, not only in colonial days but later when there was war between the states. Few scars remain, for the luxuriant grass and honeysuckle vines have erased the physical wounds. Hundreds of markers along the highways alone remain to remind the traveler of the terrors and hardships of another day.

Virginia molded its men into a pattern, whether they lived in the Tidewater, the Piedmont or the valley. Theirs was a government founded upon a constitution that guaranteed individual liberty. They defended their beliefs; they fought for their rights. The Tobacco rebellion of 1676 antedated the Boston Tea party by a century! "Give me liberty or give me death," spoken by Patrick Henry, was the clarion call to independence, and Thomas Jefferson set down on paper our American bill of rights.

After the close of the Revolutionary war, the great westward movement came as men sought even newer lands. There were hundreds of Virginians among them, in wide-tented wagons, dragged by horses and oxen. Three great gateways opened from Virginia to the frontier. To the northeast was the channel of the Potomac river, the gateway known to Washington. In the center was the gateway of Buffalo Gap and Goshen Pass. The third was Cumberland Gap, known to Daniel Boone, and opening the towering Cumberland mountains to Kentucky.

While there were Virginians on every frontier, ready to pioneer and build America, most of the old stock remained close to their native soil. The Commonwealth of Virginia has never stopped building. Its soil has always been productive. Its mines and factories yield their wealth.

Agriculture is constantly expanding. Corn and tobacco and garden truck are still grown in eastern Virginia. Cotton is raised along the southern border, and peanuts are a valuable crop. Smithfield hams, from hogs fattened on peanuts, are famous the world over. The livestock industry exists on a large scale in the Southwest.

Virginia produces bituminous coal and limestone as well as cement, clay, feldspar, gypsum, lead, manganese, mica, pyrite, salt, sand, slate, soapstone, zinc—and even gold!

Richmond is the largest cigarette-making center in the world. At Hopewell and elsewhere are chemical plants. Furniture-making, lumbering and cotton textile manufacturing are also extensive. At Newport News is one of the largest shipbuilding plants in the United States.

But leisure and good living, more than creating great fortunes, are the traditions of Virginia. Its people know the ocean front, Chesapeake bay and the rivers. There are hundreds of miles of beaches for bathing. Fishing in the bay and rivers is good. Channel bass fishing is fine! Virginians know the trout, spot, croaker, bass, rock, blue fish and many others.

The days are never Quite so long,
As in Virginia;
Nor near so full
Of happy song,
As in Virginia.

CHARMING WILLIAMSBURG

Many of the most important pages in the social and political history of Virginia were written in Williamsburg, the colonial capital, much of which is now restored to its original charm. In its appearance, Williamsburg reflected England in miniature.

From its inception, Williamsburg took its place as one of the most important centers of culture and commerce in the colonies. It kept that pre-eminence for 80 years until the seat of Virginia's government was moved to Richmond from war-scarred Williamsburg in 1799. With the capital gone, Williamsburg gradually sank into the somnolence of a quiet county seat and college town.

John D. Rockefeller Jr. saw in the restoration of the old city an opportunity for a great educational undertaking and provided financial aid to rebuild it. After an exhaustive research to make the work accurate and authentic, the restoration or reconstruction of 311 colonial buildings has been completed.

Connected Triple-Braced Traction Bars... Give Firestone GROUND GRIPS A "CENTER BITE"

TESTS conducted under a wide range of soil and weather conditions proved conclusively that Firestone Ground Grip tires will give your tractors up to 16% more pull on the drawbar. That's because only connected, triple-braced traction bars...with their extra tread-bar length in the center of the pulling zone...take a "Center Bite."

Besides giving Firestone Ground Grips a "Center Bite," connected traction bars also insure better cleaning. There are no broken-bar, trash-catching pockets such as you see on ordinary tires. The connected bars are stronger, too, because they are triple-braced. This added strength increases tread life.

These money- and time-saving features are responsible for today's farm preference for Firestone Ground Grips. And they are the reasons why it will pay you to have Firestone Ground Grips on your present tractors and to specify Ground Grips when you buy a new tractor.

Area in white shows the "Center Bite" traction zone, not found in other tires because of Firestone's exclusive patent rights.*

"IMITATION OF LIFE"

Claudette Colbert and Warren Williams

Eating Is A Habit

Our way of eating is a habit started early in life—the way we handle our knife, how fast or slowly we eat, and the foods we like or dislike. Specialists in child training say that food habits, good and bad, are acquired from early infancy.

That's why nutrition authorities tell us that it's important to teach a child good eating habits from early infancy.

For best results offer the young child good food in casual, matter-of-fact way, without urging or forcing. Offer small portions of food that are new to a child. Remember that learning is a matter of repeating; if first tastes are pleasant, the child will welcome the food again, and soon learn to like it.

Whatever else you do, never worry about a child's food habits. Time and perserverance will pay dividends.

HANCOCK COUNTY BOY SCOUTS TO GIVE CIRCUS

One hundred and sixty-nine Scouts and Cubs in Hancock County will give a Scout Circus in the Garner High School auditorium on Friday, March 29 at 7:30 o'clock, when Scouts from Woden, Crystal Lake, Kanawha, Britt, Garner and Klemme will demonstrate the things they do at their weekly meetings, and when they go on hikes or attend the district camporee.

There will be some professional showmanship too, as a former circus clown goes thru his antics, a juggler balances everything but then ational budget and a dancer taps out signals so fast it will be hard for even an Eagle Scout to decipher them. Bill Mack of Garner will be master of ceremonies and music will be furnished by the "Old Timers" band.

The proceeds of the circus will go toward the improvement and enlargement of Camp Roosevelt on the south shore of Clear Lake where the Scouts attend summer camp.

4-H CLUB NOTES

Ways for raising money for 4-H camp expenses are being planned by the Amsterdam-Magor Pace Maker Club. June 24-26 are the dates for the 4-H camp. This will be held in the I. O. O. F. buildings at Clear Lake and will be with the Cerro Gordo 4-H Clubs.

The following girls have received a Foley Mill as an award from the Foley Milling Co.: Carol Fox, Helen Formanek, Ardys Bailey and Betty Lou Griffin. The awards were made for outstanding records in last year's club project, Food Preservation.

One dozen Mason quart jars have been awarded to each of the following girls by the Kerr Glass Co. for being the first girl in her club to complete her individual goals: Carol Fox, Mercedes Formanek, Betty Lou Griffin and Ardys Bailey. Two dozen jars were presented to Helen Formanek for the best canning record in the county.

ANYBODY GOT A GANDER?

Last week Dick Bamman advertised for sale a gander. The Times had barely gotten into the mails before Dick sold his gander and could have sold several more. If anyone has a gander for sale, better use a Times Want Ad.

Likewise Alzo Blank advertised for sale 2 yearling P. B Shorthorn heifers and 3 Spotted sows. Alzo says he could have sold many more.

Art Polsdofer made several children happy who bought his Fox Terrier puppies. He also sold a disc and a brooder house with a Want Ad.

Nearly every farm has some piece of machinery they do not need, and some other farmer would buy if he knew where to get it A Times want ad gets the seller and buyer together. Try a want ad if you have an article to sell, or if you want to buy something.

LEANING CHIMNEY FALLS

For a number of years, residents of Waverly have expected the "leaning chimney" at the Bremer Packing Company plant to fall. Last week, the chimney did fall, but it took manpower to do the job. Bricks were removed and blocks put in, then a truck pulled out the blocks starting the chimney on its way The 90-foot chimney had not been used for a number of years and had become a dangerous thing to have around.

CURTIS RIEHM TO OPEN LAW OFFICE IN GARNER

Curtis Riehm, who spent most of his life in Hancock and was recently released from the army, has opened a law practice in Garner in the old Central States office on lower Main St.

Mr. Riehm saw service in Africa and Italy with the 30th Engineer battalion and was later transferred to the Pacific. He began his army career as a private and worked his way up to a Captaincy in October 1945.

Mr Riehm is announcing his candidacy for the office of County Attorney on the republican ticket.

T. B. PROGRAM IN COUNTY ENDS MARCH 25

The 7th annual search for unknown cases of tuberculosis in Hancock county will enter its final stages March 25th when approximately 45 persons are to be x-rayed at the high school building in Britt

Only those recommended by their family physicians are eligible for x-rays. Interpretation of the films will be made and the results will be mailed to the family physician, from whom the patients may secure a report.

The county medical society and the Christmas Seal Sale committee are sponsoring the survey in cooperation with the Iowa Tuberculosis Association and the state health department.

MORE FLAXSEED IS NEEDED FOR 1946

Recent requests for larger plantings of grain crops this year should not mean less acreage planted to flax, Alfred V Josten, Hancock Coutny AAA Chairman declared today, in a plea for Hancock County farmers to produce more flaxseed in 1946.

As the production of civilian goods reaches a peak during 1946-47, industrial needs for fast-drying oils will be as large as during the war years, Mr Josten added. Military needs have fallen off, but the backed-up demand for new buildings, repairs and civilian goods is holding drying-oil requirements well above prewar levels.

Linseed oil, by crushing flaxseed, must supply about three-quarters of the nation's total drying oil requirements in '46 Mr Josten said In addition to paints and varnishes, linseed oil goes into the making of such varied articles as linoleum, oil cloth, rain coats, wallboard foundry molds, printers' ink, adhesives soap brake linings, electrical insulation, umbrellas shower curtains, and artificial leather.

Ten million bushels of flaxseed are expected to be imported this year, but to meet paint requirements, plus industrial needs, 32 million bushels must be grown on U S farms in '46 To help meet this unprecedented demand for linseed oil, the 1946 flaxseed production goal for Hancock County is 830 acres.

EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS!

Gossip over a back fence is everybody's business!... And, in quite another way, your electric company, too, is everybody's business!

It belongs to you—to the man next door and the woman across the street—to the people who rub shoulders with you in shops and trains and buses.

All types and kinds of folks are on our stockholder list—housewives, farmers, merchants, teachers, doctors, nurses. They're the direct owners.

And there are countless indirect owners. Even if you don't own a share of our stock yourself, you probably have a stake in this company through your life insurance policy or savings account.

Why? Because banks and insurance companies—who handle your savings—must invest those funds wisely. Next to War Bonds, one of their largest investments is public utility securities. They know that sound business management has made cheap, dependable electric power a basic part of the American way of life.

So, whether you realize it or not—your electric light and power company is not just our business—it's your business.

LET'S WORK FOR INDUSTRIAL PEACE

Men want to work.

Management wants to produce.

The public wants to buy.

The country wants prosperity.

Yet good times have been held up by an agony of strikes.

Strikes breed bitterness . . . hunger . . . and economic stagnation.

For the sake of our country, let's change this! Change it fast. Time is running out!

Let's work out a way to get — and keep — industrial peace and prosperity.

THE FIRST STEP

Isn't a sound national labor policy . . . one that treats workers and management exactly alike and above all one that is fair to the public . . . the first step toward that peace?

Sincerely believing this to be so, we offer this program for peace and production and prosperity:

1. Make employers and unions equal in responsibility under the law.

2. Let Congress set the rules for genuine collective bargaining, free from coercion and violence, and then let government enforce these rules with strict impartiality

3. Provide safeguards for the public against strikes or boycotts arising from disputes between unions

4. Insure against strikes until all orderly procedures for settling disputes have been exhausted.

Your representatives in Congress have the power to establish this pattern for an enduring and a fair labor peace. Let them know how you feel about it. Urge them to act promptly on legislation to include these four points.

Time alone won't bring industrial peace. Doing nothing won't bring it. Positive action is the only way. For your own sake and for the future of our country, let your voice be heard!

FREE! A timely, authoritative booklet entitled "The Public and Industrial Peace," gives full details of this program, including specific suggestions for legislation. It is a useful handbook for every citizen, program chairman, or group leader. A postcard brings it. Address. National Association of Manufacturers, 14 West 49th Street, New York 20, N. Y.

H. E. BOWMAN TAUGHT SCHOOL HERE IN 1904

Last week The Times carried the story of the death of Rev. H. E. Bowman, in which it was stated that he was a former minister of the English Methodist Church.

Mrs. E. J. Arnold was interested in the story as it recalled to her that Mr. Bowman was her teacher in the 9th grade in the Klemme high school, which at that time had but the 9th and 10th grades and J. D. E. Houghton taught the 10th grade.

Mrs. Arnold has all of her old report cards and brought her high school note book to The Times office. In her note book she had recorded that H. E. Bowman taught the 9th grade 1904. In high school were the following students: Clarence, Fred and Charlie Kluckhohn, Ben and Minnie Lau, George and Nellie Lau, Elmer Dow, Fay Fuller, Henry Lewis and Helen Bloom.

(The Editor noted that Nellie's report cards and note books were conspicuous with the large number of 100% marks!)

GUIDE FOR USE OF FERTILIZER NOW AVAILABLE

"Fertilizer Recommendations for Field Crops in Iowa," a new Iowa State College pamplet, is now available at the county extension office.

The pamplet gives a brief summary of the questions Hancock County farmers are asking about use of fertilizers. It discusses the different fertilizers that are available and gives positive recommendations for their use. A handy reference table for rates and method of application is included and suggestions for applying are discussed.

Farmers interested in obtaining a copy may get it by calling at the county office.

BLUE CROSS CAMPAIGN WILL CLOSE MARCH 26

Both town and rural people of Hancock County are showing a great deal of interest in the combined Blue Cross & Medical plan which is being offered through the Hancock County Health Improvement Association. Everyone planning to join must have his enrollment card and fee in the hands of the association secretary, Ada Wille, at the Farm Bureau office not later than March 26. At that time enrollment will be closed for six months.

This plan is open to all persons in the county both rural and town, as individuals or in family groups. Further information will be gladly given to anyone upon inquiry at the Farm Bureau Office in Garner.

To those who join, hospital and surgical services will be available beginning April 1.

WARM WEATHER BRINGS DANGER TO WET CORN

Unseasonable, warm, damp weather this past week has increased the danger of high moisture corn spoiling in the crib, Paul Henderson, Hancock county extension director, said this week.

We are not having the kind of weather that drys out corn, he pointed out. And corn that contains more than 20 per cent moisture is likely to start molding.

Recent surveys indicate that much of the corn being held now in the county is above the danger point.

Henderson emphasized again that farmers who plan to keep their corn through the spring and summer should take immediate steps to have moisture tests run on corn samples.

Moving high moisture corn from one crib to another while sorting out moldy ears, husks, silks and shelled corn, will do the most good.

Corn extremely high in moisture can be chopped or ground for ear corn silage and put in either a temporary or permanent silo. Extra water must be added to the silage, and the diameter of the silo should be small enough to allow for feeding from 3 to 5 inches off the top once the silo is opened.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Rip Franco Rule; U. S. Stiffens Foreign Policy; Readjust Crop Goals to Meet Emergency Needs

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Hoping to meet Allied demands for democratization of Japanese government, Emperor Hirohito makes tour of industrial plants, tipping hat to reverent subjects at Kanagawa-Ken.

SPAIN:
Hot Spot

With leftist elements in France pressing the issue, a new government loomed in Franco Spain, long under fire for Fascist connections but reportedly countenanced by Britain because of its neutrality during World War II, which diverted direct attack on Gibraltar.

The Allies' first major step in seeking to supplant Franco came with France's closure of its border against Spain. Prodded by French proposals to take up the matter with the United Nations organization, the U S and Britain then reportedly agreed to form a common front to apply pressure for Franco's removal.

While renouncing intentions to meddle with Spain's internal affairs, the U S. and Britain moved to denounce the continued existence of Franco's regime and proclaim their willingness to recognize an interim representative government if he were ousted. Awaiting resolution of the situation, the U. S. and Britain would not break off economic ties or diplomatic relations, leaving the road open for negotiations for creation of a democratic government.

FOREIGN POLICY:
U. S. Stiffens

Answering demands of Sen. Arthur Vandenberg (Rep., Mich.) for a firmer foreign policy in reaching an understanding with Russia, Secretary of State Byrnes declared the U. S. would go to war to curb future aggressors and peace and reparations settlements must be reached speedily and equitably to permit the economic revival of the world.

Vandenberg

Byrnes' enunciation of the administration's foreign policy followed Vandenberg's charge upon returning from the United Nations Organization sessions in London that the American representatives sat back with compromising attitudes while Russia and Britain pressed their political ambitions. Unless the U. S pushes its ideals, Vandenberg said, Russia will continue to press ahead in the Far East, eastern Europe, North Africa and Asia Minor where continued aggressiveness may set off a powder keg.

In reaffirming U S. determination to check future aggression, Byrnes declared that the present arrangement of the three great powers precluded world domination by any one of them, but that efforts to upset the balance would imperil peace. In calling for early peace treaties, he asked for an ending of the draining of occupied countries. Demanding equitable reparations agreements, Byrnes said the U. S. would not tolerate any power deciding for itself what to take.

STRIKES:
Costly Walkout

The General Motors and CIO-United Automobile Workers pitched battle over wages ranks as one of the costliest industrial disputes in U. S. history, with financial losses of over 800 million dollars to company, union, dealers and other producers dependent on G. M. for parts.

With its plants closed as tight as a drum throughout the country, G. M. was estimated to have lost 500 million dollars in unfilled orders while 175,000 production employees missed 113 million dollars in wages. Dealers and salesmen were said to have lost another 100 million dollars in commissions.

Because of G. M.'s production of parts, other manufacturers have been forced to curtail assemblies, increasing profit and wage losses. At the Packard Motor Car company, 8,000 production workers have been off more than a month because of the shortage of G. M. supplies.

Of 50,000 G. M. employees in Flint, Mich., over 2,000 strike-bound workers are receiving welfare relief at a rate of $32.06 weekly.

GERMANY:
Ration Cut

Reduction of the food ration to 1,000 calories daily in the British occupation zone in Germany, and need for substantial imports into the American-held sector if the present level of 1,500 calories is to be maintained, pointed up the critical situation in the fallen Reich.

Seeking to alleviate the new hardship imposed by the ration slash and head off possible rioting, Field Marshal Montgomery flew to London to discuss ways of providing additional food for the 20 million German residents in the highly industrialized northwestern region held by the British. Because a division of British food supplies would not furnish substantial relief, however, authorities appealed to the U S. and Russia for food shipments

While Germans in the U. S. occupation zone are receiving a subsistence ration of 1,500 calories daily, two-thirds of the food eaten is coming from local stocks. If the present allotment is to be maintained, imports soon will have to be upped and a total of 700,000 tons shipped in during the first nine months of 1946. Because of scarcities of fertilizer, seeds, tools and farm machinery, fall crops may be appreciably curtailed.

FOOD:
Crop Readjustments

In readjusting 1946 crop goals, the department of agriculture sought to assure a greater supply of edible grain, nutritious relief fare, fats and oils and animal feed to meet not only U S needs but growing European emergency requirements.

Because winter wheat already has been planted, the additional 1,000,000 acres asked will have to be seeded in the spring wheat area, the department declared. While North and South Dakota, Montana and Minnesota are expected to plant the bulk of the extra acreage, other spring wheat areas were called upon to increase their crop.

Since smooth dry edible peas constitute a good protein relief food and ship well, the department planned for a 100,000-acre boost in plantings, principally in Colorado, Idaho, Montana, North Dakota, Oregon and Washington.

With small world supplies of fats and oils in the face of the slow movement of shipments from the Pacific and heavy overseas relief needs, soybean goals were boosted by 1,100,000 acres. Iowa, Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Minnesota and Missouri were asked for the greatest increase.

Faced with the need for high meat and dairy output with feed stocks dwindling, farmers were asked to increase corn production over 1,000,000 acres and also step up roughage cultivation. At the same time, producers were told to maintain the flow of cattle to market, ship hogs at lighter weights and cull poultry flocks.

World Supplies

Supplies of all grains in the principal exporting countries in January were about 15 per cent smaller than at the beginning of 1945, with wheat stocks about 25 per cent less, according to the department of agriculture.

Total wheat supplies in U. S., Canada, Argentina and Australia were placed at 1,392 million bushels compared with 1,868 million bushels on January 1, 1945. The exportable surplus of 475 to 500 million bushels is below world needs.

NATIONAL INCOME:

With the national income in each month of 1945 running below the 1944 level, the year's total dropped to 145,504 million dollars in 1945 from the record high of 160,695 million dollars in 1944 National income, however, was practically as large as in 1943 when it was the second largest on record. Furthermore, the fact should not be overlooked that the 1945 figure is preliminary and actually may be larger

STATE BANKS:
Ship-Shape

With government bond holdings, loans and discounts and other assets showing substantial increases, the nation's 9,522 state banks boosted their total resources to almost 27½ billion dollars in 1945.

A breakdown of assets showed government bonds, totaling 50 billion dollars, made up 57.4 per cent of resources at the year end, with loans and discounts, approximating 16½ billion dollars, next at 18.3 per cent. Cash and balances with other banks amounted to over 15 billion dollars to constitute 17.6 per cent of assets while state, municipal and private securities and other resources approximating 5 billion dollars rounded out the holdings.

The 9,522 state banks had capital stock totaling 1½ billion dollars, surplus of 3 billion dollars, undivided profits of 1 billion dollars and reserves of 365 million dollars.

Ready Credit

Alive to the growing volume of installment financing, over 12,000 state and national banks will extend consumer credit in the postwar years, greatly expanding their prewar operations when they supplied 46 per cent of such loans in the country.

While not all of the banks intend to extend all types of consumer credit, 10,500 plan to make personal loans. By buying dealer paper or advancing money directly to consumers, 9,400 banks will finance sales of automobiles and 8,000 will back purchases of such goods as home appliances, farm equipment and airplanes.

Over 5,000 banks will make FHA loans covering home repairs while 7,900 will extend credit for modernization plans of small businesses or residential owners.

Fritz Finds Heavy Going

Deported in September of 1945 as dangerous alien after he had been deprived of U. S. citizenship, former Bund Chieftain Fritz Kuhn is now baggage smasher in Hohenasberg castle in Stuttgart, Germany.

BIG MAN:
Grows Bigger

One of the biggest of the wartime entrepreneurs, Henry J. Kaiser continued his postwar growth with the leasing of two huge government aluminum mills at Spokane, Wash., with options to buy.

In granting Kaiser companies use of the plants, the government announced that it sought to increase competition in the industry presently dominated by two companies. Because Kaiser plans to extensively employ the metal in his automobiles, the government also said, he might open a new field for use of the material and thus open a market for other U. S.-owned aluminum plants.

In leasing the $47,630,000 Trentwood aluminum rolling mill, Kaiser-Frazier agreed to pay a yearly rental amounting to 5 per cent of gross sales or fixed sums, running up to $2,667,000 in 1951. In obtaining the $22,270,000 Mead aluminum reduction plant, Kaiser Cargo, Inc., will pay annual charges up to $1,248,000 in the fifth year.

MEAT:
Consumer Costs

Though consumers will have to pay the full cost of the packing companies' 16 cent an hour wage boost to employees, the actual outlay will approximate only 81 cents a year per person on the basis of record consumption, the department of agriculture reported.

In arriving at the figure, department economists divided the 1½ per cent price increase allowed packers into anticipated consumption of 155 pounds of meat per person in 1946 at an average of 35 cents a pound. However, the actual cost might be less since the estimated consumption of 155 pounds per person reflects a peak and is far above the average prewar level.

Despite the 1½ per cent price boost granted packers to offset the wage increase, the American Meat institute termed OPA's relief entirely inadequate if livestock is to flow to legitimate channels. Even with the new price increase, the institute said, legal operators would be pressed to compete with black marketeers in bidding for cattle.

TIRE OUTPUT:

The tire manufacturing industry produced approximately one tire for every automobile on the road in 1945, casings totalling 28,147,538 units. While this exceeded the war-restricted quotas established early in 1945, output fell far short of meeting long pent-up civilian demand.

Rapidly accelerating production in the closing months of 1945 and steadily increasing production since the first of the year had carried current weekly output to an all-time record high by mid-February.

Veterans' SERVICE BUREAU

EDITOR'S NOTE: This newspaper, through special arrangement with the Washington Bureau of Western Newspaper Union at 1616 Eye Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., is able to bring readers this weekly column on problems of the veteran and serviceman and his family. Questions may be addressed to the above Bureau and they will be answered in a subsequent column. No replies can be made direct by mail, but only in the column which will appear in this newspaper regularly.

Factors That Determine Veteran's Pension Rate

Where veterans of World War II have a disability incurred in or aggravated by service in the armed forces, there is no set disability pension he may receive, the amount being determined by the degree of disability upon examination by the Veterans' administration.

The rates of pension range from $11.50 per month for a disability of a degree of 10 per cent to $115 a month for total disability, and where certain specific disabilities occur, such as loss of hands or legs, or blindness, or combinations of disabilities, the amount payable may be as high as $265 per month. These rates are determined, as near as possible upon the average impairment of earning capacity.

It must be remembered, and particularly in cases of World War I veterans, where application is made for disability pension, not service-connected, that these pensions are not payable if the disability is the result of the veteran's own willful misconduct or vicious habits. Also where total disability is not service-connected, pension is not payable to the veteran where the annual income is $1,000 if unmarried, or if it exceeds $2,500 if he is married.

Many times, the experience shows, according to the Veterans' administration, World War I veterans applying for pensions years after World War I for non-service-connected disability are turned down because the Veterans' administration decides the disability is due to the "willful misconduct or vicious habits" of the veterans.

Questions and Answers

Q. My son has been in the army for 22 months and spent 16 months in England, France, Belgium and is now in Germany. He is with the 2242 quartermaster truck company. Does the war department have any word when this company will be shipped home?—Mrs. H. N., Plankington, N. D.

A. As of February 15 this outfit was in Ausbach, Germany, and the war department has no word on when it will be returned to this country.

Q. My son, who is in Japan, made out his insurance papers to me before he went overseas. I have been married since that time. Do I have to have my name changed on the policy?—Mrs. J. W., Fort Bragg, Calif.

A. Th Veterans' administration says it would not make much difference, but would probably save some time in the event the insurance became payable. The veteran must make application to his commanding officer to change the name of the beneficiary.

Q. Is a widow of a World War I veteran who is elderly and in poor health, eligible for a pension if she has an income of $100 a month?—Mrs. W. Mc., Arlington, Mass.

A. If death was service-connected, yes, she is entitled to a pension. If not service-connected, she is not entitled if her income is $1,000 or more annually, if she has no children. I would ask your nearest Veterans' administration office, however, because the law says that certain items are not considered income and determination as to whether the claimant's income exceeds the respective amount is made by the Veterans' administration.

Q. My son was given an honorable discharge in May, 1945. I wish to know if he should draw a pension, as he was wounded in Belgium. He was with Patton's 3rd army. He is a member of the American Legion at Fayette, Ala., Post No. 127, but as yet has not even been examined for a pension. No one knows about the nervous disposition he has except his parents. —Mrs. E. M., Fayette, Ala.

A. From your letter, I would say your son most certainly is entitled to a disability rating, but he must apply to the Veterans' administration for an examination for determination of the amount. Apply immediately to your nearest office of the Veterans' administration for this examination.

Q. My boy died in the army in France. I want to know how I can get the large flag they put over the casket to bury them. I know of some mothers who have received them. I would thank you if you can tell me. — Broken-hearted mother, Brownsville, Tenn.

A. Relatives or next of kin of deceased veterans, who died in service, may receive a United States flag by application to the postmaster at any county seat post office. Application may be made on Veterans' Administration form 2008 available at local office.

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON. — Some people are wondering whether the fact-finding board for the meat packing industry took the trouble to read the newspapers. If so, they might not have recommended that the housewife bear the main burden of the cost of increased wages in the meat packing industry.

The fact-finding board, which included Dr. Edwin E. Witte of Wisconsin university, Chief Justice Raymond W Starr of the Michigan Supreme court, and Clark Kerr, former chairman of the meat packing branch of the war labor board —three able men—decided that a 16-cent pay increase was fair and equitable for meat packing workers. But they added that only five cents of this was "absorbable by the meat industry without price or subsidy relief."

In other words, the fact finders recommended that the big meat packers could pay only 5 cents of the 16-cent wage increase out of their own pockets. The rest would have to be passed on to the consumer or the government. Their report was filed February 7.

However, early in December, long before the fact-finding board was appointed, a number of smaller meat packing plants had already signed contracts with the CIO and AFL for 15 cents an hour pay increase without any strings attached regarding increased meat prices.

The small packers who signed such agreements included Hygrade Food Products of New York, George A. Hormel of Austin, Minn., and others in the Chicago area.

Apparently, the fact finders did not take this into consideration. Apparently also, they ignored the fact that Swift and company previously had agreed to a pay boost of 10 cents an hour without any strings attached regarding increased meat prices to the housewife.

For, despite Swift's offer of 10 cents an hour and the smaller companies' increase of 15 cents, the fact finders recommended that only 5 cents of the 16-cent increase could be paid for by meat packers. The remaining 11 cents will be passed on to the housewife—unless the government votes a subsidy.

BREAD WASTE SCANDAL

Department of agriculture sleuths have been doing some quiet checking of unscrupulous bakeries which violate bread sales regulations in order to kill off competition.

Despite the fact that the nation has been forced on a "dark bread" diet to help feed war-starved peoples of the world, thousands of loaves of good bread are still going to waste, or being fed to hogs and chickens.

It works like this:

If a big bakery is trying to grab business away from a competing bakery, it will begin supplying grocery stores on a "consignment basis," which means that grocers' shelves are loaded up with supplies of bread in excess of what they can sell.

The following day—sometimes the same day—drivers pick up the unsold loaves and replace them with fresh stock, charging the grocer only for the bread actually sold. Idea is to promote sales of a particular brand of bread because of its "freshness."

This is a violation of war food order No. 1, but it hasn't stopped certain bakeries in Houston, Texas, Richmond, Va., San Francisco, Cleveland, Kansas City and St. Louis from carrying on the practice on a huge scale.

Instead of making their returned stocks of one-day-old bread available at a reduced price to poor families, the loaves frequently wind up in garbage bins. One Texas farmer who tipped off the department of agriculture about conditions in Houston said he had been buying wagon-loads of bread "fresh enough to eat" to feed his hogs and chickens.

ATOM VS. BATTLESHIP

Unless President Truman does something drastic about it very soon, the forthcoming atomic tests in the Pacific, scientists say, may turn out to be a study in waterspouts instead of atomic energy.

On-the-surface atomic-bomb explosions, the scientists claim, will add nothing to the knowledge already accumulated from previous explosions at New Mexico, Hiroshima and Nagasaki, except that we may learn the size and damage of the world's largest water spout.

Administration lobbying to confirm Ed Pauley has reached white-hot pitch. Gov Mon Wallgren of Washington was brought east to put the heat on Senators Magnuson and Hugh Mitchell, the latter having been Wallgren's secretary. Both will now vote for Pauley. . . In some states, where the November race will be close, a vote for Pauley may mean defeat for a Democrat. . . The Pauley-Allen-Vardaman Merry-Go-Rounds have evolved the latest Washington wisecrack: "Truman is suffering from Pendergastric ulcers!"

Nylon Takes on Many Forms in Manufacturing

Nylon is not the name of one material, but that of a family of dozens of synthetic chemical substances which are made into hundreds of different kinds of articles, says Collier's.

Besides being produced in fiber form for knitting and weaving, they are also made in single filaments for use as brush bristles and window-screen netting, as well as in plastic form for molding into tubing, dishes and telephone parts.

A PEOPLE GAINS NATIONAL CONSCIOUSNESS

LESSON TEXT—I Samuel 7:1-8, 13-15.
MEMORY SELECTION — Obey my voice, and I will be your God, and ye shall be my people: and walk ye in all the ways that I have commanded you, that it may be well unto you.—Jeremiah 7:23.

The most powerful movement for national prosperity is a revival of spiritual Christian living.

Israel had come to the place where the people recognized that they were on the brink of national disaster.

One of the scriptures on revival is II Chronicles 7:14: "If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land."

This is the way of revival and prosperity for America, too.

Revival will come when God's people will

I. Seek God's Face (vv. 1, 2).

The ark had been out of its proper place for a long time. The ungodly Philistines had it, but they were glad to return it.

The calamities which befell them speak of distress in the heart of an unbeliever when the presence of God is evident.

For a time the ark was in the house of Abinadab, but even there it was not in its rightful place. Samuel moved among the people, pointing them back to God.

This was his first act of public ministry, but behind that public act is the history of a godly life. Such a man can consistently urge others to turn to God.

The response of the people was wholehearted. They were thoroughly sick of their sin and separation from God. The earnest of their sincerity was their obedience to the admonition of Samuel that they

II. Turn From Their Wicked Ways (vv. 3, 4).

Israel had learned from their heathen neighbors to worship their false gods. These they must put away if God was to bless them.

The same prerequisite to spiritual revival exists today. But some may say, We do not worship heathen gods. One is astonished at the similarity between the ritual of some cults and orders and the ancient religions of heathendom.

The fact is that we have set up many new gods—money, fashion, social position. The command needs to go out again through God's messengers, "Put away the foreign gods."

Now the time had come for God's servant to call the people to

III. Humble Themselves and Pray (vv. 5-8).

Spiritual life thrives on the gathering together of God's people. The crisis in Israel was met by a great convocation of the people. We need to revive the great soul-stirring religious gatherings of a generation ago.

We can get plenty of people together for a football game, but where are the people who should be in our churches?

"I will pray," said Samuel. He was a great intercessor (see I Sam. 15:11; Ps. 99:6; Jer. 15:1). Revival never comes without faithful intercession on the part of those whose hearts are really burdened.

Ask yourself, How much have I prayed for revival? If I should begin to pray in earnest, would not God hear me and answer?

IV. God Will Hear and Forgive (vv. 13-15).

Because his people had sought him in humility and repentance, God forgave and gave them victory.

"Behold, the Lord's hand is not shortened, that it cannot save; neither his ear heavy, that it cannot hear" (Isa. 59:1, 2). God saved Israel out of the hands of their enemies. The Philistines, seeing them gathered together to pray, assumed that they were preparing to fight, and they attacked. In the previous battle at that very spot (I Sam. 4:1-10), Israel had fought with weapons of men and been disgracefully defeated. Now they fought with the weapon of prayer and faith in God, and great was the victory.

America is valiantly battling against the social and economic problems of these distressing postwar days, but one fears that all too often the weapons are those of the arm of flesh which will fail us. Let us look up instead of to one another. "God will save us" (v. 8).

There is an inspiring word here for every troubled soul. You may, like Israel, have fallen into sin. Your life may be defeated. You may be utterly discouraged. Return to the Lord, put away sin, gather with God's people, pray, and God will give you victory, even at the very point of former defeat.

PRACTICAL FARM BUILDINGS

One-Story Farmhouse

By W. J. Dryden, WNU Farm Editor.

The building of a farm house calls for careful planning. Local building supply firms should be consulted as to available supplies before definite plans are completed. The Minnesota house, shown on this page, will prove an excellent basis for drawing up plans for a one-story home. Additional rooms may be added as desired.

The rectangular or square farm house has taken the place of the ell-shaped house and has become a type that has many features to justify its popularity.

The arrangement of the rooms is influenced by the direction the house faces and by the work that is to be done in the house, as well as by the location of the driveways and other buildings. It is desirable to have the driveway and barn in view from the kitchen windows.

The benefits derived from a well-lighted house are well recognized, and are carefully guarded in recent years. When electricity is not available, the newly constructed house should be wired for the day when it will be attainable.

These houses may face south, east or west and, by reversing, will face north. It is easy to change the arrangement as found necessary to suit individual needs. Bricks, plywood, lumber, concrete and tile may all be utilized as building material.

Says Vegetables Prove Most Efficient Crop

Cabbage, spinach, potatoes and similar vegetable crops use food value, land and labor more efficiently than fruit crops, which in turn are more efficient than meat in supplying nutrients, Dr. John H. MacGillivray, University of California professor of truck crops, has found.

The reason for this, says Dr. MacGillivray, is the length of the food chain. Vegetative plants use only land and labor before being consumed. Fruits must produce the plant and then the fruit before being available, while meat involves not only plant production and sometimes fruits but the production and growth of the animal.

As a classic example in the field Dr. MacGillivray cites the Eskimo's diet, which consists primarily of seal meat. The seals eat fish, the fish eat snails and other invertebrates, and the snails live on seaweed. To gain 1 pound the Eskimo consumes the equivalent of 625 pounds of seaweed; if he ate fish only 125 pounds of seaweed would be necessary. Similarly, says Dr. MacGillivray, if American taste could be altered to center on the vegetative crops, present nutritive standards could be maintained with less land and labor.

Feathering Helped Birds Survive Early Hot Climes

One of the many, often obscure, reasons why present-day species of birds and animals survived is because fur and feathers protected their very early, primitive ancestors from the hot rays of the sun. Protection from cold in that remote and tropical past, contrary to most zoology textbooks, must have been a minor or non-existent factor in survival.

This is a new evolutionary theoretical factor offered by Dr. Raymond B. Cowles of the University of California, to replace the old Lamarckian theory, evolved more than 100 years ago.

Most biologists today, he points out, believe that mutations such as fur and feathers didn't develop to protect an animal from some specific external influence. Rather, they "just happened." The animals that possessed them at the right time lived, and those that didn't died. Dr. Cowles argues that a mutation which developed fur and feathers on certain species prevented the hot glare of the sun from reaching an animal's skin when the world was a lot warmer than it is now. Thus, the animal could continue to hunt food throughout most of the day.

Save Ice Cream Sugar

It appears that ice cream makers have widely adopted a method of making ice cream by which they can save at least 20 per cent of the sugar normally used. This method is a result of experiments which have been carried on for a long time by the bureau of dairy industry of USDA dating back to the days of World War I. In 1943 the bureau reported that tests they had made had shown that the sweetness of ice cream is dependent on the proportion of sugar to water in the ice cream. With these facts as a basis, they continued experiments, and eventually found that it was possible to use less sugar by using less water and adding more milk solids, the ice cream being just as sweet. Furthermore the food value was not affected. Of course, during the testing period, groups of judges were used as tasters, and their reactions to the sweetness of various batches of ice cream were carefully noted.

Highway Salaries

In 1929, chief state highway engineers' salaries in 44 states averaged $7,106 per year. At the present time, the average of chief engineers' salaries in 39 states is $7,400 — an increase of 5 per cent over 1929. Only in five states is the maximum salary above $10,000. In six states, it is between $8,000 and $9,000. In 12 states, it is between $7,000 and $8,000. In eight states, it is between $6,000 and $7,000. In five states, it is between $5,000 and $6,000 and in four states, it is below $5,000. The bureau heads of the states average $5,000 while division and district engineers' average salaries are $4,650.

New Closet Wallpaper Contains DDT Insecticide

DDT insecticide, proven during the war to be one of the most effective means of pest control yet developed, has been incorporated in a new type of ready-pasted cedar closet wallpaper.

Moths, ants, flies, mosquitoes, silverfish and many other insects die shortly after coming in contact with this new wallpaper, which contains 5 per cent of active DDT insecticide in the top coating, the manufacturer claims. It is non-hazardous to human beings and domestic animals.

The DDT which in the past has been apparent as a white powder when sprayed or otherwise applied to wallpaper has been dyed to the correct color during the manufacture of this new wallpaper, and so incorporated into the product that it does not show and will not rub off. Guaranteed effective for a year or more, the new wallpaper is similar in appearance to the cedar closet wallpaper which homemakers have been using for many years to line closets, bureau drawers and clothes chests.

Provide for Visual Defects of Children

Surveys indicate that while relatively few youngsters entering kindergarten have visual defects, during the first years in school shortcomings in sight develop rapidly and that by the time the students graduate from grammar school more than one out of five has an appreciable shortcoming in vision. In high school and college the prevalence of faulty vision continues to increase progressively from class to class.

In many localities the visual problems of school children are receiving increased attention. Special training is being provided youngsters having difficulty in reading and other visual tasks. Eye co-ordination exercises are given to those with muscle imbalances. In the large cities sight-saving classes have been formed for students with serious visual shortcomings. Pupils with lesser visual errors generally are urged to obtain professional ophthalmic service. Attention also is being given to better lighting, so that the physical conditions of seeing in classrooms will be improved.

Nylon Molecule

The nylon molecule may be likened to a long chain of about 100 links. Within limits, different materials can be used for the links and the materials can be combined differently. Thus nylon may be tailored to meet many specific requirements of stretch, tensile strength, flexibility, and impact strength. Nylon can also be tough but not hard in one form, the amorphous, and hard but less pliable in another form, the crystalline. Nylon's toughness and flexibility suit it well as a leather substitute, although the paucity of solvents for it makes it difficult to apply to a cloth backing. Its high resistance to temperature, flexing and electrical effects makes its useful for some rubber applications, such as wire insulation. Its high abrasion resistance makes possible superior "silk" screens for printing of pigments on ceramics. In the form of coarse single fibers called monofils, nylon is in many instances superior to natural products for such articles as fishing leaders, racket strings, brush bristles, and tire cord.

Educational Program

Traveling workshops are a feature of the co-operative educational programs which the Inter-American Education foundation has under way in several American republics, through agreements with their governments. Experts in various fields of education have been sent to Nicaragua, Guatemala, Ecuador, Haiti and Paraguay to work with educational officials and teachers in specific problems of national interest. The workshops, equipped with teaching exhibits, instruction and classroom material, travel through centers of greatest population, holding two-week sessions. Teachers in the vicinity of each city are provided with means of transportation for attending the course. Night sessions are arranged for both parents and teachers, with emphasis placed upon methods and materials in instruction.

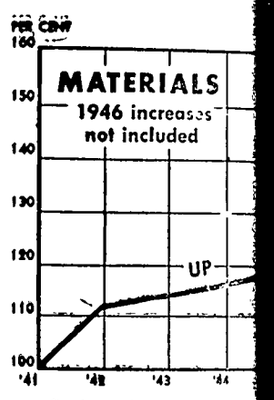
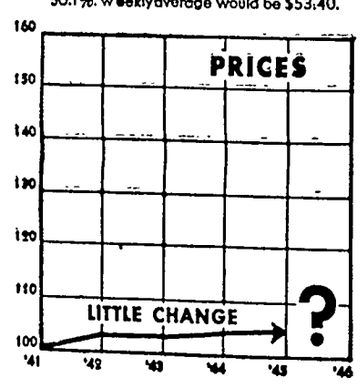
How would you CHART YOUR COURS

Pictured here are the records of four "life lines" of ness—four things which largely control the destiny of any whether it be a farm, a factory or a store. They are Wage rials Costs, Prices, and Profits. Suppose these were pi what is going on in your own affairs. How would you ch future course from these facts?

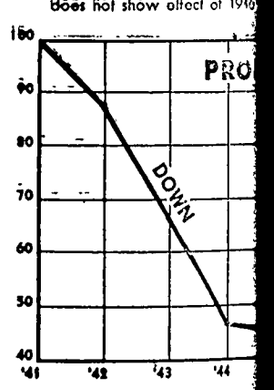
With the proposed increase, wage rates will have risen from $0.85½ per hour in 1941 to $1.33½ in 1946—a gain of 56.1%. Weekly average would be $53.40.



By the end of 1945, prices of commodities other than farm products and food had gone up 19.9%. This does not show effect of 1946



Using U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics with 1941 prices equalling 100, prices of farm machinery in 1945 were only 104.9.



Profit per dollar of sale ha until in 1945 it was slightly le cents, as against 8 4 cents in 1

What about wages?

Wages have risen steadily for five years. Before the strike which began on January 21 in ten of our plants and which has choked off nearly all farm machinery production, earnings of employes of these plants averaged $1.15½ an hour, not including any overtime. The Union demanded a 34 cents per hour increase and a Government board has now recommended a general increase of 18 cents an hour, which would make average earnings $1 33½ an hour. Weekly average would be $53.40.

What about materials?

No one seems to know how high materials costs will go. The Government has increased steel prices as much as $12.00 a ton, with an average increase for all grades of 8.2%. Steel is the most important material we buy, but prices on other materials are also increasing.

What about prices?

There has been no general increase in our prices since they were frozen by the Government in early 1942. Since then a few small increases have been allowed where particular machines were substantially changed in design.

What about profits?

Risk is part of the American profit and loss system, so we do not, of course, ask either our customers or the Government to guarantee that we can be certain of profits each year. The chart tells the story of our profits during the war. Although Harvester produced more goods than ever before, it had no desire to get rich out of war, so our rate of profit has steadily gone down. What our 1946 profit will be is extremely uncertain.

What is the next step?

As you can see, our present situation is that with frozen prices and declining profits, we are asked to pay higher materials costs and to make the biggest wage increase in the history of the Company. Can we do this?

Wages and materials consume all but a few cents of every dollar we take in. If our prices continue frozen, and cost of wages and materials continues to r ously our Company will operate at a loss at some

The exact point at wh ating at a loss would matter of judgment. Gov agencies and union lead have opinions as to wh point is. But if the / tu be wrong, they can sh shoulders and say. "Well, my responsiblity. I did the decision."

The management of t pany cannot and will not It dares not gamble. It sure. Continuation of ou to millions of customers ture jobs of thousands ployes, and the safety o vestments of 39,000 stoc depend on our making as decision as is humanly po

What about future pri farm machinery?

The judgment of Harvest agement now is that we can ly make the huge wage recommended by the Gov until the Government a adequate increases in th of farm machinery to c resulting increased costs.

That is not a judgm makes us happy. The C does not want to raise pr prefer to lower prices, w sible, and we know our c prefer to have us do that produced at 1942 prices, a we could continue to do have delayed seeking gene relief in the hope that it avoided. Now we are co that it cannot be avoi longer. The price questi be settled. Until it is se do not see how we can s wage question. Until t question is settled we do how we can resume pr and begin turning out t machines which we kn farmer customers need.

Because of the importa which both farmers and ci ers have in this contro are bringing these matter attention. Through the c rents of today's condition trying to chart a course th to our employes, to our customers, and to our stock

FIGHT'N FELCO FIVE NOSE OUT BOULDER ROLLERS

Bob "Split" Greiman and his Boulder Rollers Five came out of the hills Thursday evening to battle the Felco Fight'n Five on the hardwood alley at the local Community Building and just about upset the grain dealers, who managed to squeeze out a 20 point margin to nose out Coach Janssen's hill billies 1950 to 1930.

Bob "Split" Greiman lead the scoring for the evening with a total of 428 pins for a 3-game average of 143.

"Scoopshovel" Cecil Bridges was second high man for the evening with 426 pins for an average of 142 per game to lead the coal heavers to victory.

Other members on the Felco Fight'n Five were Hank "Hook" Smid, "Sky-duster" Mike Lemke, "Alfalfa" Walt Bachman and "Short-weight" Sport Bridges.

The Felco Fight'n Five Boys were all dolled up with beautiful colored shirts made out of feed sacks. That is why there is now a shortage of colored feed sacks at the elevator!

The Boulder Rollers who inhabit the hills southwest of our fair city, appeared on the scene with what appeared to be pillow cases for bowling shirts.

If they had worn the shirts higher up one would think the Ku Klux Klan had come into town! The names of the indivdauls were printed on the backs of the shirts as follows:

Bob "Split" Greman, manager, Gerald "In-the-groove" Janssen, coach, W. F. "Granddad" Greiman, Fred "Dead-Eye" Etchen and Bob "???" Tanner.

The two teams displayed fine sportsmanship (?) and there was no razzing (?) nor booing (?) and outside of a couple of near riots, it was a quiet evening.

There was a large crowd on the side-lines to encourage the the players.

Veterans' SERVICE BUREAU

EDITOR'S NOTE: This newspaper, through special arrangement with the Washington Bureau of Western Newspaper Union at 1616 Eye Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., is able to bring readers this weekly column on problems of the veteran and serviceman and his family. Questions may be addressed to the above Bureau and they will be answered in a subsequent column. No replies can be made direct by mail, but only in the column which will appear in this newspaper regularly.

Factors That Determine Veteran's Pension Rate

Closest to the heart of every veteran who wears a wound stripe is adequate medical care. Gen. Omar Bradley, administrator of veterans' affairs, shortly after his appointment, picked as his assistant to have charge of the medical and surgical division of VA, a man who is no stranger to wounded vets.

He is Maj. Gen. Paul R. Hawley, who was chief surgeon of the European theater of war, and as such had under his direction 254,000 medical department men, including 16,000 doctors, 4,500 dentists and 18,000 nurses. Under his administration more than 1,500,000 patients were admitted to army hospitals in the European theater and of this number 340,000 were battle casualties. So General Hawley has had broad experience in caring for our fighting men in time of war and has been chosen to head up the medical branch of VA because of this experience and great success.

Under the expanding hospital program of VA General Hawley is calling upon the best medical and surgical brains of the nation to take a hand in the great rehabilitation program of disabled veterans. The idea to take veterans' hospitals close to the medical centers of the nation reflects one of General Hawley's plans to decentralize and bring treatment as close to the home towns of the country as possible.

Questions and Answers

Q. Our boy was taken into the army. We are farming 520 acres of land, milking 12 to 20 cows by hand the year round, raising over 350 head of hogs a year. I am physically unfit to do any farm work. This work is all up to two boys 19 and 20, one a 4-F. We must hire a man to replace the boy that is gone. He has set aside $30 of his wages to help pay for this help. Will the government match this, and if so how do we go about getting it? This boy was really needed.—L. U., Gladbrook, Iowa.

A. Your local selective service board had the responsibility of deciding whether or not your boy was needed more on the farm than in the army. If they had decided he was needed there, he would have been given an agricultural deferment under the selective service law. No, there is no provision for the government to match the $30 per month. If you can prove a hardship case, which is unlikely, the boy could ask for a discharge on that ground. He would have to initiate the case through his commanding officer.

Q. Is the widow of a World War I veteran entitled to a pension if the husband's death is not connected with the war? Do World War I veterans receive pensions? If a disability allowance was discontinued and the case reviewed and refused again what can one do? Is the wife of a World War I veteran entitled to medical care?—Mrs. J. H., Tower, Minn.

A. Yes, the widow of a World War I veteran is entitled to a pension although death is not service connected. Only disabled veterans receive pensions. In case a disability allowance is discontinued and reviewed and refused again, the veteran has the right to appeal to a board of the VA. Wives of World War I veterans are not entitled to medical care.

Q. I have a lot on a main highway. I'd like to put up a business but in order to do this I need around $2,000. Could you send me full instructions on how to go about this matter and just what I must do?—Mr. H. F. S., Selma, Ala.

A. Go to your bank and ask if they will make you a G.I. loan on the proposition. If they consider it a good risk, they will take care of all the details.

Q. When and how is transportation for servicemen's kin available and what are the chances for the wife of a PFC whose husband is stationed in Regensberg, Germany? —Mrs. C. O. B., Chamberlain, S. D.

A. The serviceman must initiate the request with his commanding officer. If the request is granted you will be notified of all details. Only wives are eligible.

Q. I was discharged from the army in January, 1944, because of wounds received when I stepped on a land mine. I had temporary amnesia and head injuries. Have only a 45-degree extension of my left arm. Otherwise am in perfect shape. How do I go about getting back into the army?—M. N., Eugene, Ore.

A. The army has lowered its regulations somewhat upon physical requirements and would suggest you discuss the question with your local recruiting office, or you may contact your draft board.

Some Scoff At Idea of New Drouth

TOPEKA, KANS. — There won't be a repetition of the 1934-38 "dust bowl" in Kansas, Texas and Oklahoma. At least that's what a lot of people out here say as they scoff at the U. S. department of agriculture's report that another drouth is developing.

"Of course, if it doesn't rain for four years, it'll go blowing again," Eck Brown, banker and rancher of Dalhart, Tex., admitted: "but the soil is tied down now."

The agriculture department's pessimistic prediction prodded a sore spot in the memories of Sooners and Jayhawkers alike. Farmers were fighting then to hold title to their land in the depths of a depression, prices were low, and dry, powdery dust was piled in fence rows like snow drifts. The vagrant winds were "swapping" the farmers' real estate like careless horse traders.

DWINDLED . . . The old dust-bowl of the '30s gradually dwindled until it was no more. There has been plenty of rain the last few years.

The people out in this part of the nation don't like "gloomy Gus" predictions. They've seen drouth, grasshoppers, blizzards, and other plagues, but they've managed to come through them all. A little "Duster" doesn't scare them, and rain always comes—just 15 minutes before it's too late!

some places in Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas, a black market in wheat has sprung up. Latest figures show visible U. S. wheat to half, compared to a year ago. Millers are paying all the traffic will bear to keep their mills going.

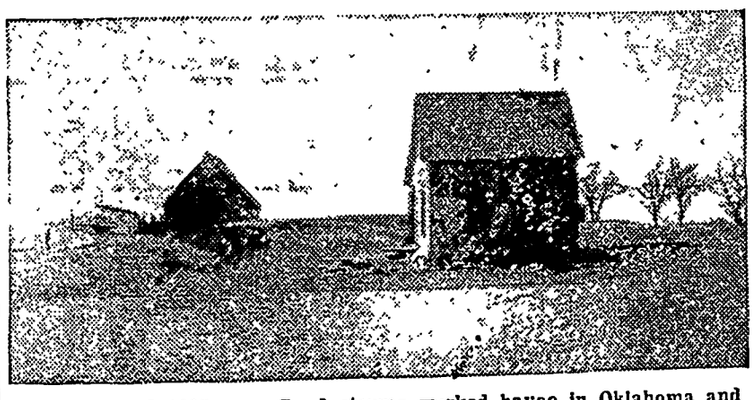
Newspaper editors in the wheatlands who make it their business to know crop prospects, have made their own surveys. To a man they say "not yet" to the government's prediction. It is going to take a lot more dust and dry weather to scare some of those grizzled old farmers who weathered the worst nature had to offer in the '30s.

Where does the dust come from? That is easy, say the editors:

"Oklahomans say it comes from Kansas; Jayhawkers say the dust plague originates in Oklahoma."

The rivers aren't very low yet, either, one Kansas citizen reported.

"They're a little too wet to plow and a little too muddy to drink."



BACK IN 1935 . . . Sand storms worked havoc in Oklahoma and other plains states. The above picture was taken in Western Oklahoma and shows drifts of sand around buildings on an abandoned farm.

China, Australia and Iran Plan Irrigation Projects

WASHINGTON, D. C. — In 1945, more than 170 engineers representing 30 foreign countries visited the United States for the purpose of studying reclamation and irrigation projects, and they are now returning to their native soil to begin work on similar works in their own countries.

Heading the list is China, with 66 engineers, while India follows with 24, Australia with 11, and other nations famous for deserts — Iran, Iraq, Syria and Afghanistan—have sent delegations varying in number from one to nine.

Through unified development of such famous river valleys as the Ghanges, Yangtse, Euphrates, Tigris and Irrawaddy, it will be possible for surrounding areas to be irrigated, and for the owner-nations to establish hydro-electric power production, flood control, municipal water supplies and improved navigation. In many cases the United States will send its own engineers abroad to assist these areas, interior officials said.

Worn-out Land Needs Cultivation And Fertilizing to Regain Vigor

The notion of giving worn-out farm land a "rest cure" has fortunately just about passed, says J. C. Hackleman, professor of crops extension at the University of Illinois college of agriculture.

"Calcium leaches out of the soil, and every ton of beef, pork or mutton or milk produced on these pastures removes nitrogen, phosphorus, potassium and calcium or lime just as surely as does a crop of corn, oats, wheat or hay," Hackleman says. "In addition, as these permanent pastures become less productive they provide less cover, and the result is more loss through erosion, until on rolling pastures the present crop is largely weeds or unpalatable weed grasses."

But these worn pastures are not hopeless, according to the crop specialist, and the response of most of them to treatment is almost miraculous. Five simple steps will transform the average worn-out pasture into a productive acreage in one or, at most, two years. The steps are to test the soil and treat it with needed minerals, disc these minerals thoroughly while preparing a reasonably good seedbed, reseed with a mixture of legumes and grasses, control grazing for at least a year and clip weeds, giving the legumes and grasses a chance.

Because of an increase of cultivated acreages during the war, a greater acreage is now really ready for legumes than before the war, Hackleman says. A majority of the fields limed in recent years have not yet grown a legume, he believes.

Rock phosphate which was used to the full extent of its availability during the last war years will also show up in improved alfalfa and clover production.

The same reservoirs, impounding storage for irrigation, would make possible the generation of great blocks of hydro-electric energy to be used for pumping irrigation water, serving rural electrification needs and stimulating food processing, mineral and related industries.

Construction of reclamation projects would increase employment opportunities on a nationwide basis, they say. Much of the material for building dams, power plants and canals comes from the 31 states outside of the arid and semi-arid regions of the west.

Approximately 53,000 new irrigated farms could be created in the Missouri basin, and the population would vastly increase, if proposed reclamation projects embracing nearly one-sixth of the U. S. are carried out, Mr. Ickes declared.

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

HERBERT HOOVER HESITATED

WASHINGTON. — Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson had a hard time at first persuading Herbert Hoover to come to Washington for the food conference. Anderson caught the ex-President at Key West, Fla., where he was fishing.

"I've promised my family for seven years to take them fishing," Hoover told the secretary of agriculture, "and now at last here I am."

Anderson, however, emphasized the urgency of the food crisis.

"We need your experience and advice, Mr. President," he said. "You can go back to your fishing immediately afterward. But this is a time when your country needs you."

Hoover finally consented to come.

BRICKBATS WIN ELECTIONS

Two of the bitterest opponents on the house floor and in the interstate commerce committee are Representatives Clarence Brown, conservative Republican of Blanchester, Ohio, and Vito Marcantonio, American Laborite of New York City. Off the floor, however, the two respect each other's ability and get along well.

Sitting in the house lobby the other day they smilingly concluded an agreement which will probably never be carried out.

They were talking about campaign expenses, when Brown proposed: "Vito, I've got a suggestion. Why don't we both cut our campaign expenses to the bone? Here's how to do it:

"You go into my district and make three speeches against me. Call me a reactionary Hooverite, an isolationist, an economic royalist — and anything else you can think of. That'll elect me.

"Then I'll go into your district and make three speeches. I'll call you a Red, a Dago, a new dealer and an anti-Rankinite.

"With the proper literature about you in my district and the proper literature about me in your district, both of us are a cinch for re-election when we do that."

Marcantonio agreed that the idea had merit, and they shook hands on it.

NAZIS REMAIN IN GERMANY

A secret report on failure to de-Nazify Germany has been made to the war department, but is considered so shocking that it probably will be destroyed. It is now in the office of Brig. Gen. Frank A. Meade.

The report shows complete failure to clean out high-ranking Nazis. It also shows a surprising number of so-called German "laborers" who have secretaries and stenographers assigned to them.

This is one of the latest dodges to get around the employment of Nazis by the American army. According to army rules, no former Nazi can be employed in any job more important than that of a "laborer." Result is that many Nazis are used in important jobs, but listed on the books as "laborers." That is why they are assigned secretaries and stenographers.

These "common laborers" are then put in charge of important manufacturing plants. The report now in the hands of the war department was made by the public safety and inspection division of military government. It may never see the light of day.

HOW WYATT DID IT

If there were more men like Housing Expediter Wilson Wyatt around, President Truman would have easier sailing. The other day in Chicago, Wyatt was guest speaker at a banquet of the National Association of home builders, 3,200 strong, all hostile, all prepared to boo at the man who proposed revolutionary building reforms in order to complete 3,000,000 homes in two years.

As Wyatt arose, the atmosphere was charged with hostility. However, he told stories, explained his program, made no antagonistic statements.

"If you gentlemen are against this program, then you don't understand it," Wyatt said. "It's my fault for not making it clear."

After 45 minutes, having won over a considerable part of the audience, he stopped. Then for 45 minutes more he answered questions. Every inch of the way he fought for his program of low-cost housing for veterans.

Finally, when he finished, every builder in the huge dining room rose to his feet and cheered.

NOW WHITE SPAGHETTI

Some of the strongest opposition to the President's "dark bread" order is coming from an unexpected quarter — spaghetti manufacturers.

Spaghetti, macaroni and noodles are made from semolina, a gritty flour made, in turn, from durum wheat.

Semolina millers, as well as spaghetti makers, are up in arms about the "dark bread" order, declaring it will drive them out of business. A number of semolina mills have filed an exception.

A NATION DEMANDS A KING

LESSON TEXT—I Samuel 8:10-22.
MEMORY SELECTION—Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord.—Psalm 33:12.

A major crisis has come in the life of a nation when it is ready to change its form of government. That was especially true in the case of Israel, for they were about to throw off the direct rule of God and demand a king.

There were good reasons for their desire. Samuel was old. His sons who were to succeed him were not honest (I Sam. 8:3). But there were other motives not so good; for example, their desire to have the pomp of a kingly ruler and a wish to be like other peoples (v. 20).

Their request was made known to Samuel (I Sam. 8:6). He was grieved, but the Lord showed him that it was not His rule they were rejecting, but God's rule (v. 7).

The matter came to a crisis as Samuel was sent to reason with them (v. 9).

I. Prophetic Words (vv. 10-18).

There is always a price to pay if we are eager to follow the styles of this world, Israel wanted to have a king with an attractive court and a mighty army like their neighbors, the other nations, but they had not realized that such things are not provided out of the king's pocket.

A word of warning may be in place here for Christians who have fallen for the temptation to keep pace with their ungodly neighbors—to "keep up with the Joneses," as it is sometimes put.

Government has a right to call on the governed for its support, but who will deny that the tremendous military establishments which the rulers of the earth have maintained have been both burdensome and provocative of war.

We live in a sinful world, and we may as well face the necessity of protecting ourselves and policing the unruly, but think how much better would be our lot if we like Israel could have been under the direct rule of God.

They did not want it. Are men any better today when they reject the beneficent rule of the Son of God over their lives?

II. Persistent Wills (vv. 19, 20).

The people refused to hearken. Their stubborn reply was, "Nay, but we will have a king over us," and one can almost hear the emphasis on the word will.

One might have expected that the leaders of the people would have sensed the folly of their plan and asked God to continue to rule over them forever, but the stubbornness of the willful human heart is almost beyond belief. When its determination is coupled with pride and unbelief it becomes an even more appalling barrier to the blessing of God.

Therein lies the outstanding lesson of these verses. Let us beware that we do not sin like Israel; yes, sin even worse than they did. Joseph Parker in the People's Bible (vol. 6, p. 287) makes this acute application of the truth: "Do we condemn them? Let us not be ready with reproach; nor urgent in condemnation. We are doing a deadlier thing it may be than the elders of Israel did in this case. We are told that God is angry with the wicked every day; that the wicked shall be driven into hell, and all the nations that forget God. We are told that the liar shall have his portion in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone, that no drunkard shall enter the kingdom of heaven, that anything unclean, defiled or corrupt shall not pass into the city of God's light; we are told that nothing remaineth for the sinner but a fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation.

"What is the result? Men can go immediately from the hearing or reading of the most terrific statements concerning the future of the wicked and can throw themselves with unbridled license into all the diabolical enjoyments which stimulate but never satisfy the corrupt soul."

III. Providential Willingness (vv. 21, 22).

Reluctantly, but inevitably, comes the divine expression of willingness to let man go the way he wants to go. Israel shall have a king, says God. In fact He had prophesied this day long before (see Deut. 17: 14-20).

So it is true (to quote Parker again) that "we can force our way through all solemn warning, all pathetic entreaty, all earnest persuasiveness . . . We can go to hell if we will . . . There is nothing before you but love, grace, mercy, tenderness, God. That is all. There is a cross—hew it down! There is a way around it, a way through it, a way over it—you can get there!"

May we, neither as individuals nor as a nation, thus thwart God's love and reject His warnings, and go on our own stubborn way into sin and sorrow.

Now is the time for all good men, women and children to begin thinking about a home vegetable garden. Planting time is just around the corner.

The end of the war has not lessened the need for home-grown food. Many people will go hungry—starvingly so. By growing home gardens, we add to the nation's total food supply, and thus make it possible to share our abundance with the unfortunates abroad.

Sharing with others will not mean privation for us. We will share to help prevent starvation, disease and death.

So get ready to blueprint this year's garden, and while you're at it, plan to "put up" a supply of food for the winter larder. Take down the shovel and the hoe, and get ready for a season of work and fun—and reap a harvest for good eatin' later.

...ERS MOVING HIGH ...TURE CORN

...ncock County farmers ...ld start shifting their high ...ture corn to keep it from ...ting, according to Paul Henderson, county extension director.

Henderson said tests last week on a number of cribs in the county showed the stored corn running dangerously high in moisture. Most corn storage specialists consider the 20 percent mark as the danger line.

Test the corn you expect to keep for summer feed. If the moisture is over 20 percent you better move it to be on the safe side. Be sure you get a sample of the corn in the middle of the crib.

METEOR FOUND

A streak of light coming down from the sky was seen by three employees of the Farmers Elevator at Scranton. They reported that the light appeared to hit the ground and then bounce. Upon investigation it was found that a meteor which had completed burning before hitting the ground was the cause of the phenomenon. All that was visible were 13 small round spots of burned grass with light, white ash in the middle.

RUBBISH ALONG THE COUNTRY ROADS

A farmer friend of the Editor stopped in the office Tuesday with the information that some very thoughtless persons were using the ditches along country roads as a dumping ground for garbage and rubbish.

The Editor calls attention to the parties guilty of this practice that here is a heavy fine if the violators are cauhgt.

Not only is this very unsightly, but it is dangerous as well. The rubbish, later hidden by grass and weeds makes mowing difficult, tin and glass may injure the horses's legs and wire may damage the mower.

The practice of dumping trash and garbage along the roads should be stopped. Every community has a public dumping ground and these should be used instead of private property.

LET'S STOP FEEDING INFLATION

You know what happens . . .

When you continue to spend more than you make and . . .

Keep on borrowing to make up the difference!

You know too, that a big chunk of every dollar you earn and every dollar you spend goes to pay the cost of government.

That's why it's important for you to take a good look at the way the government spends your dollars.

Government should begin now to live within its means

During the war government necessarily spent huge sums of money. Yet, with the war over, the government plans to spend four times as much in the coming year as it spent in the highest pre-war year.

Most thoughtful people believe that government expenditures are now far greater than they need be.

They believe that government, like a family, should live within its means . . . that it should not spend more than it takes in . . that it should not keep on going deeper into debt.

Yet that is exactly what's happening today. Our government is spending billions more than it takes in. And it continues to borrow to make up the difference.

This is the kind of money-handling that causes inflation.

Economy in government means money in your pocket

If the American people – through Congress – will reduce government spending and take steps to encourage production, inflation will be stopped . and this is the only way it can be stopped.

Write your representatives in Congress today.

Urge them to cut the cost of government, eliminating all waste . . . all unnecessary services . . . and postponing all expenditures that can be put off until our war bills have been paid.

Urge them to make the government start living within its means . at a level that you and your neighbors can afford to pay.

You'll see the results soon in the cost of everything that you buy . food, clothing and everything else And you'll be doing your country a real service.

YOUR DOLLARS . . . a postcard to the National Association of Manufacturers, 14 West 49th Street, New York 20, N. Y., will bring you . . . this informative booklet on government spending—a subject which is all-important to you.

CARD OF THANKS

Some things are impossible. One of these is to express to each and every one who were so kind to me during the illness and death of my beloved one; to those who contributed the many beautiful floral offerings in his memory. I especially appreciate the comforting words and prayers offered by the pastors, and the beautiful selections rendered by Rev. Harvey; and the Ladies of the Methodist Church and their assistants, and countless others, who in so many ways made my sorrow a little lighter to bear.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

U. S. Cracks Down on Russia; British Loan Called Trade Aid; Modify Emergency Housing Bill

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

DIPLOMACY:
Crack Down

First evidence of a stiffening of U. S policy toward Russia was contained in the state department's warning that this country could not remain indifferent to the Reds' refusal to withdraw from Iran in accordance with an agreement made in 1942 and reaffirmed at Teheran.

Oil-rich, Iran has been prominent in the news since its northwestern province of Azerbajain moved for local self-rule and Russian troops prevented efforts of the central government to quell the revolt. During negotiations between Russia and Iran for withdrawal of Red forces from the country, Moscow was said to have pressed for oil concessions, held exclusively by the U S. and Britain.

While the state department's note to Russia emphasized that this country could not sit idly by while tri-partite agreements affecting another nation's sovereignty were broken, it urged the Reds to retire to promote the confidence necessary for fostering world peace.

Having pressed the Russians on the Iranian situation, the state department followed with another protest to Moscow over the Reds' looting of Japanese industries in Manchuria and their efforts to set up a joint Russian-Sino economic rule over the province to the exclusion of other nations.

BRITISH LOAN:
Called Aid

Declaring that the alternative to lending financial assistance to Britain was a postwar economic dogfight, the administration opened its fight for the 3¾ billion dollar loan to the United Kingdom with Secretary of the Treasury Vinson and Assistant Secretary of State Clayton endorsing the advance before the senate banking and currency committee.

Vinson and Clayton presented parallel testimony to the solons, asserting that if Britain were unable to obtain dollars with which to buy goods, she would tighten up her exchange regulations and conserve her resources for careful expenditure within a friendly trading bloc. The result would be a return to high tariffs, sanctions and other restrictions which bogged trade prior to World War II and spurred the development of totalitarian economy.

Disclosing that the U. S. had turned down a Russian bid for a six billion dollar loan, Vinson told the senators the administration did not contemplate direct loans to other nations. However, money will be advanced to foreign countries through the Export-Import bank, set up before the war to stimulate trade and possessing limited loaning power of 3½ billion dollars.

HOUSING:
Emergency Bill

Though balking against imposition of ceilings on old houses and payment of 600 million dollars in subsidies to building material manufacturers to step up the flow of supplies, the house approved an emergency housing bill giving the government broad powers to speed low-cost residential construction.

Pushed through by a coalition of Republicans and southern Democrats, the bill gives Housing Expediter Wilson Wyatt independent authority to channel building materials into home construction through priorities until June, 1947; set prices for such materials to increase output, and halt the export of lumber or other searce supplies.

Other provisions of the measure establish preference for war vets in the purchase of new dwellings; increase the FHA's resources to insure mortgages of ex-G.I.s by one billion dollars and set ceiling prices on new homes.

BROTHERHOOD:
Truman Plea

With former Prime Minister Winston Churchill's plea for a U. S.-British military alliance posing the question of American adoption of the proposal or continued adherence to the United Nations Organization for maintaining world peace, President Truman stood by UNO in an address before the Federal Council of Churches in America at Columbus, Ohio.

Though sponsoring Churchill's speech at Fulton, Mo., Mr. Truman apparently intended to await public reaction to the proposal before taking a position himself. Meanwhile, the President avowed complete support to UNO, declaring that this country expected to defend it and work for its perfection along with the other member nations.

In addressing the 500 delegates, representing 25 million Protestants, Mr. Truman declared that only through the observance of Christian principles could any mechanism for peace be successful. Extending the thought to domestic affairs, he asserted that only through religious fervor could the country develop a social program designed to meet the needs of the mass of people.

In considering the church's position in the postwar world, the council unanimously adopted a resolution condemning any form of racial segregation.

Presenting the resolution, Dr. Henry Sloane Coffin, noted Presbyterian theologian, rapped church organizations themselves for practicing discrimination against Negro and other minority groups. Many church-supported hospitals, schools and theological seminaries were guilty of the offense in varying degrees, he said, and some churches themselves refused to hire people on racial or other grounds.

DENAZIFICATION:
Germans Help

To speed the arraignment and trial of between 1,500,000 and 2,000,000 Germans charged with Naziism, U. S. military authorities approved a law promulgated by provincial governments of the American occupation zone providing for prosecution of suspects in local courts.

Applicable to the U. S. zone only, the new procedure is expected to allow rapid disposition of pending cases and removal of much of the uncertainty affecting sectional economy. Germans hope that convicted persons might be substituted for war prisoners presently employed as forced labor by the Allies.

To be tried by anti-Nazi prosecutors and three-man tribunals, defendants will be classified into four broad categories, including major offenders, active promoters of Hitlerism, youthful adherents and nominal party members who joined the movement for business or social convenience. While penalties for major offenders and active promoters include forced labor, confiscation of property and restriction on employment privileges, the other groups would be subject to occupational curbs and fines.

STRIKE:
Crisis Brewing

As the CIO-United Automobile Workers strike against General Motors proceeded through its fourth month, pressure grew for settlement of the walkout to avert a crisis resulting from the prolonged idleness of 175,000 production employees.

With the union and management remaining one big cent apart from agreement on wages and both sides indicating no inclination to budge, the city of Detroit appealed to President Truman to personally intervene because the strike was seriously impairing the economic life of the community. To provide funds for growing relief applications, the city authorized an appropriation of $400,000.

Increasing bitterness developed between the UAW and G.M. over the company's refusal to go above its offer of an 18½ cent an hour wage increase or submit the issue of paying 19½ cents to an impartial arbitrator. With the UAW convention scheduled for March 23 to 31, union spokesmen charged that the company hoped to prolong the strike to create dissatisfaction over present officials and open the way for their ouster.

Ingrained Tradition

Though soon to be shorn of powers under new Jap constitution, Hirohito retains reverence of these Jap repatriates, bowing to the ground upon his entrance to their quarters at Kamoi.

JAPAN:
New Sun

Emerging over the horizon of a defeated Japan, a new sun arose. It spread the hope and aspiration embodied in the new constitution drawn up after five months of deliberations between American and Nipponese officials.

Endorsed by General MacArthur, Premier Shidehara and Emperor Hirohito himself, the new constitution strips the mikado of all his sovereign power, provides for the free election of two representative houses and assures freedom of thought, press, religion and speech.

Of particular interest was the constitution's prohibition of an army, navy, air force and other war facilities, and the renunciation of the use of force in settlement of international problems. In declaring that Japan was willing to become the first nation to outlaw armaments, Nipponese spokesmen hoped that the rest of the world would accept the same principle and follow the example.

OPA:
Ease Price Control

Though price controls were removed from musical instruments and a wide variety of miscellaneous items ranging from ice bowls to bull rings, OPA threatened to restore regulations if retail charges bounded from reasonable levels.

Included in the items freed from price control were such sporting equipment as fishing, archery, skiing, croquet, bowling, baseball, basketball, football, golf and hockey. Though playing uniforms were exempted, control was maintained over shoes because of their general usefulness.

Among the miscellaneous items affected by the OPA action were low-cost kitchen utensils, cowbells, buckets, coffee servers, unglazed flower pots, safety goggles and industrial clothing designed for protection against hazardous occupations. With supplies adequate, price control was temporarily relinquished over phonograph records, electric lamp bulbs, firearms and ammunition.

STEEL:
Kaiser Balked

World War II's outstanding entrepeneur, big, burly Henry Kaiser was forced to exercise all of his ingenuity in procuring sheet steel if he was to go ahead with plans for the production of his postwar autos.

Kaiser's difficulties arose over his inability to obtain sheet steel from major producers, who claimed that supplies were limited and preference was being given to established customers. Only two companies considered shipments, Kaiser interests said, but they conditioned their action upon the consent of other firms to deliver material.

Boiling over, Kaiser and Joseph W Frazer, his auto-making associate, asked the department of justice to investigate the steel companies' action, charging impairment of competition. They also called upon the economic stabilization board to allocate available supplies to users. Though Kaiser operates a steel plant at Fontana, Calif., he has no sheet rolling facilities and installation of such equipment at the government-owned plant he is thinking of buying in Gary, Ind., would cost 25 million dollars.

UNEMPLOYMENT:

Despite the fact that several hundred thousand veterans were returning monthly during the last months of 1945, the rise in unemployment was in no wise as sharp as expected, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. With 830,000 out of work in August, unemployment has shown a steady increase since then due primarily to curtailment of war production following V-J Day. Reconversion has absorbed many of these idle war workers however.

Japan Again Provides Foreign Outlet for U. S. Cotton

The U. S. is starting to regain an important foreign outlet for raw cotton by means of government exports to Japan, which took one-fourth of shipments of the staple before the war. Until private trading, now forbidden for security reasons, is again permitted, the only way of regaining the Japanese market is through government channels.

Under the program now getting under way, Commodity Credit corporation stocks of cotton will be shipped to a Japanese governmental agency designated by the supreme commander of the Allied powers in Japan and enough of the textiles manufactured from the cotton will be accepted to reimburse the U. S. in full. Establishment of the supply line will take 200,000 bales of CCC cotton within a month, the department of agriculture reported.

PRACTICAL FARM BUILDINGS

Small Milk House

By W. J. Dryden, WNU Farm Editor.

Quality of milk can only be maintained when proper facilities are provided for the holding of the product before delivered to the milk plant or consumer. Bacteria plays a most important part in milk spoilage. To prevent this condition a sanitary milk house is essential.

Immediate cooling of milk to 50 degrees F. will practically check the growth rate of bacteria. Cooling tanks have proven more efficient than surface cooling in conjunction with the holding tank. Surface coolers frequently add many bacteria to the milk due to difficulty in sterilizing.

The milk house must be located on a clean, well-drained site, away from manure pile and barn if possible. Even a few feet distance from the barn is suitable, with covered passageway separating the two.

The most important part of the milk house is the cooling tank. The insulated cooling tank with insulated cover is now required by most boards-of-health of all milk producers whose milk is sold in the larger cities.

It was thought formerly that the entire milk house should be insulated. Recent experiments by Michigan agricultural experiment station indicate that it is more economical and just as satisfactory to confine the insulation to the tank. The insulation in the bottom must be cut at the in-take and out-take pipes. The hole should be cut at least an inch larger than the pipe. This hole is filled with asphalt mastic to insure a moisture-tight joint. If desired, a gasket of soft rubber may be nailed around the cover to seal the tank completely. Counterweights may be added to assist in raising the cover.

While the superstructure of the milk house may be of cement, cement blocks, bricks or lumber, best results are secured if the walls of the house be built of concrete six inches above the top of the tank. There are several excellent cooling systems on the market. Availability and personal likes should govern the selection. When selecting the size unit to use, the recommendations of the manufacturer should be followed.

The milk house must provide space for cooling tank, water heater, wash vats, can racks, table, cabinets and any other necessary dairy equipment as well as work area.

The foundations of concrete should be eight inches thick, extending 3½ to four feet below grade line. When insulation is used, dry wood shavings or other insulation material will prove satisfactory.

Light weight concrete blocks are preferable to those made from sand and gravel because of their insulating value. Both the interior and exterior walls should be waterproofed. A cement plaster coat makes a desirable finish for interior walls. A gable roof is preferred as it is easier to insulate and ventilate.

If possible the milk house should be electrified. Not only will it be possible to sterilize the milk containers more satisfactorily, but heat may be held down as desired during hot weather. Room for improvement and expansion should be provided.

Manure Loader Used to Move Wyoming Snow

LUSK, WYO. — The new mechanical manure loader, designed to save back-breaking work for farmers and ranchers, was put to a new use by the town of Lusk recently when snow drifts filled the streets.

Councilman Joe Kuhn, also a farm machinery dealer, brought out the mechanical manure loader and set it to work loading snow into trucks to be hauled away. The snow was removed in one-fourth the time ordinarily required.

State Wishes It Had Bought Land From Ute Indians

DENVER, COLO. — Rangely oil field in northwestern Colorado, is the most sensational oil find in years but the state of Colorado isn't happy about it. The Indians had the last laugh after all.

"When Colorado became a state, the Ute Indian tribe was given title by the federal government to a large section of land in western Colorado, including most of what today is the Rangely field," State Land Commissioner William Milliken explains.

"The federal government gave to the state sections 16 and 36 of each township in the state. But when it came to the Ute lands, it became necessary for the state to put up $1.25 an acre.

"The state officials objected and bargained for other sections. As a result, the state was granted additional land in Rio Blanco, Garfield and Mesa counties. That's why we own so fuch land in those counties and none in the Rangely field.

"If the state owned the usual sections in Rangely, our school finance problems would be solved for years to come."

Moreover, another question has come up: Who owns the land underlying the bed of the White river? There are 170 acres of land, potentially worth millions of dollars, to be considered. Oil men and state officials would like to know who owns it.

Black Setter Pulls Master from Creek

DAWSON, GA. — A black setter named Smoky is credited by his master, T. J. Donovan, with saving his life when the car in which they were riding plunged into a rain-swollen stream near Macon.

They were returning from a hunting trip when the accident occurred. Smoky, riding on the back seat, grabbed Donovan by the neck and swam with him to the bank of the stream. The dog was still on guard over his master and tried to fight off state patrolmen when they approached.

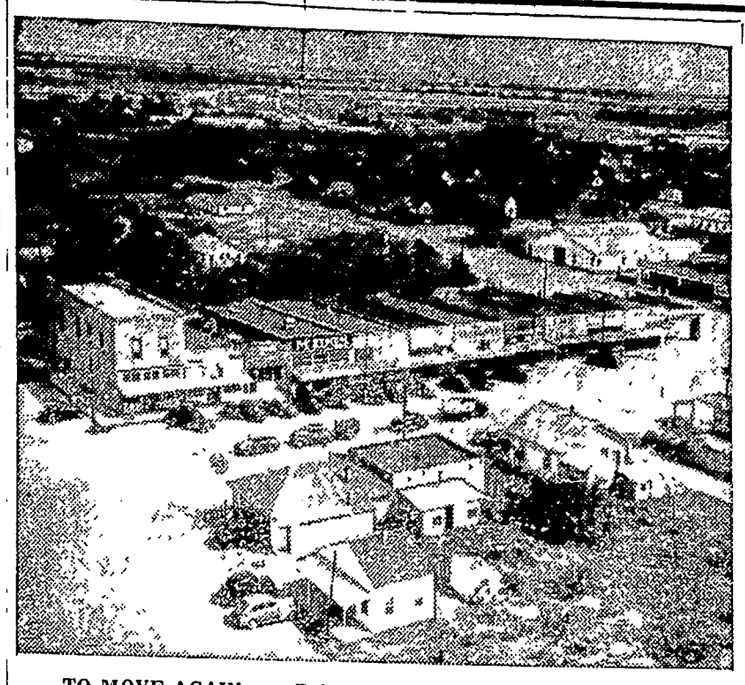
Examined at an animal hospital, the setter was found unharmed and later had a joyous reunion with his master.

GROUNDED . . . Two golden eagles, believed to be slayers of calves and squirrels, were caught in a coyote trap by ranchers living near Paso Robles, Calif. Sandy Sumner, owner of the Diamond D. ranch, has offered the pair to the city or county, if the officials feel they want to give a couple of eagles a good home.

101 YEARS OLD

Starting on his second hundred years is Elias Brownfield, now living in Glendale, Calif. He still plays his accordion, and after looking back over more than a century he says he has only one thing to regret, that he electioneered against Abraham Lincoln. He has no prescription for longevity.

"I never smoked or took liquor," he admits, "but I don't think that had anything to do with it."



TO MOVE AGAIN . . . Robert Lee, Texas, first christened Hayrick, was settled in 1889. The next year it moved several miles to the Colorado river in search of water, and changed the name to Robert Lee. Now it's preparing to move again—because of water. This time a reservoir, Buffalo dam, will be built on the Colorado river, and Robert Lee, unless it moves, will be several feet under water.

Quarry Stone as Fathers Did to Build New Parish

DECORAH, IOWA. — "In the faith of their fathers," as the Decorah Journal expresses it, men of Washington Prairie church are quarrying limestone for their $30,000 parish house. And too, they will be the masons who lay each stone in place.

The Rev. Oscar E. Engbretson said two-thirds of the men engaged in the work are grandsons of men who did the same job to build the church nearly a century ago.

They are taking turns working on the quarry crew and in the construction work. Every man in the church expects to do his share. Two hundred tons of stone are needed.

The beautiful, high-quality limestone is being taken from a hilltop quarry belonging to Oscar Bruvold northeast of Decorah. No dynamite is used, lest it shatter the rock. The whole job is hand work, just as the grandfathers did it. Bruvold is donating the rock. The men are donating their work.

The men in the first week of their work quarried about a third of the needed stone, Pastor Engebretson said.

The parish house, designed by one of the country's leading church architects, is expected to make Washington Prairie church one of the nation's most completely equipped country churches.

It will match the beautiful high-spired native limestone church. Stone for this church was quarried by the pioneer members.

This church became the home parish of the Rev. V. Koren, pioneer missionary, who founded many Norwegian Lutheran churches. He first held services at Washington Prairie in 1853.

NEWS OF FLIERS AND FLYING

Grandpa Was Upset

BAKER, ORE.—Grandfather John A. Burton, age 82, went for his first plane ride with his grandson, Capt. Robert B. Alexander, and greatly enjoyed it. But he was a bit puzzled by the way it ended.

"Isn't there a better way to land a plane than this?" asked gramp as he hung upside down from his safety belt.

The plane had hit a snow drift in landing and had upset.

Can He Wreck That Many?

Paul Mantz, Hollywood stunt flier, has purchased 475 surplus war planes. He claims to be the world's largest individual aircraft owner.

States Join in Airport Plan

A group of southern Vermont and New Hampshire communities set the pace for interstate and intercommunity co-operation in providing adequate airports without duplication of facilities when several towns, including Brattleboro, Vt., and Hinsdale, N. H., got together and selected North Hinsdale, N. H., as the best site for a combined airport.—White River Valley Herald, Randolph, Vt.

More Hostesses Needed

The nation's airlines will need stewardesses by the thousands in the next decade to staff domestic and international passenger planes. Expansion of service, introduction of larger planes and use of stewardesses for the first time on international flights all have contributed to the need for three times as many this year as were employed in 1941.

Airport Promotion

Securing permission from the civil aeronautics board, Paul Lindstrom of Rifle, Colo., flew over several towns distributing handbills; some of which entitled the finders to a free airplane ride. A benefit dance was held for the benefit of the Rifle airport.

Scobey Airport to Re-Open

Once an international point of entry, the Scobey, Mont., airport has been reopened by Jim Cross, a former bomber pilot, who hopes to build it up to its prewar status. The Scobey city council recently leased the airport to Cross, who is now giving pilot instructions to students.

GIRLS' FLYING SCHOOL

Colby junior college at Dennisport, Mass., is one jump ahead of most girls' schools. It lists among its subjects an "aeronautical secretarial course," which is adapted to familiarize the young women with the component parts of aircraft as well as prepare them to become trained secretaries.

THE FLYING FARMERS

The National Flying Farmers association, organized to promote greater use of airplanes by farmers and ranchers, has headquarters at Oklahoma A. & M. college, Stillwater, Okla. Some 222 farm men and women attended the Flying Farmers meet at Stillwater in 1945, and twice that number are expected this year. Farmers using airplanes in all states are being urged to organize and then affiliate with the national association.

AIRLINES BOOMING

Airlines are mushrooming today like the railroads did in 1880 to 1890. Instead of the 5,000 pilots now being used by airlines, the need will be near 50,000 within the next 10 years, it is estimated.

A PILOT'S PAY

Capt. Merle C. Robinson of American Airlines recently announced the pay for the average pilot. Co-pilots start out at $220 per month, and receive a $20 raise every six months, until they reach a top of $380. Before that time arrives, however, they're likely to be promoted to captains at a base pay of $600 per month, with extra flight pay and night work raising the total to $700 and even $800. And for those who graduate to the big four-engined ships, the salary is even higher.

Housing Bill Suffers Rough Going in Congress

Taft Breaks With Conservatives in Backing Administration Measure; Long-Range Building Policy Asked.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — It is fully expected that what is left of the plan for settling America's number one problem — the problem of finding a home—will be cut up by congress and pasted together in some new, strange shape by now. If it is still in the works when you read these lines there is a possibility that what finally emerges from the hopper will be more what the patient planners wanted and less like what the various pressure groups wanted.

The interesting thing to me about the debate on this measure in the beginning was this: although the administration features of the bill went squarely against the conservative grain of our conservatively ingrained congresses, it had one champion who usually sits as far away as he can possibly edge from anything of even a pale pink hue.

I refer to Sen. Robert Taft, Republican of Ohio. What Mr. Taft says never falls on deaf ears in the senate even if the ears are doubting ones and sprout from the heads of those cruelly affronted members once referred to as "the sons of wild jackasses." Vox Taft to the conservative is his master's VOX.

The two key features to the administration bill were the subsidy which would grease the way for quick construction of the lower-priced type of homes, and the price ceiling which would make it cheaper to live in a house than re-sell for profit. That is, the present owner of a house could sell his property for any price he could get without restriction, but owner number two would have to re-sell it for what he paid (plus, of course, reasonable cost for improvements).

These two conditions may have been good or bad. Whether they were or not they were opposed for two main reasons: first, because they were considered "government interference" and therefore radical, and second, because powerful lobbies, the profits of whose principals would have been curtailed, put all the pressure they could on congress

In spite of the feeling that the spirit of the housing bills was "liberal," if you prefer that word to "leftish" or "New Dealish," Senator Taft supported it. He had made a careful study of housing and come to the mature conclusion that the administration idea, as embraced in the bills introduced by Senator Wagner in the senate and Representative Patman in the house, was as nearly the right sort of legislation as could be obtained. The CIO took the same view.

Now when viewpoints as different as these two arrive at agreement, the simple citizen is inclined to think that their joint approval is pretty sound sponsorship.

Labor Wants Planned Action

The CIO has printed a very businesslike booklet on the subject in which we are reminded that we have always had a housing shortage because our cities just grew like Topsy, that the shortage is steadily growing and that estimates show that by the end of this year almost three and a half million families will be homeless unless they are taken in by relatives or double up with others—as the President suggested they will have to do meanwhile.

The reason that we always had a housing shortage, according to the CIO, is because we never had a housing policy. We have a public school educational policy; a police protection policy; a war and navy policy. As a result, we have a pretty good school system, our police give us reasonable protection to life and property; we have never lost a war nor suffered invasion. But we can't have roofs over our heads.

That is what the current housing legislation is supposed to provide. One more factor may be injected into this controversy which could affect it materially: the veteran, chief sufferer from homelessness, is as yet unorganized. Once organized, he could out-pressure the other pressure groups.

Since I heard forthright speeches of Senator Vandenberg and Secretary of State Byrnes which sounded a sharp warning to Russia that the United States was ready to carry out its international obligations and use force to check aggression, the following sentence has been before me: " . . . the American people, now in the height of their might and majesty, are no longer a sovereign nation."

That sentence is from Nathaniel Peffer's book, "America's Place in the World" which the Saturday Review of Literature calls a "stubbornly and trenchant discussion." I agree with that description of the book and believe that what Peffer says is true and that it is vital for Americans to understand why it is true.

Peffer says that we have lost our independence and our autonomy "in that which matters most in the life of the nation—peace or war." And then he shows with his "stubborn realism" how this has come about, how in the beginning (before 1776) America "had no control over its own destiny because it was so weak, now because it is so strong."

And he shows clearly and convincingly that, no matter how anxious we may be to stay out of foreign broils, any major war in Europe or Asia will eventually involve the United States. Our sincere but romantically futile dream of splendid isolation is forever broken.

Must Lose Life To Gain It

Many thinkers have pondered over this question. In tracing America's international affairs, this authoritative and provocative writer traces our course through the great crises whose milestones are marked with the dates 1776, 1787, 1861 and 1941. 1917 was the warning that was not heeded. We were drawn into a war then, not of our own making, but we did nothing to shape world affairs which followed and which, inexorably, drew us for the second time into a world conflict in which we had no direct concern.

It may seem a far cry from diplomatic intrigue and the vicissitudes of human hatreds, organized murder and lust, to the world of the spirit but I could not help thinking as I considered the efforts I witnessed at Nuernberg of a certain text in the Bible; the words of Jesus as recorded in the gospel of St. Mark (XVIII:35), "For whosoever shall save his life shall lose it; but whosoever shall lose his life for my sake and the gospel's, the same shall save it."

I am well aware of the fact that the devil may quote the Scriptures with the best of us but I do not think one has to be charged with Mephistophelian tactics when he traces a parallel between the loss of our nation's sovereignty in the sense which Mr. Peffer expounds it and the loss of our spiritual life in the New Testament sense.

It is needless to iterate here that the principles upon which this nation was founded derive directly from the Christian philosophy. However, we have never fully lived up to that philosophy since we still feel it necessary to indulge in that highly unchristian procedure which I once heard the late Lloyd George decribe as "organized savagery"—war. War has always been justified as a measure of defense—defense of our citizens, our territory, our sovereignty.

We have now lost our sovereignty in that we must be willing to die to save it. Let me replace the word "life" with the word "sovereignty" in the rest of the Biblical text, which would then read: "Whosoever (and that means a nation as well as a person) shall lose his sovereignty for my sake and the gospel's, the same shall save it." Until America and all the nations are willing to sacrifice their sovereignty to a higher, world organization, whose tenets are four-square with the gospel's in proscripting war, we can never hope to win back a sovereignty in accord with the Christian principles which are the foundation of our nation.

Well, Can't a Young Lady Have Dreams?

She was pretty and ambitious and had studied the matrimonial problem to a nicety.

"Yes, I suppose I shall marry eventually," she said, "but the only kind of masculine nuisance that will suit me must be tall and dark with classical features. He must be brave, yet gentle. He must be strong — a lion abong men, but a knight among women."

That evening a bow-legged, lath-framed, chinless youth, wearing flannel bags, rattled on the back door and the girl knocked four tumblers and a cut glass dish off the sideboard in her haste to let him in.

Turn On The Heat...

FOR WARMTH . . . FOR RELIEF FROM PAIN!

Every Home Needs G-E Heat Lamps and G-E Drying Lamps . . .

These lamp bulbs give out infrared rays for two purposes: heat for pain relief and heat for warmth. They can cause no sunburn because they produce no ultra-violet.

They're safe to use—for anything from thawing out pipes and keeping the baby warm, to drying out nail polish.

Like the sun, the infrared radiation from G-E Heat Lamps penetrates the skin. You will benefit more from this penetrating heat than from the surface heat of non-luminous sources such as hot water bottles and heating pads.

Learn to relax under the warming rays of the G-E Heat Lamps. When you end up a busy day with a stiff neck, a case of charley horse or a sniffy head, turn on the good old G-E Heat Lamps—and boy, does it feel wonderful!

PUT A G-E HEAT LAMP IN ANY HOUSEHOLD SOCKET

G-E Heat and Drying Lamps have built-in reflector type bulbs which make them units in themselves. The built-in reflector will not tarnish or become dirty.

No expensive fixtures are necessary. They may be screwed into standard sockets, lamp or ceiling fixtures, and directed to the spot where you want heat.

—You'll find a hundred uses for a G-E Heat Lamp in your home!—

OPA WARNS USERS OF CANNING SUGAR

Don't Buy Sugar Before Fruit Comes

Washington—The O P A appealed to housewives not to go out and buy canning sugar before they have any fruit to can.

So many housewives are doing just that, officials said, that the OPA sugar distribution machinery is in danger of being thrown out of gear.

OPA validated spare stamp No. 9 on March 11 for 5 pounds of canning sugar. It worked out a zonal distribution system whereby supplies would be on hand in various regions as fruits and vegetables were ready to be preserved.

OPA expected the first heavy call for canning sugar in the south where strawberries ripen early. But housewives all over the country immediately began using the stamps—many of them, OPA suspects, for ordinary household use.

The situation in New York became so bad last week that distributors were delivering sugar in camouflaged trucks to keep women from mobbing stores.

Each ration book holder can get sugar for canning purposes —5 pounds with spare stamp 9 and 5 with another stamp to be validated in June or July. So, please said OPA to housewives, don't rush in and use them before you need the sugar.

In addition to the spare, sugar stamp 39 is good and another one will be validated May 1.

KLEMME WOMAN INJURED FRIDAY IN CAR ACCIDENT

Mrs. J. E. Stille Thrown Out Of Car When Door Opened

Mrs. J. E. Stille was taken to a State Center, Iowa, hospital last Friday forenoon after she was injured in a car accident a few miles from that city as she was on her way to State Center to visit with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Turgasen.

Mrs. Stille was driving their Chevrolet coupe which has the car doors opening from the front. The door on the driver's side jarred open and was caught by the wind. Mrs. Stille attempted to grab hold of the door and in doing so was thrown out of her car. She suffered a number of gravel burns and bad bruises, but no bones were fractured.

The car continued down the road for some distance and ran off the road into the side of the ditch bank, which damaged the car considerably.

Spring Field Works Gets Under Way In Iowa

Spring is definitely here in North Iowa, and the past few days the farmers have been in their fields, discing and sewing small grains. A few "early-bird" farmers had their oats all seeded last week. This week end will see most small grain fields finished.

Picked Corn Last Week!

Gordon Schubert, a new-comer in our community who moved onto his own farm north and east of Klemme this spring, vacated by the Carl Swansons, picked about 20 acres of corn the latter part of the week. It was his landlord's share which he did not pick last fall. Gordon says the corn was in very good condition and will be fine for storing.

Incidently Carl Swanson purchased the farm northwest of Britt which was occupied by Gordon Schubert. The 2 farmers simply changed farms!

Ground Drying Fast

Most farmers say the ground is drying fast and corn stalks chop up easily. A few of the low spots are a bit mucky, but can be worked.

There are a few small fields of corn scatered around, and these will be picked. Some of the farmers think it would have been better not to pick the soft corn last fall, but leave it stand until spring. Those who did the latter with a few small fields are now benefiting by the unusual practice.

THINGS GO WRONG

Events are piling up for the Lester Hintons of Rockwell City—and they aren't good ones. One day recently, their summer cottage at Twin Lakes burned. The day following the fire, Hinton, accompanied by Arthur Wolff was driving to Rochester, Minn. They struck some icy pavement and the car landed in the ditch. A new fender and door will soon adorn the Ford, a new cottage will replace the one destroyed, and things will be back to normal for the Hinton family.

LONG TIME

A letter written to Mrs. Sherman Wickre of Reinbeck advising that her husband had been hospitalized at Kremf, Austria, was received recently. The letter was written on January 10, 1945, arrived in Reinbeck on February 25, 1946 Wickre, in the letter, had written about an operation on his hand necessitated by a machine gun fire wound. Four months after her husband's discharge, Mrs. Wickre received the letter telling about the operation.

HANCOCK BLUE CROSS CAMPAIGN ENDS

Another Drive Will Be Held In October

V. A. Cook, Chairmen of Hancock County Health Improvement Association, reported today that 110 rural families in Hancock County have taken advantage of their opportunity to become members of the Combination Blue Cross & Medical Plan, of hospitalization and surgical benefits during the recent campaign.

The Health Improvement Association, incorporated January 28, 1946, under the sponsorship of the Hancock County Farm Bureau, provides the necessary group basis for enrollment in the Blue Cross & the Medical Association & Surgical Plan. Many other counties in Iowa have followed the same procedure, resulting in hospital protection for rural residents in the state.

Over 3,000 hospitals in the United States and Canada are making this low-cost, non-profit service available to over 18,000,000 persons. The Surgical Plan of the Medical Association is new in combination with the Hospital Plan.

A reopening in Hancock County will be held October 1, 1946, to offer this combination plan to those who failed to join during the campaign just completed, Cook said.

THE NAME OF IOWA'S CAPITAL CITY

The name of the capital of Iowa and the river on which it is situated is of Indian origin corrupted and modified by French explorers and map makers of the 17th century. The name of the river might have been Moingoina of Keosauqua.

The name of Moingona was preserved for the river on French maps until Iowa was admitted to the Union. According to Professor Coues: "The Indians called their place Moingona, Moingonan, Moingouninas a word found in some form on very old maps. Later the French clipped the word to Moin, calling the people the Moins, and their river, La riviere des Moines, by spurious etymology."

The French fur traders, who came from the south into Iowa and penetrated as far as the present state capital, spoke of the interior as "de moyen", meaning the middle valley. A map made by Joliet in 1674 gives another name to the great central river of Iowa, but on various later maps the name appears as De Moin, Des Moines, Demoin, De Moyen, Demoir, and Demon The proper pronunciation is De Moin, with the accent on the second syllable.

By the time a military camp was located at The Raccoon Forks in 1843, the name had become so well established that Gen. Winfield Scott, Secretary of War, directed that the military base for the dragoons be called "Fort Des Moines". Later, a town which became the city of Des Moines was given that name, and was designated in 1855 to be the seat of the state government.

LONG WEDDED LIFE

On February 23, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Sweny of Monezuma celebrated their 64th wedding anniversary at their home. Mr. and Mrs. Sweny have 8 children, all living. Both were born in Montezuma and were married on a farm nearby and have lived their entire lives in that community.

WHO WILL USE IT?

A bottle of cologne was awarded the Red Oak Chamber of Commerce as a prize at the annual firemen's ball recently. It hasn't been definitely reported who used it, but probably Miss Ruth Ann Wood, executive secretary was the final consumer.

ROLLS AWAY

Jim Klein, Mason City, driver for a Clear Lake bakery, reported to police the theft of his automobile. He had left it parked in front of his home but on arising one morning recently, the car was nowhere in sight. After reporting the loss, Klein started on his regular route, stopping at Britt to obtain the engine number from the previous owner. The police discovered the car—in a neighbor's garage. The car had rolled downhill, narrowly missing a tree and came to a stop in the M. C. Turner garage, nearly a block away.

Homes Poured to Order

If we see anything approaching us resembling a huge concrete pourer accompanied by some apparatus out of a Superman cartoon it could be one of those outfits that now pours a man a home while he waits.

It seems that the machinery for producing such a home has been perfected and is already on the roads pouring home, sweet homes for people who want to get a parlor, bedroom and bath while they're hot.

The apparatus consists of a giant house-form or mould which is carted to a homesite. Then the cement mixer draws up and pours. After 24 hours a hydraulic derrick arrives, lifts off the form and . . . presto! . . . Thar she stands, the home complete if not beautiful!

All you have to do is chisel off the rough edges!

A man named LeTourneau has invented the housepourer and has been pouring 'em in Longview, Tex., and Vicksburg, Miss. Huge crowds gathered in each place to watch a machine lay a house just as a hen lays an egg.

All that remains to be done is to make the machine cackle at the end of the performance.

How simple! You buy a lot, phone the Day-A-Bungalow office and say you would like a four-room home right away. The man asks if you can wait a couple of hours. You say it's a rush order. Presently the apparatus trundles up and a man hops out with the query: "Where would you like this residence poured?"

Up to now it had been known only as a place once visited by Jeff Davis and as a town where Bill Corum once dug sweet potatoes, danced the two-step and played basketball But today out there they ask "Yale? Harvard? Princeton? Where are they?"

WNU Features.

TOSS a silver dollar on the bar. If it's genuine, it has a clear tone. If it's counterfeit, it echoes only a dull thud. If a dollar doesn't ring true, any Nevadan can detect it at once.

Hypocrisy has no place in Nevada, a state where there is plenty of room for almost anything. More than a hundred thousand square miles of brilliantly colored terrain rise in chain after chain of mountains, with snow-capped pinnacles 13,000 feet above the level of the sea. But everything and everybody in Nevada must ring as true as a silver dollar—or be quickly detected and properly appraised. Nevada is a big, free, unspoiled land where values are fundamental.

Nevada believes in a forthright approach to divorce, gambling and drinking. Human nature is human nature, and is seldom changed by passing a law. But there can be law and order—and there is in Nevada—without deprivation of personal rights or attempt to legislate morality.

Better to have license and control than bootlegging and illegal gambling, says Nevada. The details of a partnership dissolution concern only the persons involved. But tolerance of human foibles and mistakes is one thing; flouting of laws or obligations is another. Nevada takes its government seriously and tolerates no dishonesty, crime or hypocrisy. That's the way it is in Nevada—and Nevadans like it.

Ranchers and Miners.

And besides, Nevadans are more interested in prospecting, mining and ranching than they are in regulating the lives and habits of others. They love ranching and herds of sheep and cattle. Town folk and ranchers alike hunt for promising rocks that show a trace of gold, or silver, or other valuable mineral. They like broad highways that take them to lakes and mountains and pleasant valleys. Eating at counters and rubbing elbows with each other, and visitors, is one of their friendly habits. The "club," a social center not unlike the continental cafe, is a community institution.

Those who drive rapidly through Nevada, or stop only in its clubs to drink and try their gambling luck, will never know the state. Nevada's mountains have produced nearly two billion dollars of mineral wealth, chiefly in gold, silver and copper. Other important minerals are lead, zinc, quicksilver, tungsten, sulphur, graphite, borax, gypsum and building stone. No one can estimate its untouched, undiscovered and undeveloped wealth.

"But Nevada is a desert!" A desert? A most productive one, then, yielding wool, cattle, sheep, horses, hogs and poultry. The livestock industry is a big one in Nevada. The state's agriculture is varied, and as irrigation advances even more diversification is seen. Wheat, barley, hay, potatoes and many other crops are naturals. Water for irrigation comes from snow-fed mountain streams, from artesian wells, and from dug wells with pumps to raise it to the surface.

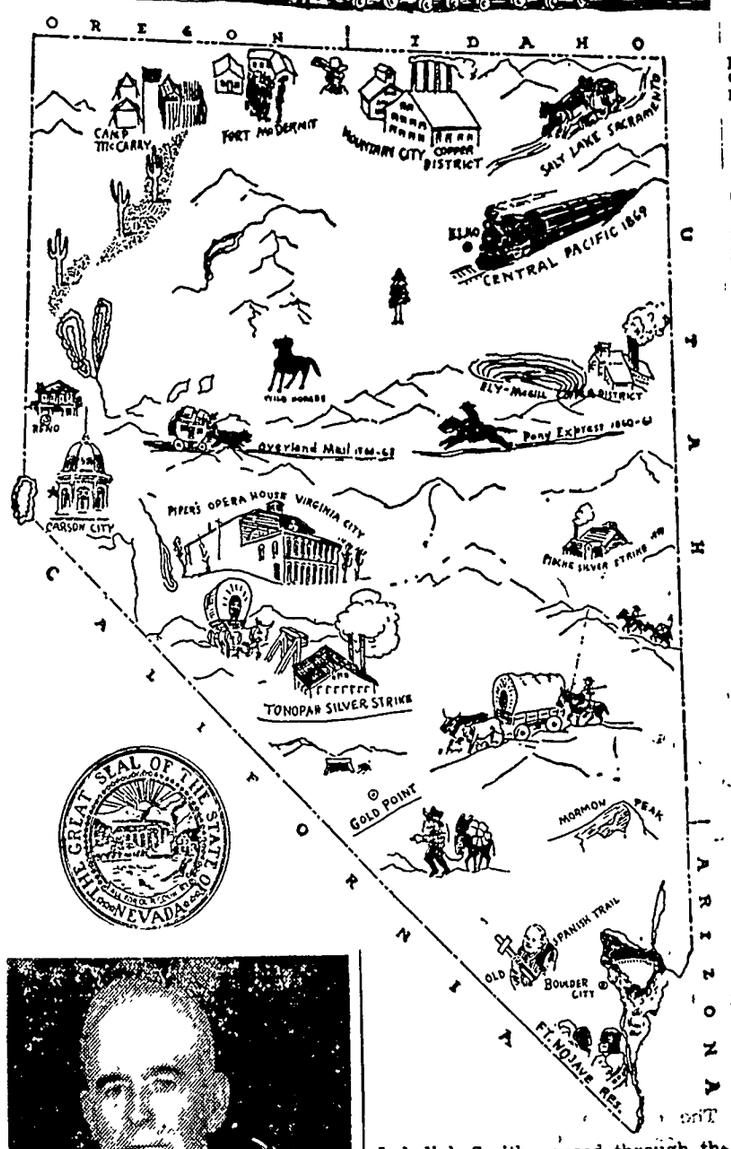
Growing in Wealth, Population.

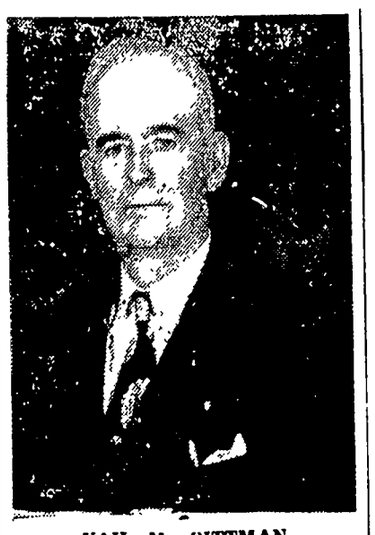
As Nevadans continue the development of the natural resources, their state forges ahead. The least populous of all the states, it contributed vitally to victory during the war just ended. Thousands of soldiers, ground troops and air forces were trained on its soil and in its air. Mines and mills operated at capacity to aid the war effort. Thousands of people came to the state to swell its 1940 population of 110,247.

"We in Nevada are individualists," Gov. Vail Pittman told the Nevada State Cattle association at Elko last fall. "We enjoy the thrill and satisfaction, as well as the profits, which our work brings us."

The democracy and hospitality of the Old West still live in Nevada. The state's richest citizen and the lowliest cowpuncher, miner or sheepherder sit down together. Movie stars and the nation's wealthiest who visit the state soon learn that they are not judged by their wealth or their fame. Nevada has its own standard. A gilded dollar is worth no more than any other; it's the metal inside that makes it ring true.

In 1775, before the Revolutionary war, Franciscan friars crossed Nevada on their way to California. Fifty years later, Peter Ogden of the Hudson Bay company discovered the Humboldt or Ogden river.





VAIL M. PITTMAN
Governor of Nevada

Former lumberman, rancher and banker, Governor Pittman is now publisher of the Ely Daily Times as well as the state's chief executive. He has also served as state senator and lieutenant-governor of Nevada.

Jedediah Smith passed through the region in 1826, and John C. Fremont traversed it with an exploring party a few years later.

Colonized by Mormons.

Brigham Young, the Mormon leader, who settled the Salt Lake basin, concluded that what is now Nevada was a part of his domain. In March, 1849, he announced the organization of the State of Deseret, which included Nevada. In that same year, N. Ambrose, Nevada's first farmer, settled near what is now Genoa. Colonization by the Mormons continued until 1857, when Young recalled them to Salt Lake City in order to mass his forces in the conflict with the federal government.

Until the discovery of the famous Comstock lode in 1859, there were only about 1,000 inhabitants in Nevada, chiefly Mormons and California gold seekers who had tarried along the way. But silver and gold brought a stampede of fortune hunters from all over the nation. The population of Virginia City spurted from a handful of men to 30,000. Bonanzas were struck and developed, and men became wealthy beyond their dreams overnight. For many years the Comstock lode was the richest silver mining center in the world, and from it has come approximately one billion dollars in gold and silver!

Soon Nevada became a territory, and on October 1, 1864, President Lincoln by proclamation made Nevada a state. Carson City, though smaller than Virginia City, was made the capital. Nicknamed the "Battle Born State," Nevada had lived through lawlessness, bickering, Indian uprisings and political chicanery to take its place as one of the stars in Old Glory.

Famous Lode Not Named for Finder

The Comstock lode at Virginia City was named for Henry Comstock, a man who did not discover it, and who would have been too lazy to work it if he had!

In June, 1859, Peter O'Riley and Patrick McLaughlin discovered a rich lode, though neither one realized how valuable it was at the time. Old Henry Comstock was prowling around as usual, watching others work, and immediately laid claim to the spot himself, insisting that he had already taken up claims there.

The two Irishmen, however, were unimpressed. Comstock went away to find help and returned the next day with Manny Penrod, who cheerfully backed up Comstock's story. Pete and Pat probably knew the two claimants were liars, but the site was lonely and they didn't want to go to court. They agreed to give Comstock and Penrod equal shares in the discovery.

But there was plenty of silver and gold for all of them!

JEEP ON LAKE MEAD . . Most of the shoreline of Lake Mead, back of Boulder dam, is in Nevada. Shown in the amphibious jeep are Lloyd Payne, Clark county clerk; J. D. Porter, Las Vegas, and Peggy Neville, Salt Lake City.

NEVADA'S ARTESIAN WELLS

The artesian well, shown at the right, is located near Gerlach. Such wells are being used to provide water for irrigation and livestock. This particular one, however, is a part of a frog farm. More and more wells are being drilled and dug in Nevada for irrigation and other purposes.

Most of the irrigation water, however, comes from mountain streams, fed by heavy snows far above the valleys.

FRIENDS OF JESUS

LESSON TEXT—Mark 10:13, 14; Luke 6:13-16; 8:1,3; 15:1, 2; John 3:1, 2a.

MEMORY SELECTION—Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you.—John 15:14.

Jesus is our friend. We may be His friends. Simple words thus present the most profound and satisfying experience of life. There is nothing more wonderful than friendship with Jesus.

We may become the friends of Jesus and make Him our friend simply by putting our faith in Him as Saviour and Lord and thus doing what He commands. He said, "Ye are my friends; if ye do whatsoever I command you" (John 15:14).

What kind of friends did Jesus choose? Did He limit His interest to a select circle of very religious people, or to the cultured and educated folk of His day? It may surprise some Christian people who have made the church a sort of exclusive club to learn how wide were the interests and the love of the Lord whom they profess to serve.

I. Children Were Welcomed (Mark 10:13, 14).

Observe that the disciples had fallen into that strange mode of thought which excluded the children. They were undoubtedly well-meaning in their desire to keep the Master from the intrusion (as they thought) of little ones. He was engaged in dealing with profound spiritual matters and they felt that He should not be disturbed.

Jesus was displeased. He seldom showed such feelings. Usually He bore silently with their mistakes, but this was so serious that they must be rebuked.

Little children belong with Jesus. Let us not forget it, and let us not fail to make it easy and attractive for them to come to Jesus in our churches and Sunday schools.

II. Witnesses Were Chosen (Luke 6:13-16).

When Jesus left this world to return to His Father's throne, He left witnesses behind.

It is significant that these men were of simple childlike spirit, unlearned in the formality of their day, but with a real genius for friendship both with the Lord and with a needy world.

The close fellowship of our Lord with these men was their course of training for service, and His blessed friendship was the burning fire which kept their hearts warm through the difficult years ahead.

III. Women Were Helped (Luke 8: 1-3).

Yes, and they became the Lord's willing helpers, just as a multitude of their sisters in the faith have been down through the ages.

Women responded readily to the Lord's message of redemption and to many of them He was able to look for loyal and sacrificial service.

Women were not highly thought of in His time on earth. They are little more than useful creatures in heathen lands today. Christianity set womanhood free, raised it to its glorious place of dignity and usefulness. Every woman ought to love Jesus with deep devotion.

Note that some of the wealthy women gave of their means to serve Jesus. It is one of the effective ways in which women carry on work for the Lord today.

IV. Outcasts Were Received (Luke 15:1, 2).

Publicans and sinners—who would they be in our day? Drunkards, thieves, gamblers, prostitutes, criminals of all kinds.

A beautiful and touching word by G. Campbell Morgan is quoted in Peloubet's Notes. Listen sinner, Jesus "receiveth unto Himself sinners. He takes them into His comradeship, makes familiar friends of them, takes them to His heart. That is the gospel. He is not high-seated on a throne bending down to you and offering you pardon if you will kiss His scepter. He is by you in the pew, He is close to you in your sin, and He will take you as you are with the poison and the virus within you, put His arms about you and press you into a great comradeship." Will you let Him do it—now?

V. Rulers Were Converted (John 3:1, 2a).

"Not many mighty, not many noble, are called" (I Cor. 1:26), but thank God, it does not say "not any." Some there were in high places who set aside their pride, their position and all, to come humbly to Jesus.

Nicodemus was one of these. It is true that he came by night, but he came; and that is wonder enough for a man in his position. Read his defense of Jesus amid the scorn of his fellow Sanhedrin members (John 7:45-53).

These, then, are the friends of Jesus. Do you find your place among them? There is room for you. He is waiting to receive you. Will you come to Him now?

Expect 'Carbon 13' to Rank With X-Rays

Research Promises Medical Science New Tool.

PHILADELPHIA. — Expanded production of Carbon 13, which recent experiments in biochemical research indicate "gives promise of ranking in importance with x-ray as a tool of medical science," was announced here recently by Sun Oil company and Houdry Process corporation.

The isotope, so rare that current production has been at the rate of less than one-half ounce a year, "may be compared to a chemical microscope that makes it possible for the chemist to see and follow chemical reactions in the body not possible with the x-ray."

Carbon 13 has been described as appearing like an ordinary carbon It can be used to produce any of the compounds normally composed of carbon, such as sugar, alcohol, the hydrocarbons of gasoline and thousands of others.

Or, the statement continued, Carbon 13 can be used to grow vegetables which have some or all carbon atoms with atomic mass equaling 13.

These compounds and vegetables, injected into or eaten by living organisms, including humans, contain the necessary "tracers" by which their effect on body functions can be discovered.

Research with the isotope, the companies said, already has led to discovery of how fats are broken down in the animal organism to create energy necessary to carry on the life process.

"The possibilities of research with Carbon 13 are almost beyond imagination," the statement said. "It is a new and powerful tool for a revolutionary approach to studies of the fundamental processes that occur in all living things, as well as metabolic disease processes such as cancer, diabetes, hardening of the arteries, so-called 'heart trouble' and others."

The companies announced plans for construction, by Sun Oil, of two plants to produce "comparatively substantial quantities of Carbon 13."

Loud-Speaking Radio Stilled; Owner Jailed

LOS ANGELES. — Mrs. Lucille Wiseman, 43, began 60 radioless days in jail for violating probation granted when she was convicted a year ago of playing her radio so loud her neighbors' dishes "jumped" on their shelves.

The dishes were still jumping to the beat of hillbilly music, the neighbors told Judge C. Newell Carns, who revoked Mrs. Wiseman's probation.

The noise has grown louder instead of softer since Mrs. Wiseman was fined $25 last December, the neighbors said.

New Dreadnaught May Be Last in British Navy

LONDON. — The Daily Mail said recently that a special admiralty commission was working on revolutionary plans for a new anti-atom navy for Britain.

The commission's report, the newspaper said, was expected to be delivered in March and will decide whether the 40,000-ton H.M.S. Vanguard, due for her trials soon, will be the last of that type battleship the navy will build.

The article predicted that every branch of the Royal navy, from recruiting and training to battle tactics, will be affected by the commission's findings.

BRAVE FISHERMEN

When the temperature reached into the 60's one day recently, six fishermen started out to fish in the Mississippi River at the Lynxville dam near McGregor. The fishermen, Wm. H. Schroeder, Fred J Figge, Dick Dvorak, and Glen Oyloe, of Ossian, Earl Corlett of Castalia, and Father Peters of McGregor returned with 16 fish. The 60-degree temperature dropped some even before the fishermen started out but that didn't keep them at home and they experienced rain sleet and snow but had an enjoyable day.

BACK TO OLDEN DAYS

The water bucket has become quite a common thing in Swea City the past few days. The city well ran dry and a new one dug last fall has not provided enough to supply the necessary water. The school had to close for a few days and business places and residences were provided with water by carrying it from wells and cisterns.

CLOCK TAKEN DOWN

In 1894 the building used by the Farmers State Bank at Marion was erected. At the same time, a large clock was installed on the building and has for all these years told the time for one and all. However, recently the clock had not been running properly and could not be repaired. Last week, after fifty-one years, it was taken down from its long place of business.

RETIRES

H. J. Presthus, farmer living in Greenwood township, Kossuth county, has now retired. He was born on a farm 62 years ago and has lived there all his life. Recently he turned the farm over to his son, Harold, and has moved to Algona.

FOR CONSERVATION

State conservation officer G. Yates now believes in the goodness of people. He received a call from the Sheriff of Floyd county, advising that he had a check made payable to the Conservation office for $200.00. The man paying the check stated that several years previously he had shot some pheasants out of season and wanted to square his conscience by doing something of benefit for the game birds in that vicinity. Therefore, the Knoxville community will receive the $200 which will be used for game cover plantings by the conservation organization.

CATCHES THIEF

Bill Tofte of Waverly not only helped himself but also the Waterloo police department by catching a thief in the last named place. Tofte noticed a man getting into his car into which he had just loaded some electrical merchandise. Bill immediately went into action and captured the thief red-handed. The man was taken into custody by Waterloo police who described him as an ex-convict. "Poochy," the Tofte dog, was in the front seat of the car and slept thru the whole fracas, and is now in disgrace with the Tofte family.

TOWN IS GONE

The general store building, with hall above, has been sold and will be moved away, thus ending all signs of the town of Poplar. All that remains of the once prosperous town is the cemetery. The store had been closed for several years. Included in the sale to John Sunburg of Audubon was a house which will be moved. The store will be torn down for its lumber and the land will probably be farmed.

PETS HAVE GONE

Bobbie Knudson of Irwin has had bad luck with his pets so far. Three years ago, his pet dog "Sparkey" was run over and killed. Last week, another truck was instrumental in killing his dog "Pixie." Last fall his white rabbit died. All that is left for the little boy to play with are his two white hens.

SWITCHED COATS

Charles Cummings and Louis Stanford, Montezuma, apparently didn't know that their coats were not their own until they met each other on the street. All was settled peaceably. Another Montezuma man, Walter Hockey, got things a bit mixed up one day last week. He got all ready to go to lodge meeting. That is all right, except that he did all of his preparation for the meeting on a Thursday night, while the meetings are on Monday nights.

Poisoning Better Than Trapping For Gophers

Rainy spring days provide a good opportunity on most Iowa farms to poison pocket gophers, says Harold Gunderson, Iowa State College entomologist. He points out that poisoning the pests is a quicker way to destroy them than trapping.

Irish potatoes, turnips, carrots, or parsnips cut up in small strips all make good bait. Fill a quart jar with the bait while it is still moist. Then add 1-16 of ounce of strychnine to 1 tablespoonful of wheat flour and pour the powder into the quart jar of bait. Shake vigorously until the powder has coated the bait Add the dust mixture to the bait in two doses to make sure the powder and the bait are thoroughly mixed.

In hunting the gopher, you'll need a sharpened broomstick to probe for the runway of the burrow at a fresh mound. When you have found the runway, drop a couple of pieces of the poisoned bait into the hole and close it with your heel. When you have completed the field treatment of all the burrows, get the harrow and drag down the mound.

If you've missed any of the burrows, you'll find them the next day. The gopher will indicate his presence in the field by throwing up a new mound. You can repeat the treatment in this case.

Treatment must be a community affair with every farmer treating. If only one or two farmers poison gophers in their fields, they'll be reinfested by gophers from the neighbors' fields. A thorough campaign by all farmers in an area will rid the fields of gophers for 5 or 6 years

Total numbers of market hogs on farms were about the same as a year ago.

Canadian farmers are paid for hogs on the basis of their grade after they are slaughtered. This gives Canadians a real reason for trying to produce the type of hog that provides the best carcass.

RAIN AND COOLER TODAY!

Our mild spring weather took a "nose-dive" today when the thermometer dipped down into the 40 degree mark following last nights fairly heavy rain.

The rain and cold weather will delay farm work for a few days.

Heavy breed pullets hatched in March or earlier and light breeds, such as Leghorns hatched in April lay more eggs than those hatched later. This is shown by records of poultrymen who cooperate in record-keeping with Iowa State College.

Fertilizer may boost oat yields 20 bu. an acre or more, tests conducted in various parts of Iowa have shown. The tests were supervised and checked by workers from Iowa State College.

Iowa farmers are reporting difficulty in getting enough help, according to reports coming to John R. Fitzsimmons of Iowa State College, who is in charge of the state labor office.

The worst pinch in the grain market may come this spring rather than in late summer as some predicted, says Francis Kutish, Iowa State College economist.

It's hard to name any manufactured article that isn't partly the product of electricity. It is basic to all industry. It provides the power that makes America the most productive nation on earth.

Testing your memory again, do you know how much the cost of home electric service has come down through the years? You may not have noticed because you kept buying more electric appliances and using more electricity. But actually, the average American family gets twice as much electricity for its money as it did 20 years ago!

Low-priced electric service — friendly and dependable — is made possible by the sound business management of America's self-supporting, tax-paying electric light and power companies.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Conservative Bloc Fights OPA; G. M. Strike Settlement Spur to All-Out Automobile Production

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

CONGRESS:

Conservative Coalition

Having first shown its strength in passage of the Case anti-strike bill, a coalition of southern Democrats and Republicans is being organized in congress to loosen government regulation over the nation's economy.

Led by Representative Hartley (Rep., N. J.), 100 congressmen already have joined the coalition, with a strategy committee composed of Hartley himself, Crawford (Rep., Mich.), Smith (Dem., Va.), Barden (Dem., N. C.), Camp (Dem., Ga.), Roe (Dem., Md.), Jenkins (Rep., Ohio), Buffet (Rep., Neb.), Pace (Dem., Ga.) and Sundstrom (Rep., N. J.).

Though the coalition strategy calls for an attack on OPA pricing regulations such as requiring sellers to absorb part of increased costs of production and distribution, the group will seek modification rather than outright abolition of the agency. Support would be given to a one year extension of OPA.

Senator Wherry (Rep, Neb.) was to head the coalition in the senate, where support may be slower in developing because of the need for members to canvass their positions more accurately in view of their wider constituencies Reflecting this more cautious approach, the senate greatly watered the stringent Case bill which restricted labor activities.

WAR CRIMES:

Hermann Brags

Attired in a baggy uniform with a red scarf tied around his neck, Hermann Goering showed all of his old cockiness in being the first of the Nazi war criminals to testify in his behalf in the historic Nuernberg trials.

With a noose staring him in the face, the rumpled former Reich air marshall proudly boasted that he had been Hitler's right-hand man and striven mightily to strengthen the national Socialist party rule "to make Germany free" Though the Nazis had come into power through free elections, he said, every effort was made to retain their leadership even to the elimination of all political opposition.

In recounting the notorious blood purge of 1933, Goering claimed that Gen. Kurt von Schleicher and Gen. Curt von Hammerstein-Equord had sought to overthrow Hitler shortly before the installation of his first cabinet. In a quick Nazi countermove, the putsch was crushed and von Schleicher murdered.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS:

Russ on Spot

Russia was put on her honor by high American and British officials in the midst of reports that reinforced Red armies were fanning over northern and western Iran and threatening Turkey and Iraq.

In Washington, D. C., President Truman openly expressed confidence that the U. S. and Russia could resolve their difficulties arising over Iran and the Reds stripping of Manchurian industry through diplomatic procedure At the time Mr. Truman spoke, Russia's only answer to the state department's protest over continued Red occupation of Iran in violation of a tri-partite agreement was an unofficial Moscow radio broadcast that reports of Russian troop movements in Iran were inaccurate.

Coincident with President Truman's expression of belief in Russia, Foreign Minister Bevin of Great Britain stressed premier Stalin had unequivocally assured his major war allies that the Reds would respect Iranian territorial integrity in accordance with tri-partite agreements. Foreign Commissar Molotov reiterated Russia's intention to pull out of Iran during the London conference of foreign ministers, Bevin added.

Behind the political tension, reports persisted that the Reds were exerting the strongest pressure on Iran for oil concessions in the north The British have extensive petroleum holdings in the south as well as in neighboring Iraq, where a native movement for self-rule backed by the Reds is feared.

LABOR:

Auto Wages

Emerging haggard and bewhiskered from the conference room after 17 hours of continuous negotiation between CIO-United Automobile Workers and General Motors officials, UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas muttered: "Considering everything, I think we've got a pretty good contract."

Settled after a bitter 113-day strike, the pact did provide substantial wage and other concessions to the union, though falling short of UAW goals. Despite the long-drawn bickering, the company granted only 18½ cents an hour instead of the 19½ cents demanded, and the average G M. wage was set at from $1.12 to $1 30½ cents an hour, still below the Ford and Chrysler pay rates.

By obtaining important concessions from the company, however, UAW officials claimed that the total financial gain would exceed the 19½ cents an hour sought. Gains included adjustment of inequalities in wage rates in certain plants, improved vacation pay up to 4½ per cent of gross income of employees of five years or more, double time for the seventh consecutive day on the job, and equal compensation for women.

In winning substantial pay concessions for the future, the strikers paid a heavy price in lost wages of between 138 million and 150 million dollars. The company was estimated to have dropped 600 million dollars in unfilled orders while distributors lost 150 million dollars in sales commissions.

Production Prospects

With the settlement of the G. M. strike, the auto industry hoped to clear the decks for all-out production to meet the tremendous pent-up demand for new cars. Because many parts suppliers still have to negotiate wage demands, however, the threat to full-scale output remained.

In any event, the auto industry will be unable to meet the goal of six million cars set for 1946. With reasonably clear sailing, it is expected that three million passenger vehicles will be turned out during the remainder of the year.

Indicative of the high gear into which the industry must be thrown to meet production goals, Ford has assembled only 76,000 cars thus far: Chrysler, 53,000; General Motors, under 100,000; Willys-Overland, 62,000; Studebaker, 38,000; Nash, 11,000, and Hudson, 4,000.

Other Strikes

Despite settlement of the General Motors strike and the agreement between General Electric and the CIO-United Electrical Workers, strikes continued to cloud the postwar economic picture, with the dispute between International Harvester and the CIO-Farm Equipment Workers the most serious.

With International Harvester and the union deadlocked over the company's proposal that an 18 cent wage raise be conditioned upon government grant of an offsetting price increase, Secretary of Agriculture Anderson called upon management and labor to co-operate in the production of vitally needed equipment to meet the big crop goals. Unless farmers are able to step up the output, he said, this country will be unable to furnish sufficient food to avert mass starvation abroad.

Termination of the General Electric strike, with an 18½ cent an hour wage raise bringing average weekly earnings to approximately $42, opened the way toward large scale production of home appliances. Previously, General Motors' electrical division had made peace with the CIO union on the same terms

POLITICS:

Bad Mixture

Though stubbornly fighting to the last, Big Ed Pauley finally conceded that oil and politics don't mix, asking for withdrawal of his nomination as undersecretary of the navy despite President Truman's determined support in the face of strong congressional opposition.

A millionaire California oil-man and former treasurer of the Democratic party, Pauley faced rough going from the start, with astute political observers terming the nomination of any petroleum operator for a navy job a blunder in view of past scandals over navy oil.

Edwin W. Pauley (seated) reads missive from President as brother Harold looks on.

Whatever hopes Pauley nourished for confirmation were rudely shaken with former Interior Secretary Ickes' testimony that he had told him that $300,000 could be raised from oil men for the 1944 Democratic campaign if the government would withdraw its suit for title over underwater petroleum deposits in California.

In asking the President to withdraw his nomination, which was done, Pauley declared that he had been cleared of all charges against him. Commending him for retiring from the fight, Democratic members of the senate naval affairs committee upheld his personal integrity.

CONSCRIPTION:

Prospects Brighten

Because of the precarious international situation aggravated by Russian moves in the east, congressional support grew for extension of the selective service act beyond May 15.

With war department officials calling for maintenance of military strength in the face of unsettled world conditions, it was revealed that plans called for an army of 1,500,000 officers and men by July, 1946, and 1,000,000 by July, 1947. Pending determination of the aims, policies and programs of other nations, and the efficiency of the UNO in resolving disputes, no decision can be made about the permanent size of the armed forces, it was said.

General Eisenhower declared that one of the principal arguments for the retention of selective service was that it acts as a spur for voluntary enlistments. With volunteers permitted to specify what branch of service they prefer, many young men act to pick their spots before being drafted and made subject to compulsory placement. In five months, 600,017 volunteers enlisted, with 67.07 per cent being World War II vets, 18.7 per cent recruits and 14.23 per cent pre-Pearl Harbor enrollees.

WORLD RELIEF:

Sharing Burden

Assuming the honorary chairmanship of the government's emergency famine committee, former Pres. Herbert Hoover called upon South American nations to join with their Big Brother of the north in conserving cereals for feeding of the hungry in war stricken Europe and Asia.

Prior to leaving for a first-hand survey of overseas conditions, Hoover told a news conference that he believed both North and South America could save upwards of 7 million tons of cereals during the next 120 days to help fill a need for about 9 million tons. The year's requirements will total 21 million tons, he said, but only 12 million tons will be available without the undertaking of broad conservation measures.

Of the total of 7 million tons that the western hemisphere could furnish within the next four months, South America could contribute 5 million tons, Hoover said. This amount could be made available by cutting down purchases of foreign goods requiring payment in grain; reducing consumption, and turning over all surpluses to famine threatened areas.

MILK:

Per capita consumption of milk and cream jumped to 442 pounds in 1945, the highest total ever reached, and 102 pounds more than the per capita consumption in the five year period from 1935-39, government figures show

Translated into housewife's terms these figures meant that an average of about 206 quarts of milk in 1945, almost four quarts a week was consumed for each man, woman and child in the nation, in the form of milk and cream.

World Hog Numbers Show Big Drop

Showing a sharp decrease of 5,000,000 head, world hog numbers dropped to 244,000,000 at the start of 1946 in comparison with the year previous. Reductions in central Europe, Canada and Argentina were offset only partially by moderate increases in the U. S., France and the Soviet Union, and small increases in other countries.

Because of the critical world shortage of grains, further decline in hog numbers outside the U. S. is forecast in 1946 despite a demand for meat well above the supply.

Canadian hog numbers continue to decline and at the beginning of 1946 showed a drop of 1.8 million head below the year before, or 38 per cent below 1944, while in the U. S. they rose 4 per cent, thus recuperating part of the loss shown on January 1, 1945, compared with 1944.

PRACTICAL FARM BUILDINGS

Farm Machine Shop

By W. J. Dryden, WNU Farm Editor.

Farm machinery can be made to last many additional years if it is systematically overhauled, repaired and repainted. In order that this work be accomplished it is essential that a proper machine shop be provided.

The size of the shop will be determined by the needs of the individual farmer. The Minnesota type shown on this page will prove satisfactory on most farms

It is well that the farm shop be located with respect to other farm buildings. The type of building will also influence the location. A combination shop and garage should be located a short distance from the back door of the house. If the farm shop is a part of a building used for sheltering farm machinery, it should be located between the horse barn and the road leading to the fields, to save time in handling the farm machinery.

The shop may be made of lumber or plywood, or sheet metal, or it may be of brick, tile or concrete block construction. The foundation should be of concrete, extending about 18 inches into the ground. It should be 6 inches thick at the top and 10 to 12 inches thick at the base.

Concrete makes an ideal floor for the shop. It should slope about 1 inch in 10 feet toward the doorway. Driveway or rampway should be above the ground level and may be of concrete or gravel and soil.

Vertical boards with battens will make an inexpensive covering and will last for years. Either vertical or horizontal drop siding may be used. If the shop is to be heated, the walls should be boarded on the inside or covered with plywood. It might be advisable to provide insulated walls.

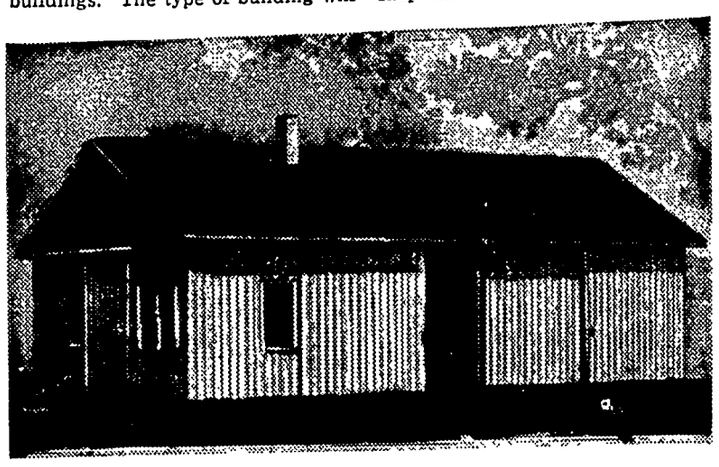
The type of building will largely determine the shape of the roof. If the building is a combination machine shed and shop, a gable or broken gable roof will be the most appropriate. The roof may be covered with wooden shingles, galvanized iron roofing, composition shingles or roll roofing. The best grade of wooden shingles, if laid 4 or 4½ inches to the weather, will give splendid service. The galvanized iron roofing, if properly coated with zinc, will also be satisfactory.

The shop should have windows large enough to admit plenty of light for doing all kinds of repair work and arranged to provide good cross ventilation. Two windows should be provided over the workbench, one at each vise. Four windows, each consisting of six 10- by 12-inch panes would be sufficient for the average shop.

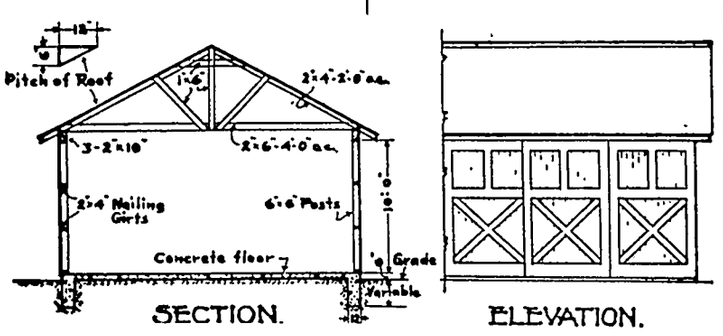
Double doors having a total width of 8 feet and a height of 8 feet will make it possible to bring into the shop most of the farm machines. A doorway 12 feet wide would be better for the large machines that need overhauling.

If a forge is to be used or if the shop is to be heated, a brick or tile chimney should be built. A double flue is desirable when one chimney must serve for the forge and the stove, although a single flue may do quite well. The chimney should extend at least three feet above the highest part of the roof. A screen over the chimney will reduce fire hazards.

The well-equipped farm shop will serve as the center of activity for a great variety of repair and construction jobs in wood, metal, leather, rope and concrete. Auto and tractor repairing, glazing, soldering, simple plumbing and electrical jobs can also be performed more readily because of a well-equipped shop.

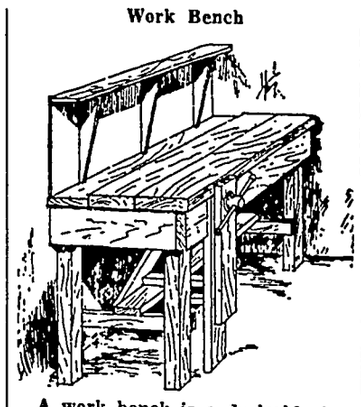


Machine shop should be large enough to permit farm machinery storage during repairs.

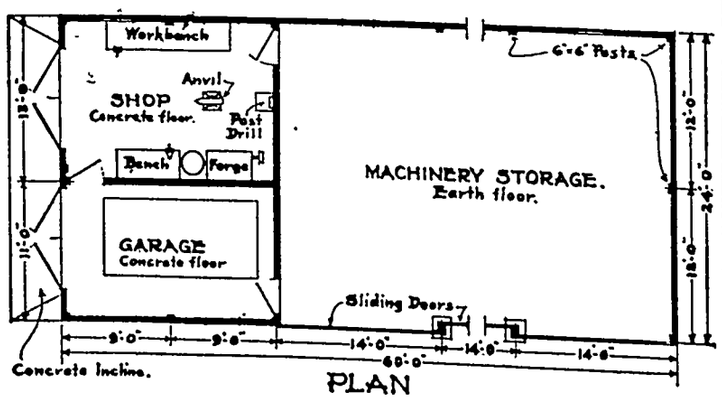


This Plan May Be Added to as Desired.

Work Bench



A work bench is a desirable feature on any farm. The one shown is eight feet long, approximately three feet wide. It is very solidly constructed, built for heavy service.



Machine Storage May Be Added to As Desired.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This newspaper, through special arrangement with the Washington Bureau of Western Newspaper Union at 1616 Eye Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., is able to bring readers this weekly column on problems of the veteran and serviceman and his family. Questions may be addressed to the above Bureau and they will be answered in a subsequent column. No replies can be made direct by mail, but only in the column which will appear in this newspaper regularly.

Vets' Hospital Facilities To Be Greatly Enlarged

Reflecting the need for increased hospitalization facilities and the pushing of the Veterans' administration hospital construction program, is the fact that at the beginning of February a total of 17,015 veterans were on the hospital list awaiting entrance and the number was increasing at the rate of approximately 4,000 per month.

As a matter of fact, however, less than 4 per cent of those awaiting treatments had service - connected disabilities, although it is the policy of the administration to provide hospital facilities for all non-service disabilities wherever room is available.

In his effort to provide more hospital space, Gen. Omar Bradley has obtained the use of six army hospitals and in addition, navy has agreed to make available 9,850 beds in navy hospitals. The army has agreed to supply up to 10,000 beds if they can obtain the necessary personnel to service them.

Maj. Gen Paul R. Hawley, who recently resigned from the army to take over full charge of the veterans' medical and surgical division, asserts that more than 13,000 veterans discharged from the service have their hearing affected and have gone through rehabilitation programs. He estimated that in the next 20 years there would be from 200,000 to 400,000 hard-of-hearing veterans as a result of war service.

Questions and Answers

Q. My son was in the army for 3 years, overseas 18 months. Before going, he took out an allotment for my three children, but I never received it. He also sent $30 to me out of his check, but I didn't know it at the time, thinking it was the allotment to the children. When he came home, he told me I was not receiving the allotment. I would like to know if I can still get it.—Mrs. L. R. S., Wasola, Mo.

A. The army says that if the allotment was actually deducted from your son's pay he is entitled to a refund of the amount deducted. Write to the Office of Dependency Benefits, U. S. Army, Newark 2, N. J., giving all details, son's full name and serial number.

Q. I am a veteran of this war and was wounded November 19, 1944, and since have been unable to do much of anything. I got discharged two weeks ago and decided I had to have money so I went up to see about getting a G.I. loan. They told me the only things you could get a loan on was to buy a home or a business. Now I have been misled, for I thought I could get a loan on anything your local banker would let me have the money on, so I am stuck. I want to buy a tractor and equipment so I can farm, also build on my house I already have paid for. Now how can I do it?—E. T. M., Arlington, Kan.

A. The G.I. law provides you may obtain money for both these purposes, either a tractor for furthering your business of farming or to repair, remodel or make alterations to your home. The law also provides, however, that you must first obtain a lender who will make the loan and that the lender is the judge of whether or not you are a good risk. Would suggest you obtain from your nearest veterans' administration a list of approved lenders in your town and seek out one who will agree to make the loan.

Q. I have sugar diabetes 100 per cent. Was inducted before the war and spent three months and was discharged in January after war was declared. They sent me to the veterans' facilities for application for compensation, but they turned me down, said the fact was on my induction papers. I appealed to Washington and was turned down there. Please tell me how I can get some help from the government. —L. W., Poplarville, Miss.

A. I am afraid there is nothing you can do since your disability was evident when you were inducted, unless you can present evidence it was aggravated by your short service, or that you have some other disability.

Q. I would like some information regarding the whereabouts of my brothers. One is with the 600th Port. company, APO 562 The other with the 54th Reif. Bn. APO 772. Could you tell me where they are located and if they may be home soon.—Mrs. G. R. R., Arcadia, Calif.

A. Th 600th Port. company arrived in New York last August 18 and the 54th Reif Bn. was inactivated in France on November 4, 1945. If they have not arrived home, they may have been transferred to other units.

"Off We Go" AVIATION NOTES

'STINSON VOYAGER 150' IS NOW ON THE ASSEMBLY LINE

Production of the four-place "Voyager 150" has begun at the Stinson factory, Wayne, Michigan. Exhaustive tests, including hundreds of hours of cross country flying, were given the plane by experienced pilots.

Among the performance tests given the "Voyager 150" prototype was one for high altitude operations in the Rocky mountains in Colorado. These tests were made at Creede, Colo., where the airport is 8,700 feet above sea level, the highest CAA designated field in the United States. In repeated takeoffs carrying a capacity load of four passengers, the "Voyager" was always airborne in less than 1,350 feet.

Powered by a 150-horsepower Franklin engine, the postwar "Voyager" cruises at 125 miles an hour and has a range of 500 miles.

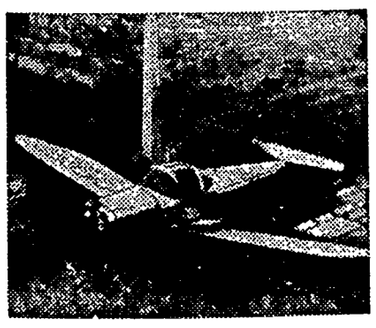
WILL ROGERS FIELD

Will Rogers field at Oklahoma City has been chosen as the location for several important CAA activities. Among the units to be moved there are the standardization center, general aircraft maintenance base for the midwest, and the signals division school. Will Rogers field was chosen because of its convenient geographical location, good airfield facilities, excellent flying weather and availability for centralization of all CAA training activities, T. P. Wright, CAA administrator, stated.



SPIN-PROOF . . . The Ercoupe was recently declared one of the safest planes to fly because it is certified "incapable of spinning" by the CAA.

Advocates Folding Wings

Folding wings in personal planes "would save airplane owners $150 or more a year in storage charges and at the same time increase the airfield owners' income," John H. Geisse, assistant to the administrator for personal flying equipment, CAA, recently stated. With folding-wing planes, the cost of hangar construction per plane would be cut two-thirds or more, Geisse believes, and the number of planes which could be accommodated at a small airfield greatly increased.

Little Town in Kansas Is 'Oberammergau of Plains'

LINDSBORG, KAN.—On Sunday, April 14, and again on Easter Sunday, April 21, thousands of pilgrims will come to Lindsborg, "Oberammergau of the Plains," to pay their homage to "The Messiah," just as they have done for the past 64 years, since 1882. So much a tradition has it become that pilgrimages from all parts of the Middle West are made each Easter season to hear the inspired singing of villagers and town folk in Prosser hall, Bethany college.

Handel's "Messiah" has been sung 181 times by the Bethany college oratorio society and will be sung the 182nd time on Palm Sunday and the 183rd time on Easter Sunday. The chorus of 500 voices and orchestra of 65 pieces will be directed by Dr. Hagbard Brase, who has been the conductor since 1915.

It was the Rev. Olaf Olsson, a lover of music, who organized the first choir in Lindsborg. Later, another Lutheran pastor, the Rev. Carl Aaron Swenson, gathered an enthusiastic group in the Bethany Lutheran church for a rehearsal under direction of his wife. That was in January, 1882, and the first "Messiah" was sung the following Easter Sunday.

At first, most of the singers were farmers, but they all loved music. Through the bitter Kansas winter the singers came in sleds and lumber wagons to the rehearsals. There were many trying times, but the people remained deeply spiritual. "The Messiah" became their religion, their faith. And so it has remained from generation to generation.

The Lindsborg "Messiah" had made possible the appearances here of celebrated artists. The first one was Madame Nordica. After her recital the Bethany male chorus pulled her carriage to the local railroad station. Since that time Hempel, Elman, Schumann-Heink, Galli-Curci, and many others have inspired Lindsborg audiences with their solo parts in "The Messiah."

Kansan Watches P-80 Fuel Tank Fall Near Farm

SABETHA, KANS. — It's one thing to read about the P-80 Shooting Star airplane—and quite another to hear one, not be able to see it, and then have one of its fuel tanks come hurtling down from the sky and land near you. Ask Otho L. Johnstone; he can tell you!

At first Mr. Johnstone was puzzled by the sound of the jet plane, for it did not sound like the ordinary planes which fly over Kansas all the time. Unable to see the plane, he picked out the location of the sound, thinking a high-altitude flyer was in trouble.

Just then he saw an object come hurtling down, end over end. It landed farther from him than he expected, fortunately, and he went over to inspect it. Made of aluminum, it was about 12 feet long and had been crushed on one end by the fall, but not broken. There was about a gallon of fuel left in it.

Two of the fuel tanks were found in this area. First to report one was Albert Holthaus, who lives near Maple Shade school. Since the tanks were just alike, it is possible that both came from the same plane. They are auxiliary tanks which can be dropped from the plane when the fuel in them is depleted.

Over 200 Officers, One Sergeant Left

TURNER FIELD, GA. — Few former privates will sympathize with this sergeant, but they'd probably like to see him wear his arm out saluting the officers.

The strength at Turner field, which is near Albany, has been reduced to one sergeant major—and between 200 and 300 officers!

The officers, a civilian staff, and the lonely sergeant keep 550 airplanes on a flyable-storage basis. Incidentally, many of the civilian employes are former servicemen.

GI Joe (Pony) Is Sold for $20,000

CHICAGO. — The price of "G.I. Joe" has been zooming the last few months. Now he's worth $20,000.

Joe is a Shetland pony who brought an all-time high of $13,500 at the Chicago Coliseum horse show last November. Recently an Indianapolis business man who bought Joe in Chicago sold him to J. L. Young-husband, Valley View farm, Barrington, for $20,000. The pony, greatest of his breed in ring competition in the last 10 years, cost an Industry, Ill., man $1,500. He sold Joe for $10,000 at the show to a Springfield buyer and H. Leslie Atlass of Wheaton. They in turn sold him to the Indianapolis man.

Jeeps Conquer Mud For Rural Carriers

JASPER, GA. — When it comes to good old Georgia mud, Pickens county is an unwilling claimant to the state championship. But two rural mail carriers have solved the mud problem and up to now have been making their trips on almost mid-summer schedules. Jeeps turned the trick for the carriers, W. J. Hamrick and R. E. Williams.

On only one occasion were they doubtful, and that was after a two-inch rain had fallen with the mud worse than ever. But the jeeps took them through.

Hamrick had a premonition of a bad winter, so he purchased a jeep in December to serve the patrons on Talking Rock Route 1. Early in January, Jasper Route 1 got so bad that Williams could not get through with his regular car. So he hired Hamrick to drive him around in the jeep. One trip was enough to convince Williams that jeeping it was the right way to beat Pickens county mud.

Throughout the winter the jeeps, with their four-wheel drive, have been able to travel over every road in the county. And so far "neither snow, nor rain, nor heat nor night (nor mud) stays these couriers from swift completion of their appointed rounds."

Rural carriers, who have long held that "the mail must go through," have thus found a peacetime use for the reliable jeep which won so many laurels in war.

Farm Machinery Output Rose in 1945

WASHINGTON. — Farm machinery production in 1945 topped that of 1944 by over 20 million dollars, the civilian production administration has reported.

The production totaled $663,484,196 of which $240,060,434 or more than one-third was in repair parts and attachments.

During the second half of the year, the production of repair parts decreased and more new machinery was produced. Irrigation systems and domestic water systems recorded the greatest production gains, with harvesting machinery, haying machinery, sprayers, dusters and orchard heaters also showing substantial increases.

Only a few new models in farm machinery were introduced during the war years, but before the end of 1946 many new devices for power farming will be on the market.

The Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

LEWIS IN REAL ESTATE

WASHINGTON.—Just how vigorously John L. Lewis plans to enter his battle to recapture the CIO came out at the AFL executive board meeting in Miami, where the bushy-browed labor thespian joined his former enemies in a holy war against his former friends, Phil Murray and the CIO.

One of Lewis' first moves was to persuade the AFL to move out of its shabby 30-year-old headquarters to a modern streamlined building near the White House.

Lewis was named chairman of an AFL committee to acquire the new building. Some years ago John paid a quarter of a million for the University club, once the home of Washington elite, and made it his United Mine Workers headquarters.

'VOTED AGAINST VETERANS'

Veterans are considering a new symbol which may become as famous as the label "Made by Union Labor." It will probably take the form of the initials "VAV."

When these initials are used immediately following a congressman's name, it will indicate that he "voted against veterans."

Congressmen, already sensitive about this year's elections, are worried sick about the recent vote on housing for veterans, especially the vote on subsidies which would have permitted low-cost homes at a price-range which veterans could afford.

This worry was why congress ducked a roll-call vote. If each congressman had been forced to stand up and be counted, it would have been political suicide for some.

The Democrats, despite a plea from President Truman himself, plus telegrams from Bob Hannegan, split ranks. Here are the Democrats who in the future will be labeled "VAVH" (voted against veterans' housing) in this important test vote: Barden, N. C.; Brown, Ga.; Camp, Ga.; Colmer, Miss.; Cox, Ga.; Cravens, Ark.; Doughton, N. C.; Durham, N. C.; Earthman, Tenn.; Ervin, N. C.; Gathings, Ark.; Gibson, Ga.; Hare, S. C.; Lanham, Texas; McMillan, S. C.; Manasco, Ala.; May, Ky.; Mills, Ark.; Murdock, Ariz.; Murray, Tenn.; Pacen, Ga.; Page, Texas; Riley, S. C.; Roe, Md.; Russell, Texas; Slaughter, Mo.; Smith, Va.; Sumners, Texas; Tarver, Ga.; Vinson, Ga.; Whitten, Miss.; Whittington, Miss.

NYE'S RESIDENCE

STEEL HEADACHE

One of the biggest reconversion headaches is lack of steel. Hundreds of smaller firms, including Henry Kaiser's new auto company, can't get steel, while strike-struck General Motors was gorged with it. Recently General Motors officials traveled to Washington, wangled a promise from OPAdministrator Jack Small that he would not confiscate the thousands of tons of strategic materials which General Motors is hoarding. Small has cracked down on smaller companies hoarding nylons, but General Motors appears too big to touch.

CAPITAL CHAFF

Democrats were wrangling last week about the right of Chicago's Representative Sabath to be heard as much as Mississippi's Representative John Rankin. Meanwhile, GOP Leader Joe Martin went over to Democrat Mike Monroney of Oklahoma and said: "Mike, the next time you Democrats get into a scrap like this and it comes to a vote, we're just going to vote 'present' and let you Democrats fight it out yourselves." . . . Atlanta's new congresswoman, Mrs. Helen Douglas Mankin, has been assiduously cultivated by the Georgia delegation—with long visits on the floor of the house even from the two Georgia senators—George and Russel. But the first chance she got she voted against Rankin. . . . North Carolina's Chairman Bob Doughton of the house ways and means committee not only believes that people should continue paying the wartime excess-tax rates on luxuries such as furs, but also that children should continue paying the wartime tax on movie tickets. "After all," says Doughton, "kids don't have to go to the movies—they're a luxury."

VIGOROUS LOBBYING

Capitol Hill today is more besieged by lobbyists than at any time in years. Big utility lobbyists are working against any increase of federal power, even passing out nylons to congressmen's wives to win votes. The American Legion is buttonholing senators in favor of military conscription, and the railroad lobbyists are pulling wires in favor of the Bulwinkle bill which exempt the railroads from anti-trust suits

Sportlight by GRANTLAND RICE

SOME earnest and able compiler of facts and figures has estimated there are over 30 million citizens young and old, male and female, who are directly or indirectly interested in baseball.

Grantland Rice

I believe these figures are on the short side. We have 22 million high school kids for a starter, and most of these follow baseball, in one way or another. The range is from 8 to 80 years, and this includes those who play at the game, see the games, follow the box scores and the standings in the daily newspapers or hear games over the radio. My estimate would be 40 million, including the fanatics and the only mildly interested.

This is only a guess. But that many through newspaper and radio must follow a world series.

Many or most of the regulars have their favorite ball players. They may dig back into the past, or they may pick a few from the modern library. The leading favorite in the game's long history has been Babe Ruth.

Proof here is simple. Babe has gone into such cities as Philadelphia and Boston when they were trailing and drawing less than a thousand at home games. But when the Babe came to town they had to call police reserves to the scene.

Next to Ruth we'd have Ty Cobb and after Ty Cobb there would be Honus Wagner. Among those of more recent date, there are four who belong among the rafters of the roof—Pepper Martin, Dizzy Dean, Carl Hubbell and Bob Feller. And you can't leave out Hank Greenberg.

Pepper Martin, one of the greatest hustlers baseball ever knew, was everybody's favorite, wherever he played. You got the idea that he was willing and ready to break a neck or a leg to get where he was headed for, and you were usually right.

The 1946 Favorites

Who will carry most of the public favor from city to city through 1946? In Boston the leading candidates at this spot are Ted Williams and Dave Ferriss. Among the Yankees you will find Bill Dickey, Joe DiMaggio and Joe Gordon—with Phil Rizzuto close up. Stirnweiss will be another. Terry Moore and Marty Marion will lead the Cardinals, who have several other candidates.

Hank Greenberg and Al Newhouser will head the cast for the Tiger zoo. For the Giants you'll find Mel Ott and Johnny Mize in front when the season opens.

What about the Dodgers? In this dizzy land of Bumdom they change with startling rapidity from day to day. Dixie Walker has been the civic nomination, or the peepul's choice for some years. Whether Dixie will retain the affections of the nation's most turbulent and tempestuous baseball crowds remains to be seen. If anything happens to Dixie, or if it happens to be untrue what they say about Dixie, an early nomination is Peewee Reese.

The Cleveland situation is simple. The Indian's contribution to the favorite class will be one Robert Feller who will lure out the multitudes in fancy numbers at each start. What about the Cubs? Andy Pafko will be one of them and so will Phil Cavarretta and Hank Borowy. The able veteran Stan Hack will also get some votes.

At times it is hard to tell just what qualities are needed to make some ball player the crowd's favorite. Hustle is always one of the main points. The populace likes to see the athlete giving all he has. Home-run hitters always have a strong call. So do strike-out pitchers. Good people who are there in the clutch or pinch also harvest their share of fanville's affection.

The All-Time Best

Who have been my ten favorite ball players? It doesn't matter much, but here they go — Babe Ruth, Ty Cobb, Joe Jackson, Tris Speaker, Hans Wagner, Dizzy Dean, Pepper Martin, Rube Waddell, Christy Mathewson, Pete Alexander. Plus Walter Johnson. Old Barneys pitching motion and the ball you couldn't follow were still something to look at. Carl Hubbell also belongs in this group. So does Bill Dickey. Ten isn't enough. As an artist, Hal Chase has no equal.

Just what favorite crop the new season will give us is in the so-called laps of the gods. There is time enough later on to take this up.

Bow and Arrow Records

Every record improves in sport and archery has made a big advance since the days of the Sioux and the Apaches, the Iroquois and the Mohicans. Their range was rarely beyond 200 yards. But in 1941 Curtis Hill of Dayton, Ohio, set a new mark at 614 yards, 6 inches—a new record for what is known as "free flight shooting." Hill's record for the regular flight shooting, according to Frank Menke's book, is 517 yards, one foot.

Turn On The Heat...

FOR WARMTH . . . FOR RELIEF FROM PAIN!

Every Home Needs G-E Heat Lamps and G-E Drying Lamps . . .

These lamp bulbs give out infrared rays for two purposes: heat for pain relief and heat for warmth. They can cause no sunburn because they produce no ultra-violet.

They're safe to use—for anything from thawing out pipes and keeping the baby warm, to drying out nail polish.

Like the sun, the infrared radiation from G-E Heat Lamps penetrates the skin. You will benefit more from this penetrating heat than from the surface heat of non-luminous sources such as hot water bottles and heating pads.

Learn to relax under the warming rays of the G-E Heat Lamps. When you end up a busy day with a stiff neck, a case of charley horse or a stuffy head, turn on the good old G-E Heat Lamps—and boy, does it feel wonderful!

PUT A G-E HEAT LAMP IN ANY HOUSEHOLD SOCKET

G-E Heat and Drying Lamps have built-in reflector type bulbs which make them units in themselves. The sealed-in reflector will not tarnish or become dirty.
No expensive fixtures are necessary. They may be screwed into standard sockets, lamp or ceiling fixture, and directed to the spot where you want heat.

—You'll find a hundred uses for a G-E Heat Lamp in your home!—

HANG ONTO YOUR HAT; IT'S WINDY!

North Iowa Had 58 Mile Per Hour "Breeze"

North Iowa had one of the strongest winds last Wednesday recorded for some time.

The wind blew steadily all day and increased in velocity late in the afternoon and night.

The wind guage at the Mason City airport recorded a steady wind at 57-58 miles per hours with wind-gusts reaching over 60 miles per hour. There was no rain with the wind.

Quite a bit of damage was was done to Central States and R. E. A. electric lines and to telephone lines in the county which went down when large branches from trees fell over the lines. All electric and telephone crews in the county worked all night to repair the damage.

Klemme was without electric service for several hours Wednesday night when branches of trees broke down power lines.

In some of the towns the heavy wind broke in plate glass windows. No damage was done in Klemme.

SPRING SEEDING MOSTLY FINISHED IN OUR COUNTY

With favorable weather the past week, many Hancock county farmers completed their seeding and spring plowing got under way for corn and beans.

Most farmers say that the season is about 15 days earlier than usual this year and that the fields are working up in fine condition.

Fruit growers are somewhat alarmed, however, for fear that the fruit buds are advancing too rapidly and may be damaged by a possible April freeze.

HANCOCK COUNTY FARM SELLS FOR $245 PER ACRE

Everett Weiland sold his 116-acre farm northeast of Garner to Mr. and Mrs. Milford Johnson of Renwick. Possession will be given March 1, 1947.

Consideration was reported at $245 per acre, which is one of the highest prices paid for farm land in Hancock County for some time. However, the farm is well located and well improved and the ground is very fertile.

Dan Green of Corwith came Monday to assist his son William Green with spring work on the farm. Dan had just returned a few days ago from Jacksonville, Texas, where he was called by the serious illness of his brother. His brother was greatly improved and is recuperating at a santitarium.

COUNTY BOARD HIRES NURSE

COUNTY HEALTH NURSE BEGINS DUTIES JULY 1ST

At their meeting last Tuesday the Hancock County Board of Supervisors voted to employ a County Health Nurse to begin work July 1st, 1946.

The board appropriated and set aside a budget of $1,020.00 to finance the salary and administrative expenses for the last half of the fiscal year ending December 31st.

Dr. Johnson of the State Health Department met with the board to explain the plan.

For some time there has been a demand for a Health Nurse in this county and the action of the Board will meet with the approval of a great many who are interested in having a public nurse.

BOARD REJECTED BIDS ON REMODELING OF HANCOCK COUNTY HOME

The Hancock County Board of Supervisors rejected all bids at the letting held at the Court House in Garner last week on the remodeling of the Hancock County Home near Duncan.

The bid was in the sum of $16,400, which was approximately $6,000 over the architect's and engineer's estimate on the proposed remodeling. Thorwald Thorson, Forest City architect drew up the plans and specifications for the work.

The mater of remodeling has been tabled for the present and no immediate work will be done at the Home.

Four Grandsons Entertained At Dinner Saturday Evening

Mr. and Mrs. Edw. J. Schaefer entertained four grandsons at a dinner at their home Saturday evening in honor of Donald Schaefer, who is home on a 30 day furlough from the Navy base at Newton, Florida. Donald's three brothers, Merle, Eugene and Calvin were also present and it was the first time in over 4 years that the four brothers had eaten a meal together. Three of the brothers, Donald, Eugene and Merle, were all in the Navy. Merle and Calvin were recently given an honorable discharge.

Donald will report for duty at Norfolk, Virginia, after concluding his furlough.

DRUNK DRIVER GETS 90 DAYS IN COUNTY JAIL

Johnny Bergstad of Lake Mills was sentenced to 90 days in the Winnebago county jail on a charge of operating a motor vehicle on a highway while in an intoxicated condition. He was arraigned on the information filed by Hancock County Attorney Henry C. Meyer before Judge Tom Boynton of Forest City. Bergstad was arrested by highway patrolmen on Highway 69 2 miles northwest of Garner.

SAYS LAND PRICES GETTING TOO HIGH

Anderson Also Sees Subsequent Collapse

Washington—Secretary of Agriculture Anderson declared today that continuing advances in prices of farm real estate threaten to create a disastrous post-war land boom and a subsequent collapse.

He gave this warning in a statement commenting on a report of the bureau of agricultural economics that advances in prices of farm land, started early in the war, have not yet halted.

The bureau said farm real estate values rose 13 per cent during the year ended March 1 and 4 per cent more during the last 4 months. Values were said to average 71 per cent above the 1935-39 level.

Comparing the present trend with the real estate boom after World War I, Anderson said the latter "teaches us that runaway land prices can bring suffering to unfortunate farmers who lose their land and investors who lose their life savings.

"It reveals the folly," he added, "of valuing land on the basis of a few boom years."

Anderson said also that inflated farm prices also deny war veterans "their rights to security and opportunity in agriculture." He said few veterans can afford to take the risks involved in current high prices for land, and that continued speculative up-bidding of farm values will only increase the difficulties they face in getting established.

The bureau reported also that an increasing number of farms are being resold after a short period of ownership, indicating greater speculative activity.

Average farm land values for the country were said to be within 1-6th of the 1920 inflationary peak. And in 15 states they were said to be above the 1920 peak.

4-H LEADERS STUDY SIMPLE DESSERTS

Using the 80% extraction flour slightly changes the amount of milk used in a plain cake recipe, Mrs. Helen Morling stated at the 4-H Leaders' Training School on April 3rd at Britt. The liquid may vary from 7-8 cup to 1 1-8 cup to two cups of flour. She said homemakers will need to test out each purchase of flour to obtain the best results.

Millers state that infestation of weavils has increased 72 per cent in enriched flour. They attribute this to the addition of riboflavin. Avoid storing large quantities of flour, Mrs. Morling warned.

The making of a plain cake, oatmeal cookies and a cherry roly poly were demonstrated by Mrs. Morling. The 4-H leaders and three older girls attending will help their club members to make these products and other simple desserts discussed by Mrs. Morling.

The American Red Cross, in cooperation with the New York state conservation department and the U. S. foreign service, will carry on a state-wide educational forest fire prevention campaign.

FROST TUESDAY

White frost was plainly visible in this part of the state Tuesday morning.

It is feared that the frost might have damaged buds on the fruit trees, as the early mild weather the past week was setting fruit tree buds earlier than usual.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Farmers Set for Big Crop Year; Reds Plan Industrial Expansion; Peron Victory Poses Problem

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

With money cheap and goods scarce, German women dicker with Russian soldiers for clothing in Berlin black market. Despite efforts to suppress illegal trade, pressing demands for goods result in reappearance of practice.

FARMERS:
All-Out Again

In stepping up crop acreage this year in answer to government demands for increased food production, farmers are banking on the continued good growing weather of the war years and no adverse turn of the present tight labor, machinery and equipment situation.

Though falling short of government acreage goals for 16 major crops by 3 per cent, farmers plans call for planting 357½ million acres this year in comparison with 357 million in 1945 and 355 million for the 1934-'43 average

Of critical crops needed for overseas relief, wheat is expected to exceed goals while prospects for vegetable oil seeds are less favorable. Oats, peanuts, tobacco and rice are also expected to surpass goals with corn, hay, sorghums, barley potatoes, sugar beets, dry beans and peas falling short.

With the indicated acreage of corn down from last year and only oats of all the feed grains expected to top goals, additional reductions in livestock feeding through 1947 were forecast.

U S Drinking Heavy

Americans spent an average of $58 for every man, woman and child in the country on alcoholic drinks in 1945 as consumption reached 190 million gallons, 14 per cent more than the previous year As a result of continued high taxes, the federal government collected about 2½ billion dollars on total sales of almost 8 billion dollars, with the states taking another half billion

UNO:
Back Iran

Maintaining its firm position against encroachment on the sovereignty of small nations, the U S. pressed for UNO's consideration of Iran's complaint against Russian occupation of the country in the face of Soviet opposition

Evidencing no inclination to back down on its strong statement that it could not remain indifferent to Russian activities in Iran the U S. bucked the Reds' request for a postponement of Iran's complaint because of their professed inability to assemble pertinent data in time for the hearing. By opposing the Russian demand, the U S. substantiated reports from Teheran that this country had pledged Iran to back its rights under the UNO charter.

Iran's complaint against Russia was the second filed since UNO got underway, Teheran having previously protested against Red support of an autonomous movement in Azerbaijan province. Basis of the second complaint, Russia's occupation of Iran was seen as a move to exert pressure for obtaining oil concessions in the northern half of the country adjoining the Red petroleum fields around Baku.

LABOR BILL:
Senate Version

Minus the stringent restrictions of the house-approved Case bill but providing for free movement of perishable farm goods to market or processing centers without interference. the senate's education and labor committee drew up its own labor measure for consideration of the upper chamber

Wheras the Case bill had called for 30-day cooling off periods and creation of a labor management board to investigate disputes, the senate measure would establish an independent mediation board designed to avert strikes by conciliating differences between workers and employers.

While the Case bill would make unions liable for contract violations and outlaw inter-union boycotts of employers engaged in disputes, the senate measure would impose fines and imprisonment upon anyone resorting to violence and intimidation in seeking to stop truckers from hauling perishables to their destination. Sponsored by Senator Aiken (Rep. Vt. the provision was opposed by a committee minority which charged discrimination against non-farm carriers

RUSSIA:
Industrial Plan

Looking not only to the rebuilding of its war-shattered economy but also to the further development of the country Russia proclaimed a new five-year-plan affecting industry, housing, education and research.

For industry, Russia plans a three to four-fold increase in automobile production; one and one-half boost in chemical output, and a 17 per cent raise in food processing. In addition iron production would be stepped up to 19 million tons annually, steel, 25 million tons; coal, 250 million tons; oil, 35 million tons and electric power, 85 billion kilowatt hours

Over 3¼ billion dollars are scheduled to be spent on housing over the five-year period and prewar expenditures for education and culture would be increased two and one-quarter times to over 13¼ billion dollars

Substantial sums also were reserved for scientific research, including the release and ultilization of atomic energy and weather forecasting.

DIPLOMACY:
U. S. Embarrassed

Juan Domingo Peron's smashing victory in Argentine's presidential election has greatly complicated the U S s diplomatic position in South America since this country not only openly opposed his candidacy but also repeatedly insisted that it could not sign any treaty with a government headed by him

Second-guessers were quick to jump on the state department's back for underestimating Peron's strength among the working classes and farmers and going out wholehog for the opposition. The workers idolize Peron for having pushed legislation for raising wages, establishing social security and assuring vacations with pay, while the farmers are in sympathy with his agrarian reforms.

Now seated firmly in the saddle, Peron could relieve U S. embarrassment by acting against the Nazi industrialists and agents he is accused of harboring. While Britain has gone along with the U. S. in diplomatic protests against Fascist penetrations in Argentine, observers believe London could not be expected to apply pressure against Peron because of Britain's dependence upon the South American nation for wheat and meat.

JAPAN:
Production

Severely crimped by U. S. bombings through the war, Japanese industry is making a slow but steady recovery under American military direction despite difficulties created by reduction of imports of material, damaged plants and a riddled transport system.

Showing a willingness to rebuild their once thriving economic machine in accordance with democratic principles laid down by General MacArthur, the Japanese have made noteworthy progress in reconverting war production facilities to peacetime output of farm machinery, household utensils, marine engines and parts for motor trucks. At the same time, there has been an increase in the manufacture of consumer goods from stocks of raw material on hand.

In line with government encouragement, labor unions have been springing up, especially in manufacturing, transportation and coal mining. While workers have been pressing for better conditions and pay, no strikes have been called.

Food

While the Japanese production outlook improved, the immediate food situation caused grave concern, leading General MacArthur to recommend monthly imports of 200,000 tons of wheat, rice and other commodities to avert starvation.

Much of the country's food trouble has been attributed to farmers' withholding of substantial rice tonnage from the market. On top of the November harvest being one of the worst in years because of climatic conditions, producers have shipped only 52 per cent of the rice demanded by the government for urban centers.

Besides hanging onto their rice, farmers have withheld their meager supplies of vegetables caused by diversion of acreage to rice last year. Farmers have also been getting substantial amounts of seafood because fishermen have gone to the rural areas to trade their catch for more rice.

FRENCH BLUEBEARD:
Waves Flag

Charged with committing 26 murders for gain during the German occupation, Marcel Petiot went on trial in Paris, France, insisting that he had killed 63—not 26—persons because they were traitors to the cause of liberation.

In pressing its case, the prosecution charged that Petiot had lured his victims to his home on promise of rustling them out of Nazi-occupied France, but then had slain them to steal their money and jewels. Mangled corpses, human skeletons and charred bones were found in his residence, along with rotted bodies in a lime pit in his garden.

With luggage of his victims piled high in the courtroom, the accused Bluebeard indignantly denied killing for gain. Waving the flag, he said victims included gestapo men, French police spies and informers.

PEARL HARBOR:
Late Testimony

In his long sought testimony to the congressional Pearl Harbor investigating committee, former Secretary of War Henry Stimson revealed that President Roosevelt's cabinet had overruled his proposal for attacking Japan first late in November, 1941, and rather decided upon the dispatch of a secret appeal to the mikado.

Submitting a written statement to the committee because of inability to personally testify on account of illness, Stimson said that he had counselled action after learning of Japanese movements southward off the Asiatic coast. High officials in Washington were convinced that Japanese expansion to the south threatened the Philippines and aggression against British and Dutch holdings constituted a menace to U S. security, he added

Stimson also disclosed that the U. S. had considered proposing a three-month diplomatic truce to the Japanese late in 1941 on condition that the Nipponese would pull out of China. While the truce might have afforded additional time for negotiation, Stimson said he feared the Japs would have rejected it because of its stringent demands

NATIONAL INCOME:

Total income payments to individuals set an all-time high in 1945, with a total of $160,749,000,000, according to the Alexander Hamilton institute. This was an increase of 2.5 per cent over 1944.

Salaries and wages in 1945 totaled $110,162,000,000; somewhat under the 1944 figure of $111,734,000,000. However, a comparison of the 1945 figure with that of $45,658,000,000 for salaries and wages in 1939 indicate that the war years brought about a 141 per cent increase

Will Air Gripes to Ease G.I. Lot

Critics of the army's so-called "caste system' will be given the opportunity to express their convictions on military life soon before a special civilian board of former enlisted men and officers headed by Lt. Gen. James Doolittle.

Witnesses will include enlisted men and officers both in and out of the army, and non-military persons operation in the army

The subject of inquiry will be relationships between officers and enlisted men both on and off duty. In establishing the board, Secretary of War Patterson requested its members particularly to look into such questions as housing, clothing, living conditions, and recreational facilities of enlisted men and women compared with officers

Hoover Hears Call To Help Feed Hungry

Cites Great Need for Food Grains Overseas; Asks Americans to Pull in Belts, Invite 'Invisible Guests' to Their Tables.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The speed with which the American people have run away from the war is incredible. Like the lazy workman who drops his hammer and leaps for the dinner pail at the first toot of noon, we began a stampede for the dining table on V-J Day.

Stampedes always make trouble for someone. Many hundreds of people will starve as a result, and heaven only knows how the cause of democracy throughout the world may suffer.

We could not foretell, but we could have made allowance for possible crop failures. They were catastrophic in many countries. We could have pursued a different food policy at home. We shook with fear lest there would be surpluses, we tried to get the people to eat up their stored supplies and counselled restrictions on food production to prevent a glutted market, especially in eggs and poultry. And how we ate!

That is why, a few days ago, we hailed back Herbert Hoover into service. He said he had promised his family for years to go fishing with them and he had only got started when he heard that ominous phrase on the telephone, "White House calling." He may have been reluctant to leave the enticing, fish-filled Florida waters but there is no doubt that it was a keen satisfaction to him to get back into harness again, especially since he was called upon to do a job he knew he could do well. Whatever the public that snowed him under in the 1932 elections may have said and felt at that time, however glad the Republicans were to edge him out of politics, there were few who would deny that he was a success at feeding the hungry during and after World War I.

Ex-President Inspires Press

It was really inspiring to hear him. Not that Mr. Hoover could ever pull you out of your seat with frenetic oratory or raise your emotions to a fever heat with his personality. It was, indeed, the matter-of-fact, almost prosaic way in which he made his appeal that gave it weight. We were gathered in a small hotel "parlor." It was crowded We overflowed the chairs and sat on tables and in the window niches Many of us couldn't see him. Most of the time I could catch only a glimpse of one fold in his generous, pink neck.

He had the facts and the figures all right — nine million tons of grain alone were needed to prevent starvation. At present there was only enough good grain in sight to make up 60 per cent of the need, etc. But he gave us more than facts as he explained what America must do and what he was sure Americans would do. He gave us faith.

He tossed the idea of rationing with cards out of the window without even a gesture. He said the American people would ration themselves, said they would have done it in the war that way too.

And when reporters asked questions with political implications he refused even to discuss that phase of the subject. He was talking about human beings, he said, about saving lives. Then, near the close of the interview, he said in the same matter-of-fact tone, "There is one message I would like to give to the households of America." There was a long pause. Finally he spoke—looking at nobody, as is his habit—"I would like to have them entertain at their tables an invisible guest."

And so the old engineer, so often accused of having a heart of wood, the man of slide-rule and logarithms, painted a deeply moving picture in the simplest of words and in the simplest of ways. I left the interview feeling sure that however America had been stuffing itself since the end of the fighting (we have run up the biggest food bill in history) we would be willing to conserve enough so that Mr. Hoover's invisible guests wouldn't leave our tables hungry.

Semantics—Aid to Strike Settlements

When President Truman, at a recent White House press and radio conference, talked about the hundreds of labor disputes which were settled by conciliation without strikes and which never made the headlines, I couldn't help thinking of a conversation I had with Maj. Charles Estes, one of the labor department's anonymous heroes of these bloodless and successful encounters.

Estes has what it takes to be a conciliator and in his case it includes, along with a keen sensitivity to the human side of all relationships among workers and employers, a keen sense for the nice use of words. Indeed, semantics (the science of meanings, as contrasted with phonetics, the science of sounds) is his hobby.

"The ultimate goal of the conciliation service of the labor department is not merely the settlement of disputes but the prevention of disputes," said Major Estes the other day. And then he went on to expand on his thesis that the crux of labor - management relations is human adjustment, the adjustment of one person to another.

The main trouble, he says, is poor communication, which is poor for three reasons: 1, poor reception, or imperfect listening and perception; 2, poor digestion, or inaccurate interpretation and assimilation of what is read or heard; and 3, poor transmission, or inadequate use of speech and language.

Estes can go on for hours on that subject and will, at the drop of a hat. In fact, once when, interested though I was, I had to tear myself away for a pressing engagement, I could only do so after convincing him that I was not antisemantic. I wish I had space to develop his ideas for they represent a practical system which he and his colleagues have demonstrated in "hundreds" of successes as the President put it.

Like most successful systems, the conciliation service's methods are based on a solid foundation of long, hard preparation and represent the concentrated ounce of prophylactic procedure that is worth a pound of exhausting arbitration, administered after the patient is already ill.

RUSSIA WAR TALK

WASHINGTON. — It's no secret that there's been considerable talk among the brass hats in the Pentagon building about war with Russia. Some of this comes from men who honestly feel war is inevitable and favor getting it over with right now. Others chiefly favor a little war talk because of its help in passing military conscription.

However, there can be no doubt about the views of the top military man in the war department—Gen. Dwight Eisenhower.

Two or three weeks ago, Eisenhower was attending a Washington dinner party when people began to talk about war with Russia. Irked by the conversation, he remarked that he was "amazed that so many people should suddenly be seriously considering the idea of war with Russia."

Then the chief of staff proceeded to give a pointed lecture on the foolishness of this war talk, which can be briefly summarized as follows:

"People who want war should only think a few minutes about the sacrifice Russia has made in the past five years — a loss of life and property so large we cannot conceive of it. A people who have suffered such a loss will not turn tail before any military force in the world today. But at the same time they will not go out and look for another war.

"And neither will we. This country is no more anxious to go to war with Russia. Our losses are great, and we want no more. Certainly the American people do not want to get involved in a war in which there can be no end but the destruction of the greater part of the world.

"We have nothing to gain to start with, and would have nothing left when it is over."

ANTI-HOUSING LOBBY

Most powerful lobby since the war threw itself into the battle to defeat the Wyatt housing program for veterans. Every congressman received wires, phone calls, letters from builders, lumber dealers, real estate men.

Many telegrams were phony, as several congressmen discovered when they tried to answer them. Others were signed with the names of people who later assured members of congress that they had not seen or sent the wires. These tactics, of course, have been used before.

The prize telegram, however, was one sent to all congressmen from the St. Paul-Minneapolis area by the Northwestern Flooring and Lumber company, of which V. H. Alberts is president.

After urging that the veterans' housing program be defeated, the lumber company had the gall to add:

"Please also exert your efforts to oppose a standing vote on these issues."

NO TRUMAN ROAD

Folks back in Jackson county, Mo., usually are willing to go the limit for any honor to their native son, Harry Truman. But a recent proposal to change the name of Van Horn road, an important traffic artery named after an early county pioneer, met with a storm of protest. Some of the rural citizens balked at stealing one person's tombstone to honor another.

Van Horn road was named after Col. R. T. Van Horn, who settled in the county in 1855 when Kansas City's population was about 455. He became mayor of Kansas City, was active in Missouri politics, and bought the county's first newspaper, later the Kansas City Journal, now defunct.

WALLACE AND ICKES

Henry Wallace and Harold Ickes, although agreeing on basic political ideals, have never been warm friends. For 13 long years they served in the same cabinet, but part of the time they fought like cat and dog over who was to run the forest service and the soil conservation service.

Ickes' exit from the Truman cabinet has left Wallace as the last of the original Roosevelt New Dealers, and the only cabinet member with a powerful hold on independent voters. An original Republican — as was Ickes — Wallace is strong with the Negro voters, labor, and the independent liberals.

As a result, Wallace's position inside the administration is better than ever. Truman and Bob Hannegan both are anxious to retain at least one all-out New Dealer. Wallace is their man.

SOUTHERN LABOR DRIVE

One of the most important labor decisions since the CIO broke away from the AFL has just been taken.

Phil Murray, head of the CIO, has decided to pour one million dollars into the greatest union organizing drive the south has ever seen. In a few weeks, CIO organizers by the hundreds will begin moving into Georgia, Florida, Mississippi, Alabama, Tennessee, and the Carolinas, intent on organizing all unorganized labor, both Negro and white.

War Souvenirs To Take Lives For Long Time

GREELEY, COLO. — Guns and other souvenir weapons brought back to their homes by G.I.s will be killing United States citizens for the next 20 years, G. E. Damon of Colorado state college of education believes. Damon is a firearms expert.

Basing his prediction on studies he has conducted on souvenir enemy weapons, Damon believes the average American's lack of knowledge of dangerous weapons and carelessness with firearms will take many lives in the future.

Recently a 14-year-old boy came to Damon with a shotgun and asked how to open it. The boy's father had given him the gun but had neglected to instruct the lad in its use.

One of the most dangerous weapons is also one of the most popular to come from Europe. It is the Walther P-38 pistol. The army has records of many hundreds of cases of wounds inflicted on the person who uses the pistol, Damon said.

The locking lugs in Japanese rifles are made of metal that is too soft in some cases and too brittle in others, he said. They can't stand much strain and consequently are dangerous even if handled by "experts." Under no conditions should American - made ammunition be used in captured arms.

The best way to insure safety is to keep enemy weapons only as souvenirs and, in most cases, never use them, he said.

urch Ships Heifers to Devastated Areas

iately 1,000 heifers from States have been shipped rstated areas of Europe er project committee of of the Brethren in order fresh milk for children ild depleted herds.

committee was set up , contributions of live-increased steadily, and envision sending more animals abroad. Famiam, France, Greece, Poland have received most of the donated heifers. Cattle are donated by many people who are not members of the Church of the Brethren. In January 171 heifers were sent to Czecho-slovakia.

Usually a group of farmers band together, under Brethren or other leadership, and provide a shipment of four or more animals. The heifer project committee in Nappanee, Ind., is notified and takes care of the final arrangements. The overseas shipping of the donated animals is handled by the UNRRA.

PRACTICAL FARM BUILDINGS

Farm Sheep Barn

By W. J. Dryden, WNU Farm Editor.

The principal requirements of sheep barns or sheds are good ventilation and dryness, freedom from drafts and good lighting. A shed with an open front to the south makes a very satisfactory sheep shed for mild climates. By placing windows in the front it will prove suitable for any type of climate or any condition.

In planning the building, convenience in feeding and herding must be considered, both in regard to plans and to location. Sixteen square feet of floor space is required for each breeding ewe, while half that amount will be sufficient for a feeder lamb.

Suitable equipment, conveniently arranged, saves time, labor and feed in the production of sheep and lambs. Most of the equipment can be built at small expense. All equipment should be so designed that any injury to the sheep or their wool will be prevented.

The sheep shed or barn should be so located that there will be sufficient suitable land for additions to be made to the shed. One continuous barn might prove a labor saver. It might be advisable, where large production is undertaken, to place a feed building in the center or at either end of the sheep barn.

If the sheep shed or barn is located near a larger building or wind-break, additional warmth and shelter will be provided. The earth under the floor, or the earth floor, is used, and foundation should be about six inches higher than the surrounding ground to prevent surface water from draining into the building.

The length of the grazing season varies from one section of the country to another. Usually a flock may find good grazing for about six months or more annually.

Generally sheep require inexpensive buildings and equipment. If the lambs are born in the late spring, only a shed or a very inexpensive barn is needed. The chief requirements are shelter from the wind and snow or rain and a clean, dry place to lie down.

A commercial farm flock may consist of as few as 30 ewes. The production of "hot-house" lambs is highly specialized and requires a definite kind of ewe flock, good barns, careful management and heavy feeding. A "hot-house" lamb is born between September 1 and January 1. These lambs are slaughtered when they weigh from 40 to 50 pounds live weight and range from 6 to 10 weeks of age. Only those who have had considerable experience should engage in this type of production—and then only when excellent buildings are available.

Among the various types of equipment required for raising sheep is a water trough with a guard to keep the sheep out; suitable winged panels for lambing pens; lamb creep—these are pens placed in the shed, barn or elsewhere with a small door which keeps the ewes out. Plenty of grain is placed in these lamb creeps for the lambs. Grain troughs for the lambs should be provided. Light movable racks for feeding in the field are advisable.

Shortage of Farm Labor Unknown to Big Harvey Family

Western Maryland claims one of America's biggest farming families and points to Mr. and Mrs. Earl K. Harvey Sr., and their 11 children, 9 boys and 2 girls. While others complained about a farm labor shortage the past few years, the Harveys went right on producing record crops on their 180-acre farm.

The eldest of the children is Marshall Harvey, now 25, who served in the army. As a lad he helped form a 4-H club and is now "assistant supervisor."

Next is Lucile, 23, who was active in the 4-H club until she reached the age limit of 21. She is now married, but still helps to hoe the Harvey potatoes.

Then there is Calvin, who graduated from the 4-H club when he reached the age of 21 last January. Selective service classified him 2-C, giving him an agricultural worker's deferment. He and his father supervise the 180-acre farm, the 35 cattle, and the 45 tons of shelled peas the land produced last summer.

Potatoes for Fanny Mae.

The next in this pastoral family is Fanny Mae, 20. Potatoes are her forte. Recently the University of Maryland experimental station, cooperating with the United States department of agriculture, developed a new potato in Garrett county. At elaborate ceremonies here, it was christened the "Potomac," and Fanny Mae did the christening.

Then comes Freddie, 17. Besides being president of the "Harvey 4-H club" at near-by North Glade, where the farm is located, he is president of the Future Farmers of America chapter at Oakland high school.

"But this is not because of numpers alone," he pointed out.

Then there is Earl Jr., 16, also an exuberant agriculturist, 4-H member, and student at Oakland high school.

Next comes Robert, 14. Robert bought a 4-H club calf, nursed it along, took it to the Pittsburgh live stock show with Joseph Steger, assistant county agent, recently, and came away with fourth prize. He was competing with boys and girls from Ohio, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Maryland.

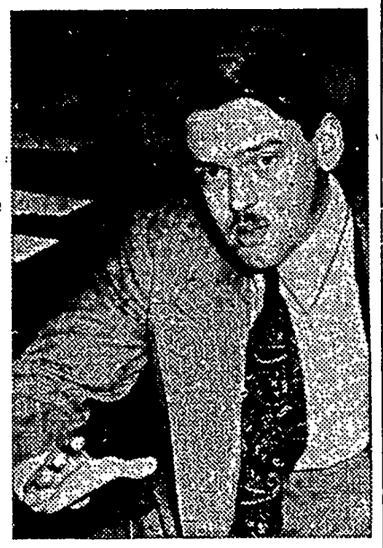
Ernest, the "4-H Baby."

Then there is Guy, 13. Not to be outdone by Robert, Guy also raised a calf and took it to the Pittsburgh show. It weighed 870 pounds, captured sixth place in the lightweight class, and was bought on the spot at 26 cents a pound. Guy figured he cleared "about $90" on the transaction, while Robert made $119 profit.

Then there is Ernest. Ernest is 10, which is just old enough for him to be called the "4-H baby." He is studying agriculture and the whys and wherefores of cattle during school hours, like Freddie, Earl Jr., Robert and Guy, and before them Marshall, Calvin, Lucile and Fanny Mae.

And then there is Arthur, who is eight. Arthur definitely leans toward pptatoes. He took it very hard when much of the Harvey crop froze in the ground last year.

And then the bottom rung of this farming ladder is Douglas. Douglas is three and has yet to prove himself, but it was indicated that he is a natural peasheller. An apprentice by birth, he expects to grow by example and observation.



AVC CHOICE . . . Charles G. Bolte, 25, who lost a leg at El Alamein while serving with the British, is practically assured of being named president of the American Veterans' committee, an organization of World War II veterans, when the first convention is held in Des Moines in June.

Soil Conservation Continuance Urged By Federal Agency

WASHINGTON. — The fertility of American land declined seriously during the war, according to the agricultural adjustment agency, which is urging farmers to return to "conservation type" farming. Millions of acres of land were overcropped and over-grazed during the war to meet unprecedented demands for food products.

JIM AND JIM . . . Jimmy Corriden, Brooklyn Dodgers' coach, is shown with his son, Jimmy Jr., who is trying for an outfield berth with the Dodgers. The lad plays center field.

"Off We Go" AVIATION NOTES

WORLD AVIATION FAIR

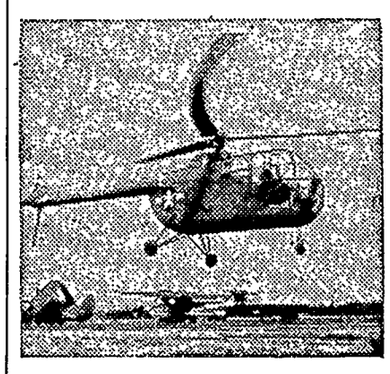
The first postwar international aircraft trade exposition and flight demonstration will be held at Offutt field, Fort Crook, near Omaha, from July 21 to 28 and will be known as the World's Fair of Aviation.

Preliminary plans are based on an attendance of 250,000 persons and the expectation that at least 2,000 light planes will be flown to Omaha for the event. Both the AAF and the navy will participate in the flight events. Special performance exhibitions will include both military and civil aircraft.

The fair will be managed by Steadham Acker of Birmingham, well known as a director of air shows at Birmingham, Newark and Denver, and program director for the national aviation clinic at Oklahoma City.

Must Have Air Markers.

It is apparent that the purpose of air markers cannot be achieved if there are only a few widely scattered throughout the country. Flyers may become lost in any locality. Every city, town and village should be air marked. The Civil Aeronautics administration will be glad to assist regional, state or local officials in planning air marking programs or individual markers.



WHATISIT . . . The first aircraft to receive an army number in 1946 was the XR-9B, a new helicopter, which is undergoing flight tests at Wright field, Ohio.

COYOTE HUNTING

"Ted Hagele and Al Binder were hosts to Minnesota hunters who came in to hunt coyotes by plane. Included in the party were Marcellus King, Donald Rugg and Carl Elam of Austin, Minn.; Allen Goetzinger of Hollandale, Minn., and Carl Benhoff of Gettysburg. In the first hour and a half, the sportsmen bagged three coyotes." — Pioneer, Bowdle, S. D. They used a Piper cub.

A Safe Crash Landing.

Through the cool headedness of Sam Sornborger of Arcadia, Calif., in crash-landing a plane, he and his brother Jeff, who was taking his first plane ride, are well and happy. After cruising around for 15 minutes in a plane rented from the Rosemead airport, the engine suddenly went dead. Sam, who had more than 2,000 hours as pilot during the war, coolly maneuvered his plane to a smooth landing place in a wash. Which proves again that flying takes a cool head.

OLD VETERANS RETIRE

Back in 1930, Boeing built a number of 247-Ds for United Air Lines. These were the first of the two - engine low - winged transport planes. Later Pennsylvania Central used these planes, and in time they were taken over for their sturdy characteristics by the CAA as a laboratory and freight plane in Alaska. It was of interest recently when announcement came that one of these 15-year-old veterans was retired! Some of us thought they'd fly on forever.

MINOR OPERATION

What ordinarily is a minor operation—removal of a splinter from a finger had serious repercussions for Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Murrey of Kingsley. As Mrs. Murrey was removing the sliver from her husband's finger with the use of a darning needle, the house was struck by lightning. A cottonwood tree near the house was hit and split. A radio antenna carried the current to the house and to a copper pipe against which Mr. Murrey was leaning. Nearly all of the clothing was torn from Mr. and Mrs. Murrey and burns were found on their bodies where metal buttons, etc. had been melted. Shortly after the incident, Mr. Murrey did not know whether the sliver had been removed or not as his finger was badly burned by the needle.

SPRING IS HERE

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Clary of Maquoketa did not use the first robin as the sign of spring. They had a pansy bed that blossomed recently. The pansy bed was covered with straw during the winter and when the covering was removed the pansies blossomed in all their glory.

EAGLE SCOUTS

Richard and William Johnson, sons of County Extension Director and Mrs. Paul A. Johnson of Denison, have been named as Eagle Scouts in the Boy Scouts of America. It is not often that two members of the same family win the highest honor in Scouting.

A total of 45,228 children in 450 Nebraska schools received lunches daily through the U. S. department of agriculture community hot lunch program.

Japan and the New Life

Go easy, Japan, will ya? You're killing us with that contortionist act and that changing-a-warrior-into-a-turtle-dove number.

Now you've come out for a new constitution, a bill of rights, an American style declaration of independence, freedom of speech, freedom of religion, freedom of thought, freedom of the press and freedom of the Chautauqua Salute.

You renounce war as the right of the nation and you cast out "the use of threats or force in any form." And you say "the maintenance of land, sea or air forces will never again be authorized by Japan."

But we can't help asking "Are we supposed to take it in capsule or powder form, and does it taste better in orange juice?"

There's an old adage that you can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear, a baby-chick out of a buzzard or a wax figure entitled "Love and Kisses" out of a record of Bataan.

We don't know which is the most disturbing, a country that comes out of a global shindig breathing red-fire and yelling "I can lick any man in the house" or one that comes out singing "Hearts and Flowers" and with a passion for necking with the conqueror.

Plenty of people think Russia thumbing its nose at all comers is more comforting than Japan thumbing through a book of good resolutions.

Never in history has a warrior state changed faster to Old Mother Hubbard with touches of Sunbonnet Sue.

Freedom of speech, freedom of thought and freedom of religion are fine but not so fast, boys with the freedom of back-slapping, freedom of grease-balling, freedom of kow-towing and freedom of fried mush!

It is great to change voices in mid-character, but the speed is a little dazzling.

The first thing we know you will be renouncing jiu jitsu, talking back to the phone girl and speaking roughly to the cat.

You may even repudiate Japanese wrestling.

Go easy, pu-leaze! The emperor who never let anybody look down on him now operates at eye level. The potentate who never mixed with the folks now gives autographs in crowded department store elevators and prefers an escalator to the white horse. Fair warning, Nippon! Don't come out for compulsory radio crooning!

• • •

Mr. Hoover urges all housewives to discontinue fried foods to save fats. Fine! But what will the doctors tell a man to stop eating when he comes in with indigestion?

LINES IN ENVY

("Aga Khan Weighed in Gems, Gets $1,200,000."—news item.)

I sometimes am proud of my racket—
Quite often I think I'm the nerts,
I once made those uppermost brackets—
(And never complained "How this hurts!")

My friends I declare all quite hearty,
And life can be sweet, I declare.
But nobody throws me a party
And weighs me in gems extra rare!

I sometimes feel very top-doggy;
My line I announce is okay;
My path isn't any too boggy—
The stuff that I get isn't hay;
I stand pretty well, so I figure;
The angles all seem very nice;
My grip on my public gets bigger
But nobody weighs me in "ice"!

The Aga Khan has what seems to be a great racket. Once a year his people stage a great show and weigh him in diamonds, the proceeds in cash going to his coffers. The other day he tipped the scales at 243½ in Bombay and got over a million. Beyond all doubt he has a better argument than any other man on earth against reducing.

PEACE OF EXHAUSTION

The General Motors strike is over and there is much speculation on which side won. To us it looks like a tie in a fall out of bed.

The federal communications committee announces that in its forms for new applications and renewals of radio licenses it is working to "check advertising excesses," particularly with respect to exasperating commercials. What it means is that it thinks the commercials should end somewhere between the point where the program begins and where it ends.
